Your next mayor

Mann's hope

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

(The following article is the last of four that have followed Mayor Theodore D. Mann along the road from his beginnings in Boston to his unprecedented reign as the longest-serving mayor in the city's history.)

Even though he could not speak a word at the time, it was Hyman "Honey" Mannevitch, lying in the bed he would soon die in at the V.A. Hospital in West Roxbury, who convinced his eldest son, Theodore David, he should run for mayor of the City of Newton in the early 1970s.

Honey suffered from Lou Gehrig's Disease. His wife, Lillian, travelled by streetcar every day to visit him in the hospital, as did his children, Ted, Bob and Thelma. He could not communicate with them. He could only blink his eyes. But they visited him religiously nonetheless.

Honey had already sown the seeds of his son's decision. The advice he gave him — the advice that led him to run for mayor — came in bits and pieces over the decades before and after World War II.

Honey was the sort of "ward healer" the likes of which no longer exists in the modern political system. The man who dared to take on Martin Lomasney, one of the political kingpins of the early part of this century in Boston, in his first political joust, thought of politics as a vehicle for helping people.

In those days, pre- and post-depression, everybody needed help. They needed jobs, food, clothing and shelter. They met with men like Honey Mannevitch in clubs, in delicatessans and on streetcorners to plead for help. They came to him because they knew service was his stock in trade and his word was better than money in the bank.

"Accumulated wealth has never meant much to our family. That never

Plan revealed

Library price is $12 million

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The waiting is over.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann has moved the city's longstanding library dilemma out of the discussion stage by asking the Board of Aldermen to approve a series of appropriation requests aimed at starting construction on a $12 million facility at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets by 1987.

He said the project will take shape "within the framework" of Main Library Facility Committee's July 17 report, which recommended a three-story, 76,600 square foot building financed by revenue from the city's surplus property, bond issues and some private fundraising.

"The plan formulated by the committee presents a solid basis by recommending the proceeds from the sale of surplus property. This plan must be augmented with private donations, governmental grants and new local revenue sources ... in order to fulfill the mandate of avoiding impact on the operating budget," Mann said in a letter sent to aldermen over the Labor Day weekend.

NEWTON — A recent lopsided vote by the Board of Aldermen opened the door for Mayor Theodore D. Mann's library plan.

On Aug. 12, the full board voted 16-7 in support of bringing to the floor for debate a nonbinding resolution endorsing the construction of a new main library on city-owned land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets.

Although the effort failed because it could not muster the support of 18 aldermen, the narrowness of the tally showed Mann that "the votes were there" for

Ossinger suit

Judge rules for Mann

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex Superior Court judge has issued a summary judgment against Mayor Theodore Mann's former secretary's claim that her rights were violated when she was fired in 1980.

Judge J. Harold Flannery also gave Diane Ossinger another chance, before making his summary judgment official, to reassess her position and "to state a claim upon which relief may be granted."

Ossinger was fired after Newton Police charged her with stealing at least $24,000 in paychecks from the mayor over a period of two years. She was found guilty by a judge in Newton District Court and later, after attorney Thomas Troy came to her defense, vindicated by a jury in Middlesex Superior Court.

Ossinger then filed a $1 million suit against Mann for allegedly reneging on promises made when she was first hired in 1972 and for violating her civil rights.

Judge Flannery addressed three different complaints made by Ossinger, ruling against her on each one. First, he denied her contention that her firing overlooked protection she should have enjoyed under Civil Service laws. "The civil service laws do not apply to the mayor's executive secretary," Flannery stated.

The judge discounted a letter dated February 22, 1972, in which Mann promised Ossinger, "You will be subject to the same conditions and accrue the same benefits as do all full-time Civil Service employees within City Hall."

Flannery commented, "Regardless of how this language is interpreted, the mayor is $80 million plan for city's future

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann last week revealed an $80 million Capital Improvement Program (CIP) for fiscal years 1987 to 1992 which he promised would serve "as a blueprint for the city's physical transition into the 21st century."

"Every effort has been made to identify all known and projected capital needs and to schedule them for resolution during the ensuing six-year period," he stated of the work done preparing the CIP.

The entire program will be funded by a combination of bonded debt, operating revenues and state and federal funds, according to the mayor. He said the costs of servicing the bonded debt will not exceed the present level of four percent of the city's total budget, or approximately $4 million per year. Operating revenues, he added, will come from property taxes and other sources.

The primary focus of the CIP, according to the mayor, is "the protection of the health and safety of our residents ... and prevention of physical deterioration of our community assets." The CIP, he added,

NEWTON — Before arriving in the city last week from the People's Republic of China, Wang Hua had never been in a car or enjoyed the down-home pleasure of a hot shower.

"Their lifestyle is different," Mark Bailen said, "totally different." A sophmore at Newton South, Mark and his parents, David and Helena, are acting as Wang Hua's surrogate family for two-and-a-half months as part of a sister school exchange program with the Jingshan School in Beijing (Peking).

Six representatives from the Jingshan School will be staying in the city for five months to study the American educational system. Delegates will be living with two host families while they are here.

During his first night with the Bailens, Mark said Wang Hua, who will attend Newton South, noticed an immediate difference in his culture and the American

Boston is a city full of bright lights and downtown entertainment — museums, movies, theatre, nightclubs. It's a city of colleges and universities and all the pleasures the institutions afford, including lectures by prominent citizens, and college courses.

Then there's the ocean, the Charles, the bay, all packed with pleasure craft for fishing, sailing, even whale watching.

Ranked number two in a list of 10 most livable U.S. cities, everybody knows that, at the very least, Boston offers a lot to do.

Unfortunately, having a lot to do means little to singles when they have nobody to do those things with. And many singles believe that Boston, moved him. In a sense, service did," the mayor said of his father.

Mann's hopes lean heavily on his heritage

"My mother kept an open house. My house was always open, and anybody in trouble found our doors and cupboards open. It was not unusual to have strangers at the table. In many ways, it was like a soup kitchen. If my father had 50 cents in his pocket and somebody needed it, he'd part with the 50 cents."

His father's impulse to serve ran directly parallel to a millenia-old tradition in his Jewish culture: "tzedakah," charity. "From the earliest times," according to the mayor, "there was always a blue and white box in our house, and that was for charity. This is traditional. In our culture, there was always a portion found to give to poor people."

It was with this tradition of service in mind that State Representative Ted Mann eyed the Garden City's executive office from his eyrie on Beacon Hill. His success as a young rep from Newton was evident. His work on the House Insurance Committee was praiseworthy. His cronies and coworkers, in those days, included now-Governor Michael Dukakis, now-Speaker George Kevarian, former-Speaker Tom McGee and others who have gone on to make their mark.

His success on Beacon Hill was mirrored by the success of the insurance business he had begun in 1950. The Strauss-Mann Insurance Agency, the result of a merger, was a tremendous success; and Ted Mann was chairman of the board of several companies related to it.

But, with mayor Monte G. Basbas opting for a judgeship in the district court, Ted Mann saw an opportunity to serve the community in which he had put down his roots some 20 years earlier. The city, nearing its 100th birthday, was at what the mayor describes as "a crucial point" in its history.

It was a political challenge; and, for a man weaned on politics — a man who, as a youth, was as excited by politics and politicians as other kids were by baseball and the Red Sox, who now looks back on election night rallies in front of the old G & G Deli on Blue Hill Avenue as "euphoria" — it was too much to pass up.

In 1972, Ted Mann ran a close race against Bill Carmen, whom he describes as "a very talented former alderman and a successful realtor." (The vote spread of 200 was increased to 1,300 two years later, when he went up against Carmen again.)

The first thing the new mayor did when he learned he had won was to race to the VA Hospital to tell his dad. "I don't know whether he really knew what I was saying to him or not," the mayor said, looking back. "We'll never know, but I sensed when I looked at him ... his eyes ... that there was recognition the day I was elected mayor. He was very proud. Newton has always been a quality city and, for his son to be the mayor of such a quality city, I think he would be — I think he is — very proud of that."

Only a matter of months later, while he was walking up the steps of Our Lady's Church in the annual procession of the St. Carmen Festival, the mayor was informed that his father had died. He had been invited to deliver a proclamation, and, as he says now, "I went through with my part of the program."

Ted Mann's reign as mayor, which, after the coming uncontested four-year term, will be the longest of any mayor in the city's history, got off to a very rough start. "The very night I took office," he recalls, "we had the worst ice storm you could ever remember. Cars couldn't drive. You couldn't walk the streets. And my first decision was how much sand to mix with salt."

He consulted with DPW Commissioner Bill Pratt. "It was an over-the-holiday weekend. I was sworn in on a Saturday, which meant that City Hall was closed.

"At that time, we didn't have round-the-clock service with people answering the phones. So, I, along with several friends and several campaign workers, came to City Hall and we manned the phones there to service our constituency as we were bailing out of the worst ice storm I can ever remember.

"That was my first problem."

There were other problems screaming for the attention of the city's new chief executive. The city's population was changing, getting older and demanding different services. The school population, in a system that was rated as one of the best in the country, was declining, requiring a radically different approach to financing public education.

A couple of years into his mayoralty, a campaign to limit a municipality's ability to tax real property was born. A 4 percent tax cap preceded the passage of Proposition 2½ by several years. It was a time when all the traditional thinking in municipal government had to be reassessed.

The mayor, who has managed to make the City of Newton a lighthouse for the commonwealth's other cities and towns in the post-Prop. 2½ gloom, belittles his own accomplishment. "Newton has been blessed by having some great mayors," he says. "My predecessors are responsible for making the city what it was. I had good building blocks behind me. The things I was able to do, I was only able to do because of the things that were done prior. That made it easier for me to step into these situations."

Given the limit put on revenues, the mayor had to encourage creative solutions to problems at which former administrations might have been tempted simply to throw money. Instead of limiting services in the face of dwindling revenues, he insisted on "being more creative, consolidating services, attaining greater productivity ... finding ways to do more with less."

The challenge of maintaining the city's fiscal health in an increasingly hostile environment has been the mayor's top priority over the years. "Financial resource management is the biggest problem I have," he said, "because everything else flows from that."

His second biggest problem is helping the city's residents to understand the brutal reality of the city's financial needs — convincing them that, even in time of crisis, "You can't just stand even. You either fall back or you go ahead. You don't keep a business on an even keel without having an eye peeled on the future."

One measure of the success his unique approach to municipal management has achieved can be found in the city's maintaining its AAA bond rating, despite the pressures of Proposition 2½. Newton is one of only 20 cities in the entire country that can boast of so much confidence in its bond issues.

Other indications of the success Ted Mann has enjoyed by adapting his native expertise to municipal management can be found in a veritable laundry list of offices, honors and other kudos with which he has been recognized. The man who, as a youth, claimed the presidency of the Clippers Athletic Club, in Dorchester, as his first elected office, has been head of just about every organization in the state that relates to municipal government.

Formerly the longest-serving president of the Mass Mayors Association, Mann has recently been picked to head the parent organization, the Mass Municipal Association. The chief executive of one of the country's "All-America Cities" has circulated in the upper echelons of the National Conference of Mayors and has been cited for his contributions with numerous awards.

He is well-known for his work as head of the Middlesex County Advisory Board and largely credited for forcing a modicum of efficiency onto county government.

He recently received the Harry S. Truman Award from the State of Israel for his successful promotion of Israeli bonds. He has received "distinguished service" and "Man of the Year" awards from virtually every organization to which he has belonged and from many with which his contact has been minimal.

The man whose formal education virtually ceased when he graduated from Roxbury Memorial High School, just before World War II, even holds a Ph.D. in Public Administration from New England School of Law — an honor bestowed in 1977.

On a different level, he has been honored by the tremendous reception his annual Mayor's Prayer Breakfast has been accorded by representatives of every ethnic and religious group in the city. What began, more than a decade ago, as an experimental attempt to apprise a culturally diverse citizenry that "the numbers of different strains that make up America are so prevalent here" has blossomed into an annual celebration that draws more than 1,000 participants.

While someone else might deem it an honor when no one stands up to challenge him at election time, the mayor says only that he is pleased to be able to devote the energy a campaign would have demanded to his mayoral duties.

While the man who grew up in politics admits he enjoys the challenge of a campaign, he insists, "I enjoy more the opportunity I now have to do the things I feel are important. I can expend that energy working for the city. I'm on that euphoric trail of building a program six months earlier than I would have been able to, and, for that, I'm grateful.

"I'm sufficently challenged. I don't need a political campaign or the sound of the bell to let me know I'm in the ring. I'm in the ring all the time."

Judging from his own words, it looks like Ted Mann might well be "in the ring" for a long time. While a handful of mayoral aspirants are tentatively organizing for a campaign in 1989, when they think the field will be an open one, the mayor implies that their predictions might be way off base.

"I guess there is life after being mayor, but I can't countenance it right now," he said. "Making money, in itself, doesn't interest me. In terms of comparison, the remuneration on this job has been very meager ($38,500 a year). It has been unrewarding from that point of view.

"I don't have any grand plans for what I'm going to be. I have grand plans for what I'd like Newton to be. I think I'm really intertwined, in my lifestyle, with what I see for Newton in the next 10 years.

"I'm doing things that I like to do every day. I have a different challenge every day. It's the best job for me. I can't think of another opportunity that would offer the same challenge."

Asked, in his office, if those words meant he would "die at his desk," Mann smiled wryly and said, "There are some people who would like that sooner than later. You just mention that and there will be a run on the place."

In response to rumors that his health might prohibit another mayoral run in 1989, the man who bounced back from surgery on a brain tumor in the 60s commented, "Health problems, you deal with. There isn't anybody who doesn't have a health problem. It's all in how you deal with the problems that's important.

"My condition is such that I put

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S.

New Super "Dream Pill" Lose Weight As You Sleep!

No Dieting — Eat All You Want

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — An amazing new super "dream pill" has recently been developed and perfected that reportedly "guarantees" that you will easily lose up to 10 pounds in 10 days. Best of all, it allows you to "eat as much as you want of your favorite foods and still lose a pound a day or more starting from the very first day until you achieve your ideal weight and figure."

This remarkable new diet pill combines two natural substances which cause adults to lose weight fast by "tricking" the body into acting like a teenager. These nutritional substances, called L-arginine and L-ornithine, stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Dr. Robert Harris, a specialist in nutritional medicine in Stafford Springs, Connecticut, was recently quoted as explaining: "Growth Hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail.

"Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-orthinine make the body 'think' it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry."

"Pill Does All The Work"

According to the manufacturer, "the pill itself does all the work while you quickly lose weight with NO starvation 'diet menus' to follow, NO calorie counting, NO exercise and NO hunger pangs." The pill is not a drug! It is 100% safe consisting of natural amino acids just like those found in the foods you eat everyday.

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. They discovered the weight-loss effects by accident. Sandy fell and broke her foot and started taking L-arginine because of its well-known healing qualities. Much to her amazement Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Lose Weight While You Sleep

One beautiful thing about these miracle pills is the ease with which they work. You don't have to count calories and you don't have to follow special diets or eat special foods. You don't even have to exercise. The best time to take the pills is just before you go to bed at night. That way, the pounds melt away even as you sleep. You wake up every morning, slimmer, happier and feeling younger!

The super dream pill is already sweeping the country with glowing reports of easy and fast weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Extraordinary Guarantee

Place your order now. If you are not completely satisfied with the thinner "new you" simply return the empty container for a full refund of your entire purchase price. No questions asked. Now what could be fairer than that?

You can order your supply of these remarkable pills by sending $19.95 for a 30 day supply (or $34.95 for a 60 day supply) cash, check or money order to: Life Cycle, 17300 17th St., Suite J-111, Dept. 85, Tustin, CA 92680.

Hotel/motel tax approved

NEWTON — Years of persistence on the part of Mayor Theodore Mann have finally paid off in a way he hopes will provide the city with "crucial fiscal flexibility" while helping to keep property taxes down.

The hotel/motel excise tax legislation he kept submitting to Beacon Hill annually for the past four or five years won the approval of the legislature recently as part of a "Boston bailout." While the Garden City is not yet in need of "a bailout," the mayor contends that revenues from the new hotel/motel tax will prove crucial to the city's finances over the years.

The new legislation allows cities to add a local excise tax of four percent to every room bill. "Preliminary estimates indicate that the revenue generated from this new law will be in excess of $70,000 a month," the mayor stated. "The importance of a revenue source of this magnitude can not be underestimated in relation to our long term fiscal health."

In the immediate future, Mann said he hopes to earmark the new revenues to help finance the construction of a new main library. A fund that would reserve all revenues from the sale or rental of surplus city buildings for library construction has already been approved by the aldermen.

In the long run, according to Mann, the revenues from the hotel/motel tax will be used to offset a drastic reduction in federal funds that come to the city from the revenue sharing program. In July, congress resolved that revenue sharing should be eliminated from the federal budget for fiscal year 1987.

Rape probe continues

WEST NEWTON — An ongoing intra-departmental investigation into rape allegations against two Newton police officers may be completed by the end of this week, according to Police Chief William F. Quinn.

Quinn said his office is now in the process of negot..ating what sort of punishment the two officers will receive.

Several weeks ago, the Middlesex District Attorney's office decided not to seek indictments against Officers Thomas M. Cloonan Jr. and Robert T. Keefe in connection with the rape which allegedly occurred on July 17. Paul Richardson, speaking for the DA's office, said the alleged victim of the incident refused to testify.

The Newton Police Department went ahead with its own internal investigation to determine if the officers allegedly involved in the incident violated any departmental rules of conduct.

Ban backers keep pushing

NEWTON — Frustrated by their inability to bring the issue before the voters, supporters of a moratorium on commercial construction are asking the Board of Alderman to attach a public opinion survey to the November ballot.

"In general terms, this is a non-binding referendum question," moratorium leader Thomas Paulini said. "We want to show that we have overwhelming support in the city for the moratorium issue."

The request for the survey question became necessary, Paulini added, after the Law Department turned down a previous request that an initiative petition be placed on the ballot.

The initiative petition would have given voters direct input into zoning ordinance changes. The Law Department, saying state law prohibited that, ruled against the petition.

Paulini said the survey question is a way to bide time until the board either passes new zoning ordinances, or the public can vote on the initiative.

He added the next step would be to take the case to court.

"We could take the case to court and win hands down right now," Paulini said. "The problem is, it is already too late to get the initiative on the ballot this November, so we will wait and see what develops."

Fourth mailman arrested

NEWTON — A fourth Newton letter carrier was arrested on drug charges in Newton District Court after he turned himself in last week to postal inspectors at the South Postal Annex in Boston.

John F. Considine, 33, of Hyde Park, pleaded not guilty to charges of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and conspiracy to violate controlled substance laws. He was released on personal recognizance and a probable cause hearing was scheduled for Oct. 29.

Newton Police Detective Sgt. Arthur Fryar, who has participated in the investigation, said no more arrests are being sought at this time.

"As far as we're concerned, this is it for right now," said Fryar.

Considine worked out of the Newton Centre post office along with Frederick Hinckley, 36, of Roslindale, who was also arraigned and who allegedly conspired with Considine to sell the drugs.

Two other letter carriers, Joseph Faletra, 28, of Somerville, and Edward T. Rock Jr., 33, of Westwood, were also arraigned Monday on charges of possession of drugs with intent to distribute. Both men worked out of the Newtonville post office.

All four men have been suspended without pay by the postal service.

Daley balks at appointment

UPPER FALLS — Saying he wants the Board of Aldermen to keep tabs on the appointment or reappointment of candidates for committees and funds, Alderman Paul Daley is asking the board to reconsider the appointment of Herbert Kliger as trustee of the Read and Eliot Funds — both established in the late 1800s for charitable services.

"In the last two-and-one-half years," Daley said, "the board has taken a posture that any candidate for any board or panel deserves the right to be interviewed, and the aldermen deserve the right to conduct that interview. This did not happen with Mr. Kliger."

Daley said the motion to reconsider Kliger's appointment "was nothing personal. It had nothing to do with Kliger," he said. "It was just procedural."

Daley did say, however, he was concerned Kliger's "personal interests" might interfere with his ability to perform his duties as trustee.

Commenting on Daley's motion, Kliger said "It was something for the board to decide." He added there was something "personal" between himself and Daley, but refused to elaborate.

ZRC strengthens zoning code

NEWTON — Responding to what they see as unchecked commercial development in the city, the Zoning Review Committee (ZRC) last week voted to approve the concept of threshold ordinances.

According to committee Chairman Richard Bullwinkle, the threshold ordinance — based on a similar regulation in Needham — is designed to limit commercial development by requiring increasing levels of aldermanic approval according to a development's square footage.

The threshold ordinance, in essence, would put more power in the hands of elected officals to control development.

According to Bullwinkle, developments of between 5,000 and 20,000 sq. ft. in Needham require a site plan approval, while those over 20,000 sq. ft. require a special permit. He added the ZRC is only using those figures as a model and will come up with their own standards that apply to Newton's needs.

A site-plan approval, said Bullwinkle, comes after the board looks at a proposed development and it's effect on the surrounding neighborhood. Once voted on, a site-plan approval requires only a majority of the board's vote for passage.

A special permit, on the other hand, requires two-thirds to three-quarters approval, depending on neighborhood reaction.

The assessors' photo album

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Chief Assessor Robert Palmer has a different idea of what a "photo album" should contain. Instead of snapshots of smiling aunts and uncles, Palmer is thinking more along the line of plots of land — 26,000 of them.

Palmer is no fool. He realizes that 26,000 pictures would create quite a mess. As a result, he is asking the Board of Alderman to approve his plan to photograph the city's land parcels and put them on laser disks for "quick and easy reference."

"In order to expedite the 1987 property revaluation," Palmer says, "I would like to be able to cross reference the data we already have in our computer system with pictures of the individual properties. That way we will be better able to deal with some of the problems that come up."

Palmer says the $98,000 allocation will enable him to increase his department's efficiency.

"Instead of having to send an assessor out to check out a complaint that a property is overvalued, we can call up information on the property as well as a picture of the property and that of surrounding property and compare them. It will speed up the process and allow our assessors to do other things. I think it will, in the long run, save some money."

The way things stand, Palmer has on file "a few" photographs of property left over from the 1979 revaluation. He says those on file are in such disarray a whole new system has to be created.

Though he hasn't put together a cost analysis, Palmer has no difficulty justifying his project.

"We want to give the people a better product," he says. "There is clearly a need to revamp our system and I think this is the best way."

Palmer describes the technology involved as "simple."

"There's not much to it, really," he says of the needed equipment. "All you need is a television screen and a disk player. Instead of putting on a John Wayne movie, we will put in pictures of property that we can randomly access and call up when we need to."

He adds taking the photographs will be the most difficult task.

"I figure that, once passed, it will take a couple of months to take the photos. 26,000 pictures is quite a large number."

In addition to the disk player and the photography, Palmer's plan includes money to update his existing software to accomodate the new data provided on the disks.

Palmer says the new technology will add to what he calls, "the most advanced state of the art assessing department in perhaps the country."

Though he is increasing his department's technological capabilities, Palmer was quick to point out that he was not trying to replace his staff.

"This system will help us maintain our records," he says. "I doubt that there are any computers that can go out in the field and evaluate a property or deal with an angry property owner."

Mayor Theodore D. Mann says he "heartily" approves of Palmer's plan.

"I am very happy to support and recommend this program," Mann says, "because I think it will go a long way toward helping the Assessing Department carry out its job."

According to Mann, money for the proposal would come out of the 1985 Supplemental Capital Budget the mayor introduced to the board last week.

Moratorium drive lacks real direction

The idea of placing a moratorium on development continues to crop up, town by town, throughout the region. In Newton, one group wants the issue to be put to a vote on the November ballot. In Walpole, the moratorium question may wind up on the fall warrant. In Dedham, some seek a halt to retail building.

It's not surprising that some residents have an emotional "Enough!" reaction to development. But the issues of planning, growth and zoning — all critical to the future of the cities and towns — won't yield to simple yes or no answers.

The squabble in Newton over putting a moratorium question on the ballot has no real point beyond the desire of anti-development leaders to build political support for their position.

The ballot box is ideally suited for electing leaders, but poorly suited for deciding complex questions of public policy such as land use. Putting the question to a referendum, even a non-binding one, would achieve little, and would lend credence to the misapprehension that popular sentiment can directly determine zoning policy.

It can't, which was the essence of the Newton city solicitor's initial decision to block a binding referendum on the moratorium issue.

Likewise, members of town meetings can debate the issue up and down, but in most cases are poorly equipped to effect development standards which are fair, legal and economically sound.

No doubt about it, commerical growth has brought growing pains to Newtown, Dedham, Walpole and other towns throughout the region. Rapid development stresses municipal services, creates congestion and alters the character of neighborhoods.

But trying to stop growth dead can threaten prosperity and can lead to expensive and ultimately ~~futile~~ court battles. Nor can there be a blanket "yes." Fair and effective controls are needed.

A moratorium can ultimately stampede developers, which will affect the city's tax base, putting a greater burden on residential property owners. At present, ironically enough, Newton city officials have remarked that the mere suggestion of a moratorium has encouraged developers to file an unprecedented number of perimeter plans, which automatically puts their foot in the door.

Residents have every right to be concerned, and to demand that public officials protect their future. They should demand that mayors, selectmen and other public officials explain their positions on development. They have the right and the power to work against candidates who stand opposed to their wishes, even though there is a dearth of challengers in this fall's city election.

But in organizing for their cause, they should reserve the ballot box for more appropriate uses than polling public opinion on complicated issues.

Apologists for apartheid,

We recognize you ...

By Kevin C. Kennedy

An open letter to the "Reverend" Jerry Falwell, to all those who would defend the outrage known as apartheid, to all those who would ignore it, to those who think "constructive engagement" is a way to manipulate it without getting your hands dirty and to those who think the status quo should be protected until a peaceful transition can be made to a more humane form of government:

We recognize you. Your appearance has changed slightly over the years, but we do recognize you.

You are the German ambassadors to the United States who tried, for years, to convince Franklin Delano Roosevelt there was no real cause to intervene on the part of European Jews in the late 1930's.

"These changes must be made very carefully," they told him. "These things take time. Besides, it's your liberal, Communist-inspired (and often Jewish) press that is overblowing these reports of so-called 'atrocities' to their own advantage."

We recognize you.

You are the U.S. ambassador to the Court of St. James, who, before we entered the Second World War, pitched to the same F.D.R. that we should give up England as lost and establish diplomatic and, more important, business relations with the Third Reich, which would soon deal with England as it had so successfully dealt with the rest of Europe.

(It took a man from Canada, an intelligence courier working as liason between Churchill and Roosevelt, to destroy that well orchestrated fantasy. When he did, F.D.R. immediately picked up the phone, called his ambassador in England and said three words before he hung up: "Joe, come home.")

Apologists for apartheid, we recognize you.

You are the members of the League of Nations, the predecessor of the United Nations that succeeded in passing its impotence on to its progeny, who refused any aid to Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie when Mussolini's troops overran his homeland and massacred its inhabitants. You refused to help the people of Ethiopia because they were black, and the British delegation actually had the sand to come right out and say so.

We recognize you.

You are the simpering Tories who told everybody the founding fathers of the United States were cuckoo to think they could break away from "Mother England" and survive. Colonial patriots told the Tories, "But we want to be citizens, with all the rights of citizens."

The Tories' response, which is still echoing in U.S. governmental circles today was, "What good is it to be citizens if you're starving to death?"

"CONSTRUCTIVE ENGAGEMENT" WITH SOUTH AFRICA

We recognize you as latter-day subscribers to the idea that a few wealthy, powerful men know what is good for millions of poor people. You are descendants of Britain's Lord Balfour, christened "Bloody Balfour" for the techniques he used to make opponents see things his way. It was Balfour who told the world, shortly after the Easter Rebellion was quelled, that the Irish were "no more ready for home rule than the Hottentots."

You apologists for apartheid should be warned, though, just whom you are apologizing for. The ruling, white minority in South Africa is either a collective idiot or a heretic of the first order, given the most basic tenets of our national creed.

Take "All men are created equal" as the first premise. Make "We hold these truths to be self-evident" the second premise. The conclusion to be drawn from the conjunction of these two premises is that any man who oppresses another man because he imagines that man's race, creed or color makes him inferior can not comprehend a truth we consider "self-evident." He can only misconstrue "self-evident" truths if he is either an idiot or a heretic.

Since when do we chose to team up with — or "constructively engage" — idiots and heretics?

Anti-apartheid becoming chic

By Loring Swaim

Apartheid is wrong, make no mistake.

Institutionalized white supremacy in the 20th Century is an idea whose time has gone – and good riddance. Abolishing apartheid, enfranchising the disfranchished in South Africa, is a timely cause for all fairminded folks to support and assist.

But there's somthing eerie, lemming-like, surreal about the present widespread hysteria about apartheid.

The intelligentsia, I have the scary feeling, is being all but stampeded onto the bandwagon by chic peer pressure and comformist self-righteous outrage. Drowned out by the "outrage" is critical thought.

It's got to be said; we haven't the slightest idea what will replace apartheid once it topples.

No one knows where the careening bandwagon is taking us. We're on a rollercoaster–cattle prodded by anarchists using revulsion at apartheid as a Trojan Horse to obscure larger goals.

Some foresee a racial bloodbath in Africa which would dwarf Lebanon and Northern Ireland, perhaps engulf the US. All but a few abhor the prospect; the few who would relish it appear intent on ending up king of the castle.

Their voices have not yet been heard, but there are those who believe the present hoopla, the present preoccupation with cinematic nightly incidents of violence in South Africa, is unintentionially but tragically misleading the American public. Depicting only part of the story, providing incomplete information, concentrating on the superficial and the stage-managed, ignoring clandestine forces orchestrating violence, can only lead to cardboard simplicities and misguided conclusions.

The assumption, implicit in all pious criticism rending the air and in all the searing TV images of police bashing of black crowds, is that peaceful integration is just waiting to happen.

The assumption is that if only South Africa's ruling white minority would "share power" with millions of black "non-citizens" eager to "participate", then peace, equality, justice and brotherhood will follow.

The assumption is that it is the reluctance of stubborn Afrikaners to reform their system that is holding back the legitimate coming of blacks' control over their own destiny. The assumption is that the present dramatic outbreaks of rebellion in South Africa are spontaneous demonstrations of a legitimate reach for freedom.

The demonstrations are all of the above– but they are a good deal more than what is conveyed in 30-second film clips and dispatches from the war zones.

Larger goals? Ulterior motives?

"Our aim," declared Soviet Chief Leonid Brezhnev in 1973 in Prague, "is to gain control of the two great treasure houses on which the west depends--the energy treasure house of the Persian Gulf and the mineral treasure house of central and southern Africa."

Soviet meddling in the Middle East is well documented. As for Target 2, South Africa and Namibia, alone in the world except for the Soviet Union, are rich in certain rare strategic minerals critical to America's missile and aricraft production. With them in enemy hands, US defenses are crippled.

It is less well-known that the African National Congress, spearheading the fight against apartheid, is Soviet-dominated and Marxist-oriented. South Africa whites know this; we don't seem to care.

TV correspondents are silent about the fomenting of riots or provocations against police; it is easier to film away at "spontaneous" crowds and police setting upon them. Unreported is the possiblity that the black interests are second to the interests of Marxist-Leninist revolution.

It is naive to think that those fanning the flames of the uprising aren't equally prepared to step into the confusion at the critical moment and wind up in control.

Is this a replay of how widespread gripes against the Shah of Iran paved the way for the Khomeini regime? Or of how popular hatred of President Somosa in Nicaragua set the stage for the Sandinistas to seize power when we weren't looking? Deja Vu?

The United States is no good at all yet at designing viable democratic replacements for the imperfect regimes we gang up on. We gleefully push them from the frying pan into the inferno then wonder what went wrong.

Labor Day marks the time to 'get off our duffs'

By Thomas J. Murphy

Here it is, after Labor Day, the summertime vacation days gone all too soon. With most everyone basking in the sun, business treads water and government at all levels moves at three-quarter time. Nothing wrong with this surcease from intense activity to store up energy for what lies ahead.

"Let's get off our duffs and do what has to be done," will be the message in some words or other in staff conferences this week. The final quarter of the year looms just ahead. Even in the midst of regional prosperity, it will be a make-or-break time for many companies.

Nearly every day, the news columns carry stories of employment cutbacks. Blue collars, white collars and management level people are being affected. A major concern like Polaroid finds it necessary to offer early retirement options so attractive there are executives who accept but are young enough to want to remain active. Where are the alternative opportunities, they ask?

It is a question whether the computer and electronic components industry known as high tech will sail through a shakedown cruise without deep recession. Wang and Digital have had to retrench. Raytheon's diversified research and production range, with national defense contracts as an underpinning, gives assurance of stability, however.

Cost containment in the health delivery system means more job loss. Housing and commercial construction costs cause more worries. Add to this the declining inflow of federal subsidy dollars for still another negative.

The minus signs are relatively few in the total picture, fortunately. Unemployment here holds at one of the lowest levels in the U.S. Except for those lofty prices for homes in the high-cost building market, inflation rates are constant in the 3-to-4-percent area. Interest rates have worked gradually downward to encourage risk capital.

No reason to preach gloom or doom, therefore. More people are working for higher incomes than at any time in the commonwealth's history, providing an unprecedented surplus out of tax dollars.

New office building and apartment complex construction continues. The service industry grows as manufacturing gives way to computerization and automation. A significant amount of rehabilitation of old buildings is making buisiness districts more attractive.

In every field, the competitive struggle has to be tougher to improve on what is being done currently. Financial analysts are cautious, but confident 1985 will end with a big bang. Retailers look for a best-ever selling season.

way of life. "He was very surprised at the number of cars we had," Mark said, adding it was a luxury in China to have even one car.

Wang Hua and the other members of the delegation have been provided with a special diet of "rice and dumplings" to help them adjust to American food. "They have to get used to the food," Mark said. "You can't expect to give them a greasy hamburger when they first get here."

According to the Oak Hill residents, Wang Hua brought a suitcase full of American clothes which were still wrapped in plastic and music popular in China. "It sounds kind of ancient to me," Mark said, comparing eastern and western rock-and-roll music.

Despite their cultural differences, after only one night Wang Hua has made a positive impression on his host family. "He's very polite and very intelligent, " Helena Bailen said. "He gave us beautiful gifts when he arrived and has some put aside for Christmas."

Even though these Chinese envoys have little access to a car, hot running water or McDonalds, Wang Hua does have a television that allows him to observe a small slice of American culture. "He told me he's seen movies of New York and even watched the NBA playoffs last year."

Hanging in Mark's room is a poster of Larry Bird. When Wang Hua first saw the picture he immediately said, "East, East." A reference to the NBA conference in which the Celtics play.

Communication hasn't been much of a problem so far, according to Helena Bailen. "We've had to be very direct and very basic," she said. "You can't get to indepth."

Representatives of the school department, members of the Chinese community and the Bailens were in Mayor Theodore D. Mann's office yesterday to officially welcome three administrators and three students from the Chinese sister school. Wang Hua and his group is the first Chinese middle-school delegation in history to visit a foreign country. Mayor Theodore D. Mann greeted the eastern emissaries by telling them continential partnership is "very important" in developing positive relationships between two countries.

"You'll find that we eat the same kinds of food and even laugh at the same kinds of jokes," the mayor said.

While presenting each delegate with seal of the city pins, Mann told them Newton is one of the oldest communities in America, but prefaced his comments by saying: "When we say old, we mean 300 years. When you say old, you mean 5,000 years."

Ed Liu and Sally Ling, representatives of the city's Chinese community, told the delegation this partnership was a turning point in history as well as a turning point in their own lives. Never before had a delegation such as theirs taken on a mission of such "international importance," Liu said.

Speaking both in English and Chinese, Liu explained to the delegates there are more than 800,000 people of Chinese descent in this country.

"There are people just like you in this country," Liu said, "who speak the langauge just like you."

The idea of an exchange program grew out of the city's sister school relationship with the Jingshan School in Beijing. Claire Kanter, a special education teacher for the city, met Fang Bi Hui, a master teacher at the Jingshan School, while traveling in China with her husband in 1979. After several hours of conversation in which the two educators exchanged notes, they decided their schools should become part of an on-going relationship which would include other educators.

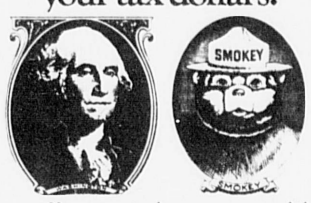

Local restaurateur Sally Ling pins Chinese student Cao Yu Xian with the city seal. Art Illman photo

In 1984 — after a delegation of Newton teachers had visited Beijing and group of Beijing educators had visited the Garden City — Superintendent John Strand, while in China, proposed a formal exchange of students and teachers.

"We're here for three reasons," Fang Bi Huí said. The first is to study Newton's method of education and school adminstration. The second, she said, is to "further develop our friendship with Newton." And the third, and probably most important, is to "find the best way for more students to come aboard and study."

Besides Wang Hua and Fang Bi Hui, the Chinese delegation includes: Su Ji Yu, an elementary teacher; Liu Nai Wen, a secondary teacher; Cao Yu Xian, a student who will be attending Newton South; and Lui Meng, a student who will be attending Newton North.

These guys want you to stop wasting your tax dollars.

Yet every single year, over one billion in tax dollars goes up in smoke. That's what it costs to protect our nation's resources and fight wildfires.

So, think of these famous faces next time you're in the great outdoors. And remember, only you can prevent forest fires.

Jewels & Gems

BY CAROL
THE GOLD LADY

SLEIGHT OF HAND

With careful design, rings can work magic in giving the hand an allusion of tapering slimness. A ring design that leads the eye along the finger, rather than across it, can lengthen a short hand with broad fingers. Perfect for this effect are marquise-shaped stones and cabochon-cut ovals. Shorten the appearance of fingers by wearing a ring design that runs across the fingers. The thicker, broader hand appears slimmer with an oval-shaped or an emerald cut or oblong shaped ring design. The brilliant cut complements practically every hand. It is one reason why brilliant-cut engagement rings are a traditional favorite.

Rings are special jewelry items that can be worn every day. You don't need a special occasion to wear them or buy them. Come down to CAROL "THE GOLD LADY" at 109 Dalby St., Newton to see the beautiful display of all styles of rings. We have modern gold settings and rings with precious stones. Why not take your old rings and have them remounted in a stunning new setting with today's look. You'll be proud to wear all our jewelry. while offering plenty of opportunities for fun and romance, is one of the hardest cities in which to meet people.

According to Newton resident Dale Koppel, author of a book on singles and an adult education entrepreneur, "one of the favorite theories is that the people in Boston are so cold."

But what it really boils down to, she says, is many singles are afraid to take risks. "A lot of women in particular spend half their life going places, but not taking risks," she says.

In fact, one of the main points in her book "Where to Go and What to Do When You're Single and Living In and Around Boston" is "to give advice on how to meet people, not just where to go.

"Risk-taking ability, that's essential," states Koppel, who is currently involved in her second marriage.

If "people's primary goal is to meet people," then she suggests they join a dating service, place personal ads, go places alone, maximize potential situations, strike up conversations whenever possible.

Koppel's book is essentially a resource guide that includes information on dating bars, singles groups, support services, special interest groups and publications. Also included are articles on such subjects as "How To Be Romantic in Boston," "Where to Eat When You're Eating Alone," and "The Ten Best Places to Go on a Date in Boston."

She decided to write the book after several years of observing singles interact during two-hour mini-courses, which Koppel offers, with a catered meal, through her own adult education business.

The school, called The Main Course, offers classes taught by professionals on a variety of subjects at locations in Newton, Cambridge, Brookline, Marblehead, Framingham, and Boston.

The courses are of interest to couples and singles, dealing with car care, art, business, and marriage subjects, as well as courses geared strictly for singles. Still, Koppel says, 75 percent of the students in the classes are single.

"I heard people saying where should I go (to meet people) and what should I do (to meet them)," she recalls. "Here, they're living in and around Boston, saying, 'I don't know where to start.'"

According to Koppel, who has a B.A. in advertising, an M.A. in educational psychology, and a Ph.D. in curriculum and instruction, one problem with many singles is that they do not open themselves up to meeting people.

One woman, for example, gave no indication she was interested in dating a man who had approached her during one of Koppel's classes.

"You could tell they were right for each other. But when he asked her out, she was busy. She gave him no indication there was another option."

Luckily, the man was persistent, and she did accept a date with him. But, according to Koppel, this woman's reaction demonstrates the wrong approach to meeting people. She says singles should use dating as an "opportunity to get out and practice social skills on that person" whether or not he/she is of romantic interest.

Koppel compares dating to "continually going on job interviews" because the individual is "constantly having to be accepted" and always putting him or herself "on the line as being single."

And if it does not work out, "People should be able to say to someone, 'You're not my type, but I know someone you might like' or 'You might know somebody I might like.'"

Further, she says single men and women should "make the most of a situation" by setting up opportunities to converse with interesting-looking prospects.

For example, singles should patronize restaurants with counters and sit across from or next to someone interesting and then strike up a conversation.

"People often say, 'I saw the neatest looking person at the movie theatre,' but they'll be afraid of approaching that person because you're setting yourself up for potential rejection."

But, for Koppel, the definition of rejection is what happens "if you don't take chances."

Atheists dating service

many good business people, conceived a product to fill a need.

"I was raised in the Jewish faith, but I have questioned religion for about 15 years," she says. "I became heavily active with Atheism about a year ago and I noticed that many Atheists were kind of lonely."

Simmons says because of their attitude toward organized religion, many Atheists "feel uncomfortable meeting people in general, let alone those of the opposite sex."

"When we are together at meetings," Simmons says, "Atheists have an often irreverent attitude toward religion. For myself, it's all right, because I am very active and attend meetings where I can meet people who think like I do. There are many Atheists, though, who aren't active and have no way to get to know people. By setting up this dating service, I hope to reach those people."

If the volume of calls coming into Simmons' 24-hr hotline is any indication, she is right.

"Since first placing ads last week, I've been getting upwards of 10 calls a day," she says.

If interested and willing to pay a $75 fee, callers describe themselves over the phone and get that information placed in a "confidential" file. Simmons refers to that file once a client asks for a date.

"I researched a number of other dating services," says Simmons, "and took into consideration what other Atheists are looking for, and came up with this system."

Simmons phone questionnaire asks about a caller's personality and interests, as well as music tastes, alcohol and recreational drug use (including tobacco).

Her survey doesn't stop there, though. The last two questions concern a client's committment to and involvement with Atheism. She asks clients if the "are in the closet," or are "outspoken and activist oriented." In addition, she asks to what extend Atheism effects a client's life.

Like other dating services, Simmons cross references those traits, age and marital status and comes up with a suitable partner. To ensure a compatable match, Simmons says she weighs carefully how a client responds to questions of ideology and tobacco use "because difffences in those reactions often mean differences in lifestyles.

"Like any other group, Atheists have individual differences. With us, those differences become more important because we are very independent-minded. Rejecting God as a superstition is a big step for people. Atheists like to speak up against what they don't believe in so you can see the problems that would arise if a nonsmoker were to get together with a smoker."

Though Simmons finds interest in her service to be "good," a dirth of female Atheists makes for problems. Like a bookie who can't balance her sheet, Simmons wants "a few good women to sign up."

"I'd say there are about three times as many men calling as women. That is a matchmaker's nightmare, although as a woman myself I can't complain."

Mayor's 6-year CIP to cost $80 million will serve as a tool for "minimizing the city's exposure to costly liability claims, controlling the growth in recurring annual maintenance and operations costs and enhancing the city's access to capital markets."

Public works projects will take the largest chunk of the $80 million total — more than $45 million, or 56 percent. Major improvements in the city's sewer system, beginning with chronic trouble spots on the south side and extending throughout the city, will be completed after more than a decade of planning.

The city is eligible for grant reimbursement of up to 30 percent of the sewer repairs, but it will have to pay up front for the entire cost of the project. Revenues from water and sewer use charges will also be applied to this project.

More street and sidewalk work is planned, along with the construction of permanent facilities for storing salt, sand and public works vehicles.

The maintenance and improvement of municipal buildings will consume another $16 million, or 20 percent of the total CIP. The completion of an ongoing "space utilization and maintenance study" will determine the allocation of $3 million over the next six years.

The mayor has included $12 million in the CIP for the construction of a new main library, which has been an annual request of the library trustees since a 1963 study identified the inadequacies of the present facility. He indicated that this item will definitely be a top priority for him.

Capital spending on public education will take up more than $12 million, or 16 percent of the total CIP. Roofs will be repaired, energy-efficient windows installed, ventilation systems improved, carpets replaced and North High's vocational education facilities will be augmented.

Approximately $3½ million will be spent in the area of public safety, with the bulk of it going to replace fire apparatus. Improvements to the police station and various fire stations are included in the public buildings budget.

Funds for improving the city's recreational facilities total more than $2 million. They will be spent on phase two of the development of Cold Spring Park and improvements at Allison Park, Novitiate Park and Hunnewell Playground.

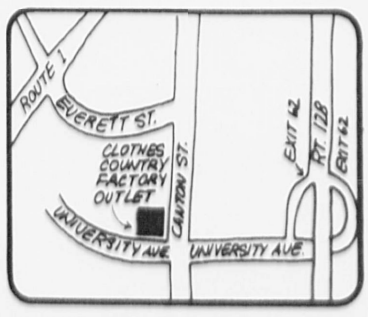

Conservation projects amounting to $367,000 will include land acquisitions near Christina Street, in the Kessler West Woods and a pathway along the Charles River.

At the same time as he revealed the six-year CIP, Mann submitted a a nearly $3 million supplement to this year's city budget, which is based on the final state aid figure and the city's certified free cash.

Price of new library is $12 million hotel/motel excise tax, which will bring in revenues estimated at over $70,000 a month.

Mann's letter to the full board requests two appropriations described as "essential to the well-coordinated and deliberate implementation of the new library project."

The largest of the requests totals $250,000 from the city's surplus building fund for the preliminary design and specifications of the new facility. Mann also asked for a $30,000 appropriation from surplus to pay for an in-house project manager to coordinate the library effort.

"Preliminary design will provide architectural renderings, initial site specifications and a detailed cost analysis. The availability of these plans will facilitate private fundraising and the pursuit of state funds," according to the mayor.

The $250,000 appropriation request represents approximately 30 percent of "the total anticipated design and engineering costs" and "will only serve to enhance and better inform public discussion about a new library," Mann added.

He said he intends to create the position of in-house "Library Project Manager" on a contractural basis and eliminate the job once the library is built.

"A project of this magnitude, coupled with the existing workload of the Building Department, requires this type of prudent investment. The position will function more than half time, but less than full time through the duration of the project," Mann said.

The project manager's duties will include coordinating the financial, legal, planning, programmatic and construction aspects of the library effort, as well as overseeing interaction with contractors, consultants and relevant governmental agencies.

Mann said projections compiled by the Building and Planning departments show it will take 14 to 16 months to come up with the final design for a new library facility on the undeveloped parcel across the street from city hall.

"In order to meet the timetable of a 1987 construction start ... it is essential that the board give these two appropriation requests immediate consideration," he said.

"Financial planning, facility design and construction of a new main library represent a most formidable challenge. However, by moving ahead with the consensus plan of the Main Library Committee in a cooperative fashion, I am confident that we will build a 21st century library facility to serve future generations of our city," Mann added.

Judge backs Mann

without power to hire his executive secretary as a Civil Service employee in the absence of authority" granted by either state statute or the city charter. "The absence of such authority is fatal to the plaintiff's claim."

Regarding Ossinger's claim that she should have been given notice of her dismissal under the terms of the city charter, Flannery stated that she did not qualify for the status she claimed. The section of the charter she cited applies to "city officers, department heads and members of the city agencies for whom no other method of appointment ... is provided by the charter..."

The judge stated, "The mayor's executive secretary does not fall within these positions of the executive branch." He also pointed out that Mann erred when, in the February 22, 1972, letter, he promised her the protection of Civil Service and the city charter to which she was not entitled. "The mayor was without power to change the status of his executive secretary's position without the authority to do so," he stated.

Judge Flannery also denied Ossinger's civil rights claim, in which she alleged there was a violation of due process in her being fired. He stated that such a claim is only valid when the plaintiff is entitled to "continuing job tenure. The plaintiff did not possess such a claim of entitlement."

Flannery observed that Ossinger made the mistake of seeking relief "through remedies that do not apply to her." But he added that there might well be some remedy that does apply to her.

"I do not rule out the possibility that the plaintiff may be able to make out a cognizable claim against the defendant," Flannery stated, and he proceeded to suggest just where such a applicable remedy might be found in her own complaint.

"There may be the kernel of one in paragraph 25 of her amended complaint, for example, which may be read to allege a breach of an employment agreement between the parties," he stated. "The defendant is entitled to summary judgment with respect to the entirety of the action against him, but among the inappropriate theories may lurk a viable claim."

The judge gave Ossinger and her attorney, Regina L. Quinlan, 30 days to ferret out a claim he would consider to be "viable." Quinlan confirmed Tuesday that she would be filing "an amended complaint" before the deadline.

Board showed mayor he had the votes any subsequent library-related appropriation request.

As it stands now, Mann's request for "immediate consideration" of two appropriations totalling $280,000 and aimed at beginning the library design phase will probably face its first real test at the aldermanic Finance Committee's Sept. 9 meeting.

Mann's description of his plan as "a most formidable challenge" will ring true in FinCom because the committee's chairman, Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large Paul E. Coletti, is on record as a staunch opponent of a new facility at Homer/Walnut.

Coletti, like Ward 4 Alderman-at-Large Richard J. McGrath and other legislators, believes a library across the street from city hall will over-intensify the area with municipal uses and rob the city of already scarce open space.

However, other longtime Homer/Walnut opponents, most notably Board President Carol Ann Shea, are already conceding defeat on the issue and are preparing to back Mann when the time comes.

If the mayor's appropriation requests receive favorable votes in FinCom, Human Services' planned discussion of the Homer/Walnut resolution may quickly become a dead issue.

The committee's chairman, Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large Rodney Barker, is already on record as a supporter of Mann's concept.

Aldermen can expect the Executive Department to call in every available favor in an effort to move the project along and end the city's 40-year-old library debate once and for all.

On the other side of the coin, Mann and his aides can expect their opponents to sponsor every last-ditch effort in the book, including the available parlimentary manuevers of "charter" and "reconsideration," to block passage of the appropriation requests.

Those who want to see a library constructed within an existing city building could even boycott the upcoming votes in an effort to delay the day of judgment.

Whatever the outcome, the mayor's library plan will not only represent the city's greatest challenge in financial terms, but also Mann's greatest challenge in political terms.

In the end, he will need the same threshold of 18 votes to successfully pass his funding requests.

JCC announces fall programs

NEWTON — Beginning in the fall, the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston will be offering a range of activities for indivduals, of all ages, with special needs. Programs, including Jewish cultural activities, adaptive aquatics, and adaptive fitness, will be run by qualified special needs instructors.

These new groups are open to children, teens, and adults in the Greater Boston area, and will be held at the Leventhal-Sidman Jewish Community Center on the Gosman Campus in Newton and at the BBN Jewish Community Center in Brookline.

For further information about membership and registration, please call: Hyla Shapiro, director of special needs services, 965-7410, ext. 279.

Home care training

NEWTON — An opportunity to learn a marketable skill and at the same time help those who are elderly and/or ill remain at home is being offered by Health Care Plus, Inc., an affiliate of Visting Nurse Associates, Inc.

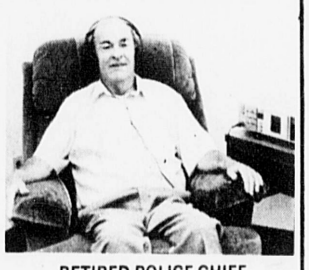

The non-profit home care agency serves patients who live in Newton, Brookline, Canton, Dedham, Needham, Westwood, Wellesley, Weston and surrounding towns.

A free, 40-hour training program begins Monday, Sept. 16, at VNA, Inc. headquarters at 1100 High St., Dedham. The program, which is open to anyone over 18 years of age, will meet daily between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

After successfully completing the course, trainees are eligible to be hired for a part-time or full-time work.

Helping those with habits

RETIRED POLICE CHIEF QUITS SMOKING ON ONE VISIT

Jim Curran, former Norwood Police Chief quit smoking after just one private visit to the Michelle Dyan Studio on Rte. 1, Norwood. Mr. Curran smoked for 44 years and was smoking 2 packs a day when he quit with this amazing new technique developed by Michelle Dyan of Braintree. He joins over 95 local residents who have "kicked the habit" without withdrawal or weight gain. Judy Walsh, owner of the Norwood studio explains that clients are very awake and alert at all times while using the new Audio Conscious methods of hypnosis. Most clients who have been unsuccessful with other methods of hypnosis are experiencing success with the Audio Conscious technique. All appointments and sessions are private.

Since opening the studio in Norwood, 95 smokers have used the Audio Conscious Hypnosis method and 81 have quit. There have been 73 weight clients with only three having difficulty in achieving their goals.

Other programs offered through Michelle Dyan Studio are: stress management, insomnia, nail biting, hair twirling, memory retention, sales motivation, and sports concentration.

Several clients using Audio Conscious Hypnosis as a method to improve their golf games have actually won tournaments by improving their swing and putting, concentration and performance.

For more information or to make an appointment call the studio closest to you between 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Jefferson to serve 9th term in Ward 3

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Like his counterpart, Ward 3 Alderman-at-Large Matthew Jefferson is running uncontested for the second straight election.

The 61-year-old Jefferson, a retired electrician now working as a property manager, will begin his ninth term on the Board of Aldermen in January.

He lives at 94 Adena Road with his wife, Lillie. They have three children — Richard 37, Paulette, 35 and Laurie, 29.

Jefferson is a member of the Black Citizens of Newton, the Andover-Newton Theological School and the Ward 3 Democratic Committee. He is also a trustee at Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Middlesex Community College.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: At one time, when I was first being elected in the city, I always thought that being uncontested was probably a disservice to the electorate because I think competition brings out the best in everybody. But sometimes, now that I've grown older, I'm thankful that I don't have to campaign to keep my seat. I try to look at it philosophically and tell myself that people are satisfied with me.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: On land use matters, I'm rather proud of the fact that the majority of our decisions turned out the way I would have wanted them to. They were reasonable and acceptable when I think about it in terms of the overall two years.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I would like to be a part of any gains that we might make in creating more rental housing in the city. I would also like to see some zoning changes. I don't think they need to be drastic, but just some adjustments are necessary. Since we have such a large surplus, I would like to see the schools be able to get most of the things they ask for within reason. This year's surplus indicates that if there was any shortage in the school program, perhaps some of the things we didn't do could have been done. I think we can scrutinize their budget a little more fairly without overdoing it.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: Absolutely. I have no problem with either of them being paid. As far as I'm concerned, $3,000 is a fairly reasonable level. The job does take time and I don't see any reason why, if the law allows for it, they can't get some kind of compensation.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: No I don't. I think that, based on the decision that we have made as a Board of Aldermen and a member of Land Use for a number years, I think where we have the problems is in those zones that now exist where people can build as a matter of right, but I don't think we should shut down the city because of it. Perhaps we could have gone right to it and corrected those things by getting the city planner to point out the problem areas. We didn't have to go through a two or three-month waiting period to do that.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: I think we're a fine city and, by all means, we should have a new library. As to where it's going to be located, essentially, I am of the opinion that as long as we are closing public buildings and disposing of them, we should use them. Perhaps opportunities have passed us where we could use one of them as the home for a new library.

My position is that, if it's humanly possible, we should use one of the other buildings we have. The only place left available is Warren Junior High School. I'm in favor of it simply because you can develop a first-rate library there to serve our needs and do it for $4 or $5 million less than a brand new library.

I believe that the issue of where the library will be is going to be more controversial than getting the money to put it together.

Tennant plans to begin twelfth term on board

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 3 Alderman-at-Large Robert L. Tennant, running without opposition for the second consecutive election, will begin his twelfth term on the Board of Aldermen in January.

Tennant, 56, is the president of the R.L. Tennant Insurance Agency in West Newton.

He lives at 189 Mt. Vernon St. in West Newton with his wife, Margaret. They have seven children — Robert, 35, Walter F., 34, Nancy M., 32, Sally A., 30, James. J., 29, Margaret A., 27, and John J., 25.

A veteran of World War II in the Pacific Theater, Tennant is a licensed pilot. He is past president of the Newton Kiwanis Club, vice president of the Kiwanis Charitable Foundation, a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery and a 32nd degree Mason.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: Disappointed. I think opposition is good for the soul. It gets you on your toes, brings out the issues and generally makes everyone more alert. A little argument and debate is good for everything.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of during the last term?

A: I would say the creation of additional housing through my work as chairman of the Administration & Planning Committee. The obvious need for a reduction of taxes has always been a goal of mine, particularly in the business sector.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: The reduction of taxes both for residents and businesses. I think that citizens, in general, end up bearing the brunt of these costs. The taxes get passed down. This hurts the pocketbook of everybody in the street.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: I have consistently voted against any kind of compensation for aldermen and School Committee members because I felt that, in as much as I had seven children taking up a lot of space in the city, I owed the city more than the average person did. Therefore, I felt that it was my public duty to more or less contribute in some way to the city. I honestly feel that an unpaid position produces a better person.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: Any sort of a moratorium is definitely going to hurt the average citizen of the city in view of the fact that, without the growth of income-producing properties, taxes would have to go higher. I believe the Zoning Review Committee will do the job better by ridding the city of antiquated zoning laws.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: There is no doubt, in my opinion, that we do need a new facility. I have been somewhat negative in reference to it because I'm not sure of the financial procedures that should be taken to furnish the money that's needed. I'm awaiting the mayor's explanation as to how he intends to finance it. I definitely believe that the city should not bear the full brunt of this and that a private fundraising campaign is needed.

in many more hours in a day than the average person does. I'll get into a 'work race' with anybody 30 to 40 years my junior. Most of them have trouble keeping up with me. I still run up the stairs.

"There is nothing I have that would diminish the role I play here. You've seen me arm wrestling, haven't you?"

Honored by the electorate in every single race he has ever run; honored by his peers with the mantle of leadership in just about every effort he has ever been involved in; blessed with a lovely wife, a happy home, five healthy, productive children and three grandchildren, Ted Mann's long haul from his birthplace in Jamaica Plain to the executive suite in City Hall, in many ways, represents the essence of "the American Dream" of self-determinism.

The Epsteins, the Goldbergs, the Mannevitches and the other ancestors who came to this country from Russia and Poland in the 1880s would have been hard put to dream a dream that approaches the day-to-day reality of Ted Mann's life.

While they might be boggled by his accomplishments, though, they would have to be proud of the manner in which he has brought his heritage forward into an undreamed of lifestyle.

The "haimischer mensch" still sees his home as the heart of his existence. He still includes a generous amount of "tzedakah" in his daily duties. His annual prayer breakfast amounts to an extremely well-orchestrated "minyan" involving more than 1,000 members.

That he perpetuates his father's belief in "service" as the measure of a man's worth is obvious to anyone who has turned to him in need. "For him (Honey) to know that, last week, I helped get someone into a hospital or a nursing home, that's my father's business," The mayor said recently. "That's right where he lives."

For all the honors that have been heaped on him over the years, it is obvious what matters most to the mayor when he comments, "I guess every kid looks for the approbation of his mother and father. It's one of the things that kind of keeps you together ...."

And he adds, in a low voice, that, if he could see his father now, "I think he'd probably give me a pat on the head and say, 'Good job, son. Keep up the good work.'"

Choose employee benefits by price, need

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

Until recently, I had no choice in the employee benefits I received from my employer. They were set, as in most companies. All that is about to change. My company is adopting what they call a "cafeteria style" employee benefit program, in which will have to choose from among a selection of benefits. What is the best way to evaluate the choices, and to make the most appropriate decisions?

S.W., Milton

It's a little like eating at home, where the food may be good, but where it's often unappreciated, and where the diners are often unaware of it's value. Go out to a restuarant however, and you find yourself having to pick and choose — and suddenly you become aware of the dollar cost to you of the meal you are about to order. What determines your choice is a combination of what looks good, and how much it costs.

Same thing with cafeteria style benefits. First, compare costs. How much would comparable medical, disability, or life insurance cost you if you didn't receive it as an employee benfit? If one item on the caferteria menu is employee contributions to a pension plan, what would the after-tax cost be for you to put away the same amount?

Once you've determined the relative costs, you will have an idea which benefits provide you with the greatest savings. The next step is to determine which items on the menu look good to you. For example, assume that you are married, and that your spouse receives family medical insurance as apart of a fixed benefit package. In this case, it probably make more sense for you to select somthing other than medical coverage from your cafeteria menu — unless the coverage available to you is far superior to what your spouse receives.

Your employee benefit department should be able to help you evaluate the options open to you.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

You suggesterd in a previous column that one's personai finances should be treated as a business. How would you go about doing this?

N.P., Auburndale

Some people think that having a constantly rising income is the most important ingredient in financial planning. Well, it might be nice to earn a six-figure salary — but if you spend it all in the course of a year, you're no further ahead in December than you were the previous January. And treating your personal finances as a business makes it a lot easier to remember that in the long run, what you save is more important than what you earn.

I would suggest that you start with a Personal Financial Statement that list your assets (what you own) and your liabilities (what you owe). The diffrence between these two figures is your net worth. And the ultimate objective of the long-range plan you formulate should be to increase your net worth.

The next step is to put together a cash-flow chart. This will show your income, and will also show your expenses. Done on a monthly basis, it will give you an excellent idea of where your dollars go — and will show you which expenses you make will allow you to increase the amount you save.

Any business needs a business plan — so do you. The effect of the plan should be mirrored in a projected Financial Statement and changing it year by year to show what effect your long-range plan (for example, the amount you saved or invested) should have on your net worth.

Theses suggestions (although brief and incomplete) will give you some idea of the positive impact that good planning can have on your finances.

How to run a day care camp

NEWTON — Aquinas Junior College in Newton is offering a workshop — How to Run a Day Care Center — to answer the questions of child care administrators, or those who will become child care administrators.

The workshop will focus on: program planning, budgeting and finance, nutrition and health education, state and local regulatory agencies and legal issues. Guest speakers in each of those fields will be featured throughout the seven-week workshop.

"How to Run a Day Care Camp," will be offered Thursday evenings, Sept. 26 to Nov. 14, 6:30 to 9:30 p.m.

For more information call the Center for Continuing Education at Aquinas Junior College in Newton at 969-4400.

A child care administrator of quality requires a wide variety of professional skills in organizing, planning and legal matters.

Cahners magazine ad pages win a first

NEWTON — EDN, a Cahners publication, has been named the number one business publication in ad pages, according to the Gallagher Report 27th Semiannual Business Publication Advertising Scoreboard.

For the first six months of 1985, EDN carried 3,182 advertising pages, which represents an 11.2 percent increase over the same period in 1984. EDN's first place win is a first for EDN and Cahners.

In appreciation of EDN's victory, members of Cahners management personally thanked each staff member with a crisp $100 bill.

EDN reaches more than 129,500 electric engineers and engineering managers in the electronic technology and products.

Travel firm allies

NEWTON — Total Incentives International, Inc., a service of Total Travel Communications of Newton and Travel Corporation of San Diego, Calif., will be working together on a national basis to offer marketing incentive services to Travel's franchises nationwide. The alliance will provide complete incentive travel and merchandise expertise, including marketing development; merchandise campaigns; meeting management; multimedia, film and video production and staging; and a fully computerized slide library.

Through the chain, the services will be marketed under the name Travel Total Incentives.

The agreement will be heralded by the opening of New England's first Travel Travel franchise in Boston later this year.

NeWell is new name

NEWTON — Rita Blakeney, president of the Board of Trustees, of the Newton-Wellelsey-Weston Visiting Nurse Association, announced that the name of their agency has changed to NeWell Home Health Services. The name was changed by the Board to reflect the VNA's affiliation with NeWell Health Corporation which took place in the fall. NeWell Health Corporation is a non-profit health care system based in Newton that includes Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The agency now provides a complete range of professional health care services for people who are just coming home from the hospital or who need home care in order to remain independent at home. The staff includes not only nurses, but home health aides, speech therapists, occupational therapists, physical therapists and social workers.

NeWell Home Health Services will provide care in Brighton, Brookline, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley, Weston and surrounding towns.

Hospice of Good Shepherd comforts

Named for the Waban Church where the idea originated, Hospice of the Good Shepherd is a non-sectarian organization which operates on a non-profit basis to cater to the terminally ill and their families and their physical, spiritual and emotional needs.

The dying person has many concerns: The fear of suffering, loss of family and friends, and the inability to complete life's tasks. The greatest task is to retain the dignity and integrity of the self throughout this time. The hospice emphasizes comfort rather than cure, and asks patients how they want to live until they die. For one patient, Hospice of the Good Shepherd inspired her to take new and creative risks with her painting. For another, the encouragement of a hospice music volunteer resulted in a series of holiday sing-a-longs in the patient's own home with friends and relatives. Most hospice care takes place in the patient's own home, where they are surrounded by the familiar. This care extends past the death and into the bereavement stage where grief is supported as a natural process.

Hospice of the Good Shepherd care is available to patients and their families 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Not only is hospice care now reimbursable under Medicare benefits, but an increasing number of major insurance companies reimburse for hospice care.

The Hospice of the Good Shepherd's 19-member staff includes the executive director, the medical director, social workers, nurses, home health aides, artists and musicians. Certified home health aides spend the largest amount of time with patients, giving family members a break by helping patients bathe or exercise, or by doing chores, such as laundry, for them. Social workers help clients and their families resolve what they have to do before they die. Invaluable to the hospice efforts is its corps of direct service volunteers. Specially trained, these men and women provide respite and befriend the family.

Men and women of all ages are eligible for hospice care. All referrals are accepted by patient/family consent, physician approval and certification by the Hospice of the Good Shephard's medical director.

The Hospice of the Good Shepherd office is located in the School of Nursing building adjacent to Newton-Wellesley Hospital. The Hospice of the Good Shepherd accepts referrals from Newton, Wellesley, Brookline and patients served by Newton-Wellesley Hospital physicians.

For more information, or if you would like to volunteer time working with patients or assisting in the Hospice of the Good Shepherd office call 969-6130.

Newton residents, Alberta Dugo, R.N., and Alyce Flynn, R.N., were honored recently by St. Elizabeth's Hospital for outstanding achievement in nursing. During award ceremonies highlighting Professional Nurse Week, Ms. Dugo received a Letter of Recognition acknowledging Committee Leadership on the Massachusetts Coucil for Middle Management. Ms. Flynn was recognized for Committee Leadershiip as Acting Co-President, St. Elizabeth's School of Nursing Alumnae Association. Photo A: Ms. Dugo, right, is congratulated by M. Jane Fitzsimmons, R.N., Director of Nursing at St. Elizabeth's. Photo B: Ms. Flynn is honored.

Dr. Diana Chapman Walsh of Newton has been appointed associate director of the Health Policy Institute at Boston University.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Walsh has been with the Institute since 1977 and has played a central role in the creation and expansion of its Center for Industry and Health Care. Also, she is associate professor of social and behavioral sciences and health systems at Boston University's School of Public Health. She is a published author, known for her work on, employee assistance programs, physicians in corporations and corporate smoking policies.

Newton resident and psychologist Dr. Dale Koppel has recently written and published "Where To Go And What To Do When You're Single And Living In And Around Boston," a 256-page resource book designed specifically for unmarried men and women. Says Koppel, "I designed the book to be more than a directory or listings. I wanted it to provide people with comprehensive information on a variety of resources in and around Boston."

Drs. Patricia Barry and Knight Steel taught a seminar June 27 on clinical geriatrics for the nonclinician. Sarah Greenberg taught a course on mental health and the elderly and Dr. Stanley Grabowski conducted a seminar on teaching older Americans.

Navy Lt. j.g. Marc A. Manzelli, a 1979 graduate of St. Sebastians School of Newton, was designated a Naval Aviator. Presentation of the "Wings of Gold" marked culmination of 18 months of flight training.

Manzelli's curriculum included basic studies in engineering and navigation, training flights and simulators, aircraft familiarizations, basic and advanced instrument training, extended navigation flights and landings aboard an aircraft carrier.

Dr. Arnoldo C. Hax of Newton and Dr. Dan Candea, co-authors of Production and Inventory Management, have been awarded the 1985 IIE-Joint Publishers Book-of-the-Year Award of the Institute of Industrial Engineers.

The award is given annually when merited to the author or authors of the outstanding book of the year on industrial engineering.

Dr. Hax is professor of management and head of the corporate Strategy and Policy Group at the Sloan School of Management of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is currently the chairman of the Sloan Fellows Program. He is a native of Santiago, Chile.

Alen P. Joslin, M.D., and George W. Lynch, M.D. of Chestnut Hill; and David Rothschild, M.D. and John W. Strieder, M.D. of Newton received 50-year pins, along with 82 physicians, from the Massachusetts Medical Society (MMS), the oldest continuously operating state medical society in the United States.

Bruce MacDonald, of the R.B. MacDonald Insurance Agency, Inc., of Newton Center, has been named to AEtna Life and Casualty's 1985 Corps of Regionnaires, according to Jay L. Marmer, CLU, ChFC, Marketing Manager for AEtna here.

Ruth Snider of Newton was awarded for outstanding contributions at the annual conference on "Human Rights of Individuals with Mental Disabilities." The conference was held at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on June 8 and was sponsored by the Department of Mental Health, Office for Human Rights and the Pike Institute of Boston University School of Law.

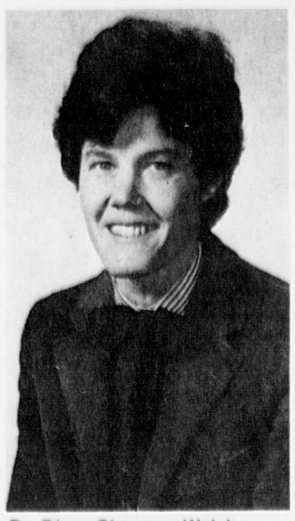

Snider is Human Rights Officer at the Paul A. Dever State School in Taunton for her consistent and strong advocacy for the rights of mentally disabled people and for her outstanding work and donation of personal time to establish and train Human Rights Committees.

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis announced the appointment of Sherry Swersky of Newton to the Massachusetts Technology Development Corporation (MTDC), board along with six others. The appointments will run to October, 1989.

MTDC is an independent public agency which provides venture capital financing to new and expanding technology-based companies in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Swersky is senior vice president, finance and chief financial officer of Cullinet Software, Inc., of Westwood. Prior to joining Cullinet, she was assistant corporate controller for American Garden Products of Boston and, before that, a member of the Coopers and Lybrand audit staff. Her academic degrees include a BA with honors from Simmons College and an M.A. in accounting from Northeastern University.

Steven S. Fischman was

elected to the board of directors of New England Television Corporation, parent company of WNEV-TV, Channel Seven, Boston.

Fischman and his wife Nancy live in Newton with their two children.

The Brother Edmund Ignatius Rice Chapter of the National Forensic League, located at Catholic Memorial High School in West Roxbury, has awarded its first honorary membership to Marie Marshall of Kerkstall Road, Newton. Marshall was honored for her years of service to the speech and debate programs of Catholic Memorial during her son's membership in Catholic Memorial Speech and Debate. The award was authorized by Brother James C. Tomoney, C.F.C., headmaster.

The Massachusetts Bar Association presented the MBA's first "President Award" to Attorney Theodore P. Orenstein of Newton for "extraordinary personal dedication and service to the MBA, to the legal profession, and to the public" at the Association's Annual Meeting in Chatham this spring.

Orenstein has held many leadership positions in the MBA including serving as member of the Board of Delegates, the Executive Committee, and the Long Range Planning Task Force.

While serving as a member of the Long Range Planning Task Force from 1983-85, he was the principal author of an extensive MBA survey of members of the Massachusetts Bar. He was also instrumental in developing a Long Range Plan which will lead the association through the next five years.

Dr. Benjamin Chinitz of Newton, Dean of the College of Management Science of the University of Lowell, was installed as President of the Bureau of Jewish Education of Greater Boston on June 11 in ceremonies at Temple Campus in Newton. The Bureau is the central consulting and planning service for more than 100 Jewish supplemental and day schools throughout Greater Boston.

Chinitz, an economist who specializes in urban and regional economics, succeeds Norman B. Cohen of Wayland who steps down after a three-year term. The author of three books including "City and Suburb: The Economics of Metropolitan Growth," Chinitz has served as a member of President Johnson's Task Force on Transportation Policy, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Economic Development for the U.S. Department of Commerce, Consultant to the President's Council of Economic Advisors (1966), and a member of the Economics Departments of the University of Pittsburgh, Brown University, and the State University of New York at Binghamton. He moves up to the BJE presidency from his post as chairman of the Program Committee. He also served as a member of the Committee on Communal Objectives for the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston where he also serves as a trustee.

Gerry Bazer

School committee race

College dean aims to 'restore confidence'

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If Gerry Bazer is elected to the Ward 4 School Committee seat being vacated by Susan Silbey — and it appears inevitable since the seat in uncontested — the dean of academic and student services at Massachusetts Bay Community College will work to "restore community confidence in our schools."

A resident of Grove Street, Bazer earned his bachelor's degree in education from Bridgewater State College and his master's degree from Northeastern University. Former co-president of the Williams School PTA with his wife, Bazer's list of post-graduate work includes a certificate for advanced graduate studies in adult education from Boston University and extensive doctoral work in community college administration at the University of Michigan.

Bazer said he was running because of his rich educational and adminstrative experience. "I've been a junior high school, high school and college teacher and counselor," Bazer said. "I even worked for Newton Junior College when it was part of the city's public school system during the mid-60s."

An educational administrator for 12 years, Bazer spent seven of those years as dean of academic affairs for Lasell Junior College before moving to Mass. Bay less than two years ago. "I have the ability to work with different constituencies — community people, teachers and administrators — that's what I've had to do in my role as an administrator."

Bazer feels the coming years for city schools will mean stricter financial constraints. "They (the coming years) are going to be very difficult as far as the budget is concerned. We'll have to establish priorities as to where to spend limited dollars from an educational standpoint."

Bazer's desire to provide quality education not only stems from his professional interest, but from his interset as a taxpayer and parent. Bazer has two children enrolled in the city's school; Nicki, a fifth grader at the William School, and Mark, a seventh grader at Day Junior High School. Improving the quality of education of his children and other city children is his major goal for the school committee this year.

"We have to reinforce educational excellence and concentrate on the teacher-students learning process in our schools," Dean Bazer said. One way of achieving this goal is to "reaffrim our commitment to teachers," he added. "They are the strength of the Newton school system."

Bazer said school closings are difficult decisions for everyone and he does not foresee the need to close anymore schools. "That's behind us," Bazer said of the closings. "It's time to get back to what schools are all about — teaching and learning."

Unlike several other candidates, Bazer said the tenure of committee members should be limited, and they should work without a stipend which will take affect Jan. 1, 1986.

"I strongly believe that if you took the total amount of money eight committee members would receive ($24,000), it would be used better if it was directed towards an instructional expenditure like an experienced teacher."

Robinson 'survives' through first term

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Unlike her election battle two years ago, Ward 4 Alderman-at-Large Carol J. Robinson will not have to worry about any competition when she runs for her second term this November.

Robinson, 49, lives at 2251 Washington St. and works as an administrative secretary at Honeywell.

She has three children — Robin, Shelby and Jeffrey.

Robinson is a member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Lower Falls Improvement Association and the Myrtle Baptist Church choir and gospel group. She is also on the board of directors of the Newton Boys Club and is chairman of the Club's personnel committee.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: It would have been nice to have some competition. It's always nice to have competition within the city I'm a highly competitive person. I always have been.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: I survived. I sincerely mean that because the way the board started out with the whole thing about Matt Jefferson, I just did not have a good feeling about it. It was a very lonely first year. Maybe the second year was a little better. Everybody sees their roles so differently in terms of what they do. I'm beginning to see that in order for me to accomplish anything in the field of housing, I'm just going to have to get a little rough. I'm learning how to get what's needed for the city and, if I have to get rough with it, I sure will.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I'm going to work harder in terms of presentation. Some of the people on the board really do present well. I just would like a lot more technical presentation, so I'm going to work on that when I go for my master's degree.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: Yes, I think they should be paid because I think even if it's one dollar, there's accountability there. When people don't receive anything for what they do, they're more susceptible to other kinds of things. They may feel at one point that people owe them something. I think $3,000 a year for what they do at night is fair.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: No, I don't ever believe that business should be stopped.

Carol J. Robinson

There are people that need jobs. I will never do anything that would ever stop people from gainful employment. I'm concerned about the survival of the small business community.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: Yes, the city definitely does need a library. It hurts my heart everytime I have to approve money in thousands for that building down in Newton Corner. I'm not fully convinced it should go across the street from city hall. I see nothing wrong with the Warren Junior High School.

The only race in Ward 4

Newcomer challenges incumbent Shea

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Acorn Drive resident Polly Bryson, although a newcomer to the city's political scene, brings a wealth of community experience to her bid to unseat Ward 4 Alderman Carol Ann Shea.

The 51-year-old Bryson is president of the Auburndale Community Association (ACA), co-founder and co-chairman of the Newton Neighborhood Network, co-chairman of the Riverside Watch Committee and a member of the Ward 4 Democratic Committee.

She is also a member of the North Auburndale Community Development Advisory Committee, the Newton Mayor's Prayer Breakfast Committee and a former member of the citizens' reuse committees dealing with the former Auburndale Yard and Warren Junior High School.

Bryson, the widow of veteran city employee Robert Bryson, has two daughters — Jacqueline Bastien, 32, of Exeter, N.H., and Robin, 27.

She works as an accounting manager for the Howard Insurance Agency in Auburndale.

Q: Why do you believe you're the best candidate for the job of Ward 4 alderman?

A: Because I have been in touch with the people through my presidency and long association in different posts with the ACA since the late 1960s. I grew up in Auburndale, married a fellow from Newton, raised my two daughters here in Newton and have always worked in Auburndale. I feel as though I'm in tune with the residents and business people in Auburndale. I would like to represent them on the Board of Aldermen as I have attempted to do in my different posts in the ACA.

Polly Bryson

Q: What's one thing you think your opponent failed to accomplish last term?

A: I believe that my opponent has been nonresponsive to the needs of the citizens in Ward 4 in that I don't believe she advises them when a situation or a concern is coming before the Board of Aldermen. The people aren't given time to act and work within the system. Instead they have to react many times when it's too late for them to take a constructive stand on an issue that will affect them. I don't believe that she is in touch with the everyday citizen out in the streets.

Q: If elected, what one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I think what I would like to see would be citizen involvement more at city hall and more within the system of our city government. I would have the knowledge to get to people so that they can be aware of how their city government works and they can use it to their best advantage. They are the people paying the taxes. They should have input in every way possible.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: Yes, I do because I think that a good alderman or School Committee person does put a lot of time, energy and effort into their endeavor if they truly represent the people. I would like to see people from every walk of life represent the people in Newton. The pay should not be less than the $3,000 they receive now, but, certainly, I would consider more of a stipend if someone is truly putting a lot of time into it.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: I defintely do feel as though we need a moratorium. We need it as a breather. We need to say, "Halt," until the zoning laws are revised. I see Newton moving toward becoming a cement city. I don't want us to move ahead because buildings don't get torn down once they are up. It would give us a breather until we the citizens really know what we want our city to become. I would say it should last only as long as it takes for the zoning laws to be revised. It doesn't need to be a long range thing.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: I question whether or not it needs a brand new library. I do believe the existing one needs to be replaced, but no one has really convinced me that it would not be more responsible, from a financial standpoint, to use an existing public building for our library. Why not Warren Junior High?

Shea offers experience as aldermen president in re-election battle

Carol Ann Shea

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 4 Alderman Carol Ann Shea brings her tenure and experience as Board of Aldermen president into her re-election battle.

Shea, who lives with her family at 215 Auburndale Ave., will be shooting for her sixth term as local legislator.

Q: Why do you believe you're the best candidate for the job of Ward 4 alderman?

A: I think I have the most experience. I have shown responsible representation to the community for the last 10 years.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: It was fairly important to me to be on the new reuse committee and to have established a new process for the reuse of surplus city buildings. It was also important to me to have been on the Land Use Committee.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I guess finally seeing a reuse for two sites in the city. One would be Warren Junior High School and the other would be the Auburndale Yard.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: I think they both should be paid. What we're paid now is probably okay. You can never be paid for all the time you spend and I think the School Committee should be compensated equally.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: No, I really don't because I think we're looking at the zoning laws, it's being done right now and I don't think a moratorium would facilitate that in any way. I just don't think it's necessary.

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: Yes, the city needs a new library. My first choice would have been the Warren site, but that's clearly a dead issue at this point. The only place a new library is ever really going to be built is the Homer/Walnut site.

Re-election should be a breeze for McGrath

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Ward 4 Alderman-at-Large Richard J. McGrath, the Board of Alderman's top vote-getter in 1983, will breeze into his seventh term on the Board of Aldermen this year.

He lives at 1617 Washington St. with his wife, Joan. They have five children — Jack, 23, Mike 22, Patty, 21, Christopher, 20, and Timothy, 19.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: I'm surprised by it. I enjoy campaigning. I will miss that this year. I get a lot of information from it. The way I get an indication that I'm doing a good job is the vote I get each election. If people like you, they vote for you. That's the only test.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: I think my ability to review the proposed appropriations and my homework has allowed the Board of Aldermen to make other decisions than the city departments have asked for. That resulted in better programs at substantial savings. I saved the city $40,000 on the reconstruction of the Newton South High School track and I saved the city $50,000 when the police radio contracts went out to bid.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

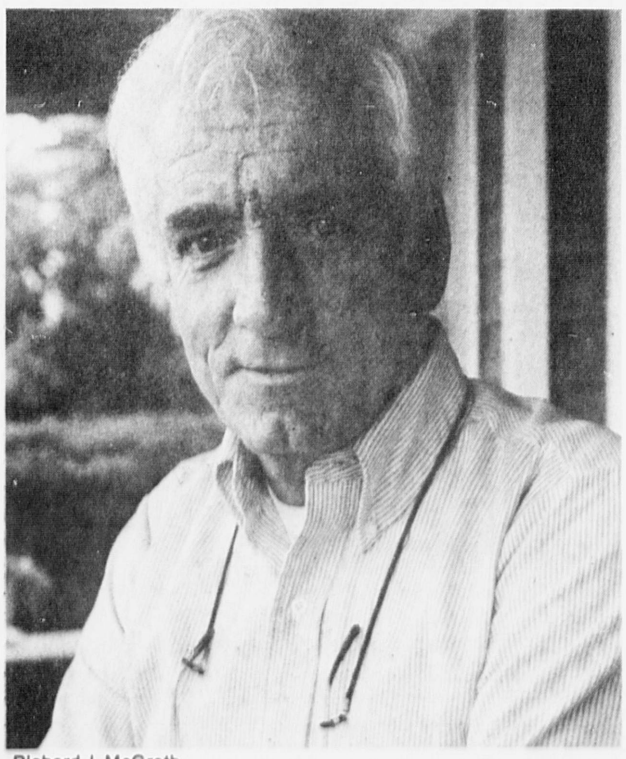

A: I'd like to have the Board of Aldermen acknowledge that active participation and controversy is something that belongs in the board and should be part of every aldermen's activity. I want to get us away from this clubiness where we get along with each other and forget about the public business. City Hall was built so that people of different opinions can come up and express them. That's the one place controversy belongs.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work and, if so, how much?

A: They should be paid because I think that society recognizes you get what you pay for. If people put in the effort and make the sacrifices, they should be paid for it. I would say anywhere from $2,500 to $5,000 would be a fair amount of compensation.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until the zoning laws are revised?

A: Yes. We can always build, but once the bricks and mortar are in place, we have to live with it for the next 100 years. There are mistakes being made now that will affect the quality of life in the city for as long as my children are alive. If we wait a year and do it right, I think that's a good investment over the long run.

Richard J. McGrath

Q: Does the city need a new library and, if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: The library we have is a disgrace. I believe that the best site was to join the piece of property next to the library in Newton Corner with the existing site. That is the ideal site. The city missed its opportunity. We could have bought the same property (developer Jack) Antaramiam bought. It's a scandal that we didn't. The corner of Homer and Walnut streets is the worst site in the city. If it's built there, we're going to see the commercialization of one of the prettiest sites in the city. A library could go at the Hyde, in the police station and courthouse complex, which is too small for its present use, or in the Warren.

Campus notes

Cadet Charles T. Suitor, son of Richard F. Suitor of Tremont Street, Newton received practical work in military leadership at the U.S. Army ROTC advanced camp, Fort Lewis, Wash.

The six-week camp, attended by cadets normally between their third and fourth year of collefe, includes instruction in communications, management and survival training.

Volunteers sought for counseling

NEWTON — Region, Inc. a family counseling service and mental health clinic serving Newton, Wellesley, Waltham and six other suburban communities is beginning its 15th annual drive to recruit new volunteers for its highly successful Parent-Child Home Program.

Parent-Child Home Program volunteers spend four to six hours a week working with 2- and 3-year-old children from low-income families. Using carefully selected educational materials, volunteers are trained to use special teaching techniques to foster cognitive development. Volunteers also work toward improving and enhancing the parent-child relationships.

Volunteers receive an initial 12 hours of training and then meet in weekly group supervision meetings led by professional social workers. Training begins Oct. 8 and placements are in Newton, Wellesley and Waltham.

If you are interested in volunteering please call Ronni McMillan, LICSW at 965-6200.

Renta Yenta does it

By Ellis E. Conklin

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Do it yourself? Why bother with people like Lila Green around?

Dealing with the dreary, onerous details of life is her speciality. With a splash of imagination and a feverent aim to please, she'll take care of everything.

Everything, from walking the dog, folding the clothes to arranging for a violinist to play a cheerful tune for a sick friend at the hospital or making sure the theater tickets are waiting at the box office.

Green has pioneered the art of saving you time. Just name the chore and she'll name the price, and bingo, it's done.

For the past 13 years, her personal service firm, Renta Yenta, has made a playful mockery of the do-it-yourself hoopla that is rapidly yielding to what-can-you-do-for-me?

Green, a mother of five who operates the business out of her home in Encino, Calif., got her start by dressing her son up as a gorilla and dispatching him to a seaside birthday party for Sonny and Cher.

"My husband told me in the beginning that this sort of thing was the stupidiest thing he'd ever hear of," Green said with a deep rolling laugh.

Stupid or not, Green's has turned Renta Yenta into a million dollar business.

Her motto: "Renta Yenta does it all if it's legal and it's kind."

And, one could add to that — delightfully zany too.

"Once I had a client who came to me and said his wife was bored and wanted something to spice up her life," Green recalled. "So I hired a marching band and sent it right into the supermarket where she was shopping to entertain her. It was quite a present."

The man paid for $500 for that trick, which one can assume his wife will remember forever.

Business flourishes on do-it-yourself trade

By William H. Inman

DALLAS (UPI) — In a topsy-turvy age in which a plumber earns more than his accountant and appliances come easier to install than to operate, there's been a revolution.

People want to do everything themselves: install their own sinks, plug in their own hot tubs, repair their own showers and commodes — and go to the bank flush with extra cash.

To cater to the do-it-yourselfers, a new type of business has emerged — a industry tailored to provide hackers with the tools, confidence and advice to tackle just about any home project.

Home Depot Inc. of Texas is one of them.

"We sell 26,000 items, and have a different project for each item," said Jeff Wells, a Dallas store assistant manager. "It's all part of the home-repair explosion. It's likely to continue great guns."

The reasons are obvious.

"The price of labor remains high compared to the price of actual goods," he said. "And people more and more often just don't want to wait for somebody else to install something. They want to do it themselves, and enjoy doing it."

Perhaps most crucial to the revolution has been the increase in consumer confidence.

"People were forced by labor costs to install their own faucets and pipes. They now know they can do these things. They have the courage to try again."

The do-it-yourself genre stores provide not only the equipment — neatly packaged with ample instructions — but offer the expertise.

"We have a 30-foot rack stocked with nothing but instructive, how-to type books," said Wells. "We also have members of our staff who will answer any questions.

After all, not all repair jobs go as planned.

"When a home-repairman gets stuck he just gives us a call, and we tell him how to get out or who to call to help him out of his bind."

Packaging is something special.

"There has been a revolution in the way things look in recent years. The manufacturers know they are dealing with the do-it-yourselfers. So you no longer see the plain boxes. There's more information on the box, and it's more related to the consumer than the contractor.

"Let's face it, a plumber doesn't need instructions to put in a vanity, but a consumer does. Some faucets now even come with floppy record player disks. You play the record for instructions on installing the equipment. It becomes fun."

Favorite projects?

"Most people seem to be going heavily into bathroom remodeling. Toilets, tubs and sinks are fairly simple objects and do not require complicated plumbing. Besides, there are new methods that simplify hookup procedures.

"Outdoor decks continue to be popular. Now you can buy the pressure-treatred lumber, straight cut to specific dimensions. All you do is hammer the lumber together."

Finished kitchen cabinets are favorites for home customizers as are garage wall racks.

What about tools?

"The bare minimum is a set of screwdrivers (including a Phillips head version), a pair of pliers, a hammer, a crescent wrench, a hand saw and an electric drill. With those tools, and nothing else, you can handle 90 percent of home repairs, almost any job.

"You can buy other mechanical aids — power saws, drill presses — but all they do is add speed. You can do the basics with a shoe-box full of tools."

Finding qualified contractor

By Gregg Howard
Copley News Service

When it comes to plugging energy leaks in a house, many home owners are competent do-it-yourselfers. In fact, many energy-efficient home improvements are perfect do-it-yourself projects.

But there are times, whether for lack of time or lack of inclination, that home owners prefer to pass household improvements on to a professional contractor. Some local building codes may require that home improvements be handled by professionals, especially if the improvements pertain to wiring or plumbing.

Finding a qualified professional remodeling contractor need not be a difficult or unpleasant task, according to the National Association of the Remodeling Industry, a trade association whose members pledge to follow a strict code of ethics that calls for professionalism and integrity.

The association offers the following guidelines to help select the best remodeling contractor for your needs:

— Employ a contractor with an established business in your locality. That way the quality of workmanship can be checked through past customers.

— Ask for local references and follow up on them. Call the references and ask if they were satisfied with all aspects of the contractor's performance. Go out to the local Better Business Bureau to see if there is an adverse file or record.

— Get two or three bids for the work you need, but don't blindly accept the lowest. Ask a contractor why the bid is so low or so high. Sometimes a higher price may be worth it. Have a thorough understanding of the quality of material and the workmanship required.

— Get everything in writing, including what the contractor will and won't do — such as daily cleanup or cleanup upon completion of the job.

— Think carefully before signing a contract. If something isn't written in the contract, you probably won't get it. Do you understand everything? Are you getting what you really want? Are you paying a fair price?

For a free booklet from thm association on how to select a professional remodeling contractor, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: NARI, 1901 N. Moore St., Suite 808, Arlington, VA 22209.

News in brief for the home

By Copley News Service

Car costs more than home — An average American household spends 24 percent more for energy to operate motor vehicles than for energy used at home, according to an Energy Information Administration survey.

It shows that the average household spent $1,317 in 1983 on fuel to power vehicles, and $1,063 for all energy used in the home. About 85 percent of American households own one or more motor vehicles for personal transportation.

The households paid an average of $1.18 a gallon for motor fuel during the year. — CNS

Fridge window's a saver An insulating window for home refrigerators is made of a special glass that's opaque and mirrorlike under normal kitchen lighting but becomes transparent when a light inside the refrigerator is switched on. This enables a person to see refrigerator contents without an energy-wasting opening of the door. — CNS

Mexico is oil-rich Mexico's crude-oil reserves are estimated at 30 billion barrels. — CNS

Electricity use soars Since 1973, the United States has cut overall energy consumption by 15 percent, but annual use of electricity has increased by more than 30 percent, said James J. O'Connor, president of Commonwealth Edison. — CNS.

U.S. No. 1 in N-plants The United States has 83 nuclear power plants. The Soviet Union ranks second worldwide with 37. — CNS.

Quick heating test — Fuel consumption can be reduced if heating equipment is working at peak efficiency. A competent heating serviceman can test the efficiency of equipment in 20 minutes or so and give specific recommendations for improvement, if necessary. — CNS.

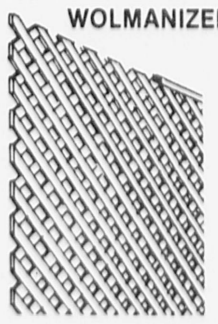

'Better Heating' pamphlet — Choosing a home heating system is an important decision. To help you decide which system is most suitable and economical for your family — hot water, hot air or electric heat — a 15-page pamphlet outlines differences and similarities. For the pamphlet, Homebuyer's Guide To Better Heating, send 25 cents to the Better Heating-Cooling Council, P.O. Box 218, Berkeley Heights, NJ 07922. — CNS.

Real crisis in wood For more than one-third of the world's people, the real energy crisis is the struggle to find enough wood to cook food. — CNS.

Energy a house uses A modern house occupied by a family of four uses the equivalent of about 46,000 kilowatt-hours of energy a year, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said. — CNS.

Using the hull thing The energy content of sunflower seed hulls measures higher than that of an equal amount of soft coal. A large plant in Fargo, N.D., that crushes the oil from 1,200 tons of sunflower seeds a day is fueled by burning the hulls. — CNS.

Police briefs

Bicycle stolen from Auburndale home

AUBURNDALE — A bicycle was stolen from a home on Central Terrace, according to police. The crime was reported at 12:50 p.m. Saturday.

Camera reported stolen Saturday

CHESTNUT HILL — A camera was reported stolen from a home on Commonwealth Avenue, according to police, who were notified at 1:10 p.m. Saturday.

Fined $77.50 for disorderly conduct

NEWTON — Donald Casey, 21, of Newton, admitted sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding last week in Newton District Court on a charge of being a disorderly person on Aug. 2. He was fined a total of $77.50.

Judge hears not guilty plea last week

NEWTON — Joseph F. D'Angelis, 50, of Newton, was arraigned last week in Newton District Court and pleaded not guilty to charges of driving while intoxicated and driving without a license or registration. The case was continued to Sept. 5.

Alfa Romeo slashed on Merton Street

NEWTON CORNER — An Alfa Romeo parked on Merton Street had its plastic rear windshield slashed and a fire extinguisher stolen from inside, according to police, who received the report Monday. The owner of the car told police he thought the theft must have occurred between 7 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday.

$2000 of goods missing from Mazda

NEWTON CORNER — A Harvard student from Anchorage, Alaska, told police on Monday a stereo and a green duffel bag containing a parachute, helmet and jump suit were stolen from his car while parked at 320 Washington St. Police said the 1982 Mazda was entered by tampering with the locks. Total value of the stolen goods was $2,000.

Blackjack state lottery tickets missing

OAK HILL — A book of Blackjack state lottery tickets worth $300 was stolen from the Oak Hill Variety Store on Saw Mill Brook Parkway last week.

Convertible's roof cut, radio ripped out

NEWTON CENTRE — A Mandalay Road resident found the radio in his car had been ripped out of the dash, but left on the front seat, according to a police report received last week. The man told police the convertible top to the car had been cut. When he discovered the attempted theft, he noticed the car doors were still locked and the car alarm still set, leading police to believe the would-be thief entered and exited through the roof.

Residents' teamwork saves motorist

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Social worker Barry Anechiarico and psychologist Daniel Kriegman have worked together for years to help troubled people overcome their emotional problems.

Last week, their long history of teamwork paid off when the two residents freed a seriously injured Brockton man pinned in the crushed hulk of his overturned van.

"Dan and I have been partners, in a sense, for years. We consider ourselves sort of a team. So, it's interesting that we sort of teamed up again in this situation. I attribute it to team spirit," Anechiarico, a Lower Falls resident, said last week.

The heroic rescue occurred as the 34-year-old men made the typical morning commute to their jobs at the Massachusetts Treatment Center for Sex Offenders in Bridgewater. Anechiarico is the center's clinical program manager and Kriegman, who lives in Oak Hill, is the director of training and supervision.

"We were driving south in the middle lane on Route 24 near Brockton. There was a red van in the right lane and a sedan in the left. They both merged into the center lane at the same time and collided. They were both trying to regain control and kept banging into each other," Anechiarico recalled.

"The sedan did a number of 360s, complete spins, and ended up in the median. Meanwhile, the red van was swerving back and forth. It finally lost control, spun three times and ended up on the side of the road upside down on its roof," he said.

> 'People are saying that we're heros, but I just feel as though we did what had to be done.'
> — Barry Anechiarico

Anechiarico's vehicle was about five car lengths behind the chaotic scene. He and Kriegman pulled over and ran across the highway to the overturned van during a gap in the heavy rush hour traffic.

"We were the first ones on the scene for a good couple of minutes. It was a pretty tough situation. We weren't sure whether the van would catch fire. There was oil dripping from the engine. The windows were totally smashed," Anechiarico said.

The driver, Robert A. Hanflig, was also in bad shape.

"Blood was pouring out his nose and his foot was trapped underneath the steering column. He was yelling, 'Help me, get me out of here. Why did they do this to me?' He was sort of delirious, but he kept crying for help," according to Anechiarico.

"The van looked totally unstable. Nobody was doing anything to help, so I finally decided to crawl in the broken window on the passenger side and try to free this guy's leg. It was really crushed under there," he said.

Anechiarico struggled with a crowbar to try to relieve the pressure on Hanflig's damaged limb, but soon realized he could not budge the twisted metal without help.

"I yelled, 'Somebody get another crowbar and help me get him out,'" he said.

That's when Kriegman, the other half of the "team," climbed in the driver's side window to help his "partner."

The strength of both men finally freed Hanflig at the almost exactly the same moment an ambulance arrived.

"I asked him, 'How is it?' and he said, 'I'm in a lot of pain, but I'm happy my foot is out because that was scaring me the most.' He ended up with his foot pretty smashed up. The ambulance attendants were very careful in moving him," Anechiarico said.

The two men finished the commute to work, unaware they would later be dubbed "heroes" for their efforts.

"It's interesting the thoughts that lingered with me. I wish I could have done more for him sooner. People weren't sure what to do. The guy was suffering in such a horrible way. I just wish that it didn't happen to him, but I'm glad I was able to help," Anechiarico said.

"People are saying that we're heros, but I just feel as though we did what had to be done," he added.

Senior cookout Sunday

NEWTON — That time is here again for us to show our older folks that we never forget them. This is the one of the most important charitable functions of the year, the Senior Citizens cookout. Our purpose is to try and bring a little joy and cheer to our most important people, the elder folk.

The cookout will be held Sunday, Sept. 8, 1985, from noon till 7 p.m. at Hawthorn Park-Hawthorn Street, in Nonantum.

Our program will feature continuous entertainment for the entire day including Dot Slamin Hill's American Legion Band-Waltham; The Nonantum Hobo Band; Steve Parks Square Dancers; The Maria Scalzi Dancers, Watertown; Freddie Tagg and the Treasury Notes; Miss Judith Pearl and her exotic belly dancing group; Leo Minervini and his cowboy and yodeling ensemble; and Monk Pelli and the Legends, Elvis Presley impressions.

Along with all of this entertainment, which is volunteered, we expect to have with us representation from all of our armed forces groups.

The menu, which will be prepared by members of our association, consists of: quarters of chicken, hot hamburgers, grilled hotdogs, potato salad, tosssed salad, corn on-the-cob, cantalope, watermelon, home-baked cake, cookies, potato chips, ice cream, doughnuts, candies, coffee, tea, and "spirits".

For ride locations or information call: Joan Pellegrini - 969-8526; Domenic Bianchi - 965-0961; John Webber - 527-2896; Chester Leary - 969-9193; Hawthorn Recreation - 552-7126; Newton Recreation - 552-7120; Francesa's Pizza's - 527-9602; "Fat" Pellegrini - 254-1901.

The event is sponsored by the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association.

Parent aide training begins in September

NEWTON — Parenting can be a tough job. Parent Aide programs around the country have been successful in helping parents get through difficult times and better manage and enjoy their children.

A new training session will begin in September at the Parent Aide Volunteers Program at the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. The center provides professional training, supervision and reimbursement for transportation and babysitting.

Jeffrey and Betsy (Kirschbaum) Weinberg

Betsy Kirschbaum marries Jeff Weinberg in Newton

In the gardens of the Pierce House, Lincoln, Mass., Betsy Ruth Kirschbaum and Jeffrey Harland Weinberg were united in marriage on June 30, 1985. Rabbi Samuel Chiel of Temple Emanuel, Newton, officiated.

The groom, also a graduate of Boston University, is president of Harland Marketing Associates, Inc. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M.M. Weinberg of Lowell. His best man was Alan Kirschbaum, brother of the bride; and his corps of ushers consisted of David Mattluck, Douglas Hoffman, Roger Sener and Elliott Schneider. Master Joshua Barsell was ring bearer. Mr. Weinberg is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cohen and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weinberg.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Kirschbaum of Chestnut Hill, is a graduate of Boston University. Her grandmother, Mrs. Florence Kirschbaum, was present. The bride was attended by Ellen Vash, maid of honor and the bridesmaids were: Diane Barsell, Jane Ford, Candace Gordon, Felice Weinberg. Flower girls for their cousin were Hannah and Sarah Yorra of Plainfield, Vermont. The bride's dress was ankle-length French lace with scalloped wrist and hemline, and she carried a giant pink rose and wore rosebuds and baby's breath in her hair. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yorra and Mr. Morris Kirschbaum.

Ms. Kirschbaum and Mr. Weinberg are now residing in Sudbury.

Janet Corcoran/ Thomas Gorman

Janet Emily Corcoran and Thomas Walter Gorman were married at St. Paul's Church in Cambridge on Aug. 24. A reception followed the ceremony at the Harvard Club of Boston.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Corcoran of West Newton graduated from Middlebury College and Boston College Law School.

The groom, son of Judge and Mrs. Walter Gorman of Binghamton, N.Y., graduated from Holy Cross College and the Amos Tuck School, Dartmouth College. They will live in New York.

New officers

Dr. Eli Grad, back row left, president of Hebrew College of Brookline, and Leon Brock, chairman of the Board of Trustees, officiated at the installation of the newly elected officers of the Hebrew College Women's Association, which each year raises scholarship funds for the school. Officers are, left to right, Jaimie Stolper of Newton, vice president; Evelyn Naigles of Brookline, president; Lila Lief of Newton, vice president; and Rose Bronstein of Brookline, chairman of the installation.

New arrivals

A daughter, Danielle Breanne Beatrice, was born Aug. 6 in Newton-Wellesley Hospital to Jeanne M. Fraser of Newton Upper Falls.

A daughter, Bevin Rose, was born Aug. 9 in Newton-Wellesley Hospital to David F. and Carol (Kennedy) McCarthy of West Newton.

A son, Jeffrey Daniel, was born Aug. 15 in Newton-Wellesley Hospital to John O. and Carol L. (Del Gizzi) Caruso of Newton Upper Falls.

Support for couples

The Jewish Family Connection of Temple Israel, Boston, is sponsoring an on-going monthly support/discussion group for interfaith couples. Led by a Licensed Social Worker and an Outreach volunteer, these free sessions will begin Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Sisterhood Room of Temple Israel, Longwood Avenue and Plymouth Street in Boston. For more information, call 566-3960.

Sending announcements

The Newton Graphic welcomes announcements of anniversaries, births, engagements and weddings along with black-and-white or good contrast color photographs. There is no charge. Call Lauren McFalls 329-5000 weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. for further assistance.

NEWTON — The Newton Free Library Camera Club's annual photography show opens with a reception and slide show Monday, Sept. 9, 7-9 p.m. in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner. All are welcome.

The show includes photographs by club President Tom Duncan, Jim Sarat, Lorraine and Jack Keogh, Jim Henley and Paul and Rhoda Mann.

Photographs by Don Crasco, Helen Eddy, Steve Coffly, Earl Kochenderfer, Larry Schaefer, Ann Purple, and Carol and Al Nason will also be included.

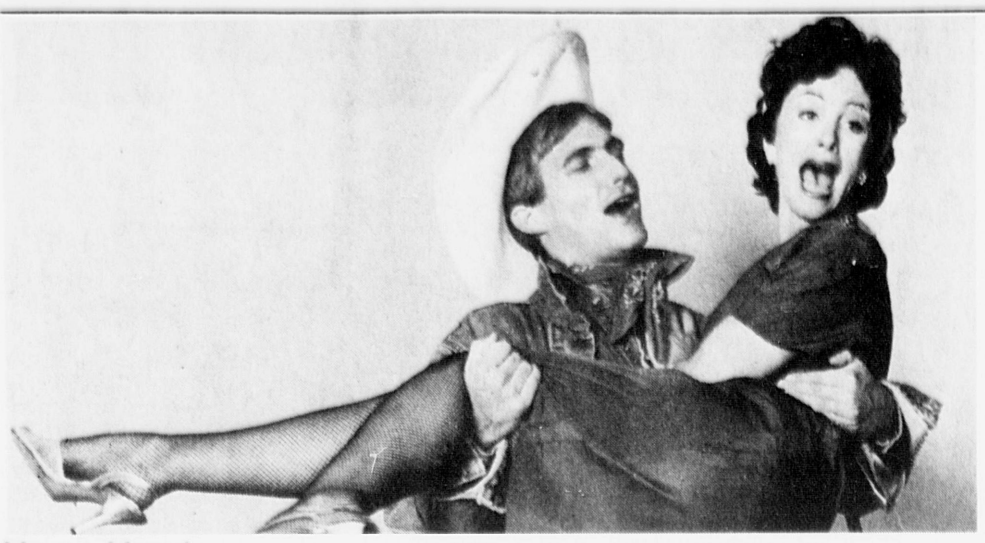

The Newton Free Library Camera Club is a community photography group which has been meeting since 1969. The club welcomes skilled photographers as well as enthusiastic novices.

The club is affiliated with the New England Camera Club Council and the Photographic Society of America. Its programs include field trips, photographic competitions, guest speakers, workshops, group shows and lectures.

Meetings are held twice a month on the second and fourth Mondays at the the Nonantum Branch of the library, 144 Bridge St. The next meeting is scheduled for Sept. 23 at 7:30 p.m.

For more information call James Sarat at 969-9637 or Tom Duncan at 969-8865. The show continues through Sept. 30.

Library hours are Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Friday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Saturday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. After Sept. 16, the library will also be open Saturday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday, 1-4 p.m. Call 552-7145 for more information.

Yeee-Haw!

A wild, young cowboy (Jonathan Niles) tries to abduct Cherie (Kathryn Lubar) in a scene from William Inge's comedy "Bus Stop." The show will be presented by the New Repertory Project, Sept. 13-Oct. 6, at the Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newton. Performances will be Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 2 and 7 p.m. Tickets are $8; $6 for members of the Newton Arts Center; and $5 for senior citizens and students with identification. For further information or reservations, please call the Center at 964-3424.

'Magic Factory' at library Sept. 4

NEWTON — "Books are always important to magicians," declares Hank Lee, magician and owner of the Magic Factory in Boston. A special selection of objects from Lee's "Magic Factory" will be exhibited at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, Sept. 4 through Sept. 30.

"A magician can buy one million tricks or one book," says Lee, who started with magic as most do, with a small magic trick he bought when he was a youngster. Today his business is 10 years old.

Lee's customers, professionals and amateur dabblers in the art of Blackstone, Houdini and Henning, come from all walks of life and mail in order requests from all parts of the world.

Lee and the Magic Factory offer much more than the standard magic shop fare. For starters, callers telephone him from all over for his recommendations for magical entertainment for events ranging from children's birthday parties to business conventions.

Through it all, Lee takes time to amaze and entertain customers with his own brand of magic. He says he'll never overlook the opportunity to perform, because being a magician takes him back to roots. That's where it all started, the tricks, the routines and the realization that there was money to be made with the right kind of magical wholesale and mail order business.

Currently, Lee says, the Magic Factory is one of the nation's top 10. The demand from magic shop proprietors and magicians for Lee's thousands of effects is so great that he has opened his own manufacturing operation to produce some of the more popular items.

"I'm always looking for new ideas," says Lee. "I'll always listen to someone with a new effect or routine. You'll never hear about good new items if you don't listen. The best effect hasn't even been invented yet. When it is, I'll be in line waiting for it," he grinned.

And he still loves to do magic. "I still do about 20 shows a year. Sometimes the jobs that come up are just too good to pass up," he says. "The New England market's a really good one for magicians."

The Magic Factory publishes three or four books a year. Lee and his "elves" also develop five to 10 new card tricks and about six large items each year.

Hank Lee also puts out a tongue-in-cheek "Book of Magic" catalogue. The original art and copy in the book, combined with the slightly offbeat way of advertising in which Hank raves about his elf workforce, attracts many customers.

For more information on the exhibit call 552-7145. The Main Library hours are Monday-Thursday, 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Friday 9 a.m.-6 p.m., Saturday, 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Beginning Sept. 16, the library will also be open Saturday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and Sunday, 1-4 p.m.

General Cinema to pay $750,000 fine

NEWTON (UPI) — General Cinema Corp., the nation's largest movie theater operator, has agreed to pay a $750,000 fine for violating antitrust laws in bidding on films in Indiana, a published report today said.

The Boston Globe reported the company was charged with dividing up the South Bend, Ind., market with other theater operators from the spring of 1982 to December of 1983.

According to the Justice Department, General Cinema officials and other theater owners in the area agreed who would negotiate, without competition, for films being distributed by motion picture studios, the newspaper reported.

There was no estimate of what losses the studios suffered as a result of the arrangements — known as "splitting."

As part of its plea agreement filed in U.S. District Court in Chicago Wednesday, the Justice Department agreed not to bring further criminal charges against the company for past activities, General Cinema officials said.

"Splitting is a violation of our company's long-standing policies and we have dealt appropriately with the individuals involved," said Paul R. Del Rossi, president of General Cinema's theater subsidiary, GCC Theatres Inc.

Coach Peter Capodilupo addresses the troops during practice

North boasts depth at running back

Tiger defense must improve

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — There's depth at running back, questions at quarterback and receiver, but it's not the offense that concerns Coach Peter Capodilupo in the early days of Newton North football practice.

Rather, the coach is more concerned about a defense that allowed teams to "average five yards a carry on first down last year. One of our goals is to be better defensively on first down."

The Tigers have a week of practice, and defense is where the emphasis lies. With 80 candidates out and several freshmen joining during the past few days, Capodilupo is encouraged with what he's seen so far.

"We seem to be stronger than we were last year," said the second-year coach. "The kids have been working on weights. We tried to stress that during the off-season."

The off-season emphasis on building strength has to pay off for North to better its 3-7 record of 1984. During Capodilupo's rookie year, the Tigers stayed close in several games but were worn down by the fourth quarter against stronger clubs.

"We weren't strong last year," he admitted. "Our goal is to be stronger defensively."

It's going to take some work for the Tigers to push anybody around, because Dave Redmond and Joe Fresolo are the only two players on the squad who top the 200-pound mark.

They'll help key the defensive line, along with end Scott Lancilotti. John Flynn is a sure bet at linebacker, one of the few spots with proven talent on defense. Evan Galanis and Dimitri Diatchenko both boast experience there as well. Few other positions are really solid at this early stage.

Offensively, Capodilupo isn't as worried, despite the hole left by the graduation of quarterback Rusty Halloran. There are no fewer than four candidates trying to grab that spot.

The logical progression would see senior Mike Ryan stepping in. He did a solid job as the junior varsity starter last fall. But Capodilupo isn't closing out any options, and plans to give the other three challengers a lot of time in the preseason to see what they can do.

Junior Nick Mariano backed up Ryan on the jayvees and started the sophomore games. He looks very capable. There are also a couple of very talented sophomores in Joe Proia and Scott Lennon, who could come on strong.

"That battle is wide open," said Capodilupo.

Many positions seem to have that kind of head-to-head confrontation going on, which pleases the coach. He feels that battles in the preseason will help toughen the eventual winners for the opening bell.

"Competition for positions will be important," he stressed.

Whoever wins the QB job will have no lack of runners to take the heat off of him. The Tigers are deep and talented in the backfield, with several veterans back. In fact, the coach has already said that he may be moving some of those backs to other spots to get his best athletes on the field.

Leading the way are the captains: Chris Rutan, John Flynn, Otto Mariano and Britt Ryan. All but Ryan are running backs.

Rutan heads the list. The number three rusher on the team last year with 295 yards, he is big enough to play fullback and fast enough to play halfback. Where he winds up may depend on who his running mate turns out to be. Capodilupo calls him "our offensive leader in the backfield."

Owning the inside track for that other job is probably junior Mark Adams. The little halfback was second to Geoff Drew in rushing in 1984 with 356 yards, as he averaged more than four yards a carry. He was also second on the team in scoring.

Mariano saw limited action at running back, but also averaged over four yards a pop last season. He's certain to be a fixture in the defensive backfield.

Flynn is built more like a fullback, where he'll either complement or back up Rutan, again depending upon who else is there. Flynn was a regular last season on defense at linebacker and should be a force there as a senior.

Adding to that list are folks like Milt Britton, Tom McMillan and Josh Carpenter. The latter was a standout for the junior varsity, while Britton and McMillan played for the freshman team. Britton in particular shows promise of being a key cog in the North attack for the next few years.

The receiving corps might be one spot to benefit from the overstock at running back. That group was devastated by graduation and will need some help.

Outside of Rutan, who caught 13 passes coming out of the backfield, the top receiver back is Britt Ryan, who hauled in seven. Even he's not much help at the moment, out with a pulled muscle that may sideline him for a couple of weeks.

That opens the door for just about anyone who shows he can hang on to the ball. Dave Gates probably has a good shot at one job. Though he only caught one pass last year, it was a TD toss. Most of the time he played junior varsity, where he showed a lot of promise.

"We have some kids who can catch the ball," said the coach.

One area where the Tigers must improve upon last fall is depth. Not only because of injuries, though those are always a concern; the Tigers simply had too many athletes going both ways last year.

"We have to get some kids off the field both ways," admitted Capodilupo. "For us to succeed, several of our sophomores have to play this year. Our sophomores are just the kind of kids you want to back up the kids who have experience."

Considering the talent at running back and the inexperience at quarterback, the Tigers may have a more conservative look on offense this season.

Last year North, largely out of necessity, threw the ball quite a bit. That will change, though the Tigers still won't be a straight-ahead, power team.

"We've worked a lot in the off-season on different things," Capodilupo said. "We'll use more of a sprintout attack.

"All of our quarterbacks have speed...We seem to have speed in our backfield...We want to attack the outside a little quicker."

Not to be overlooked is the inexperience in the offensive line, which should have less trouble protecting a sprintout quarterback than setting up a pocket.

Though the coach will know more after Saturday's 9:30 a.m. scrimmage at Milton, Right now the Tiger grid boss thinks "we can replace those kids who scored touchdowns. Offensively we'll be okay.

"The defense will be the key to our season. If we're not better we'll have a long season."

Legion MVP award claimed by Ryan

Catcher Colin Ryan was presented the Most Valuable Player Award Wednesday at the Newton Post 440 athletic banquet in honor of the Post's three area baseball teams held at the Nonantum Post 440.

Players and coaches from the Post 440's American Legion, Stan Musial, and International League teams were on hand for a spaghetti dinner. The Legion team was the only club to present awards.

Ryan, a Newton North standout, has gained not only local praise as a superb receiver, but has also attracted the attention of the Montreal Expos.

In a recent tryout, Ryan performed well enough to cop a five-star rating from Expo scout George Biron, the highest rating in the book.

George Sherman, Ryan's Legion coach, said the Expos told him that the catcher will be followed throughout college and evaluated further this fall. Ryan will attend the University of Maine this September and has the ability to contribute to the fall baseball program.

Pitcher Steve Chapman was presented the George Norcross Memorial Award given in recognition of a "good attitude, fine demeanor, and overall enthusiasm", according to Sherman.

The plaque is presented in memory of Norcross, a former catcher at Newton North who started the Legion team two years ago. He died suddenly last winter.

Peter Noone, a 15-year older from St. Sebastian's, was awarded the Rookie of the Year. After winning the starting catching job at St. Sebastian's last spring, Noone was forced to play back-up to Ryan. When Noone did play though, he filled the gap to Sherman's satisfaction.

The 10th Player Award went to Tom Casey, who racked up a 4-0 record on the hill for Newton. His fourth victory came in the season finale, a 5-2 win over first-place Natick.

Sherman also presented Gold Gloves to three players.

Centerfielder Matt Noone earned the prize for his spectacular diving and running catches throughout the year, first baseman Jeff Sherman was presented the award for his stretches at the first bag, and second baseman Chuck Proia won a Gold Glove for his steady play in the infield.

Lion lacrosse team will depend on defense first

The switch from an offensively potent team to a conservative defensive team is a drastic one, but it's a move Paul Murphy will make next season as he tries to lead his 15-3 Newton South lacrosse team to its third consecutive Division II State Championship.

"Our strength next year will be defense," said Coach Murphy. "This year we were all attack but next year we'll get a lot of scoring from the midfield, at least at the beginning of the season."

When your entire front line and the team's top three scorers graduate, any coach would switch to defense. Dave Kowal and Matt Ranen, both 50-point men, and Peter Murphy will move on to bigger and better things after graduation, leaving a huge void in South's offense.

All three seniors punched home at least 20 goals (a combined 79 goals), leaving next years' squad with only one player who scored more than 30 points: Whitney Dorf (19 goals, 12 assists).

Neil Schwartz, who played on the top line with Kowal and Fred Bowers, will be one of the other top middies returning, as will Dave Abrams and Mark Millender.

Chris Berwind and Alex Olin, who will both be seniors next year, head a list of supporting cast members, and along with JVer's Paolo Sepe, Andy Katz, and Paul Callanan, hope to contribute in the midfield.

"I think we'll be right in the thick of things with the defense we have," Murphy said. The coach's main concern is the attack position, where it would be safe to say that South looks to be weak.

Ranen, Murphy, Garth Bloch, Alter, Scott Passman, and Dean Sultanian all graduated in the spring, leaving no one for the coach to count on.

Cosgrove golf tourney due Sunday at Wayland

The 24th Annual Charles H. Cosgrove Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Sunday at the Wayland Country Club. Included is an awards dinner to be held that same evening at the St. Bernard's Hall in West Newton.

Started in 1962, when 16 golfers played to honor their late alderman and golfing friend, the tourney has grown annually and is now at the point that about 120 golfers compete and 135 attend the dinner.

Ten years ago, enough money was raised to award a West Newton youth $200 in scholarship money. This year, a $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to a deserving West Newton or Ward 3 resident. The total amount of money so far awarded surpasses $17,750.

Both of these, a fun day of golf with old friends and the award of a $1,000 scholarship, are the things that Charlie Cosgrove would have truly cherished.

The tournament winner is the low net score and there has never been annyone to win more than once. The low gross score has been won five times by Len Devane of Waltham and five times by Tom O'Rourke of West Newton. The lowest scores of the last 23 years were the 69's turned in by Devane in 1965 and by Dan Curtis in 1976.

Applicants for the scholarship award must be residents of West Newton and Ward 3, enrolled in or accepted at a college or junior college, or nursing program. Scholarship applicantions are available at the office of the scholarship chairman, Dr. Benjamin L. Antonellis, 130 Walnut St., Newtonville, MA 02160, and must be returned to him by a September 2, 1985.

Co-chairmen of the event are Edmond White and Paul Burke. Val Milideo is serving as golf chairman and Billy Hannan is ticket chairman, along with Larry Sprow. Dick Cronin is banquet chairman.

The cost of a ticket is $35.

Persons wishing to donate to the scholarship fund may do so by contacting the treasurer, Ed White, at 70 Rowe St., Auburndale, MA 02166.

Newton soccer players excel in County play

Five Newton boys helped the Middlesex County Select Soccer team to the best record in the state in the Boys 12 and Under Division of the Massachusetts Olympic Development Committee with a winning record of eight wins, one loss and one tie during the 1985 season.

Doug Cobb, Billy FRuhan, Matthew Fruhan, Matthew Laufer and Stuart Savage, all 12 years old, traveled with the Middlesex County Select team across the state to play other select teams from Plymouth, Hampden, Worcester, Essex and Norfolk counties.

Center fullback Laufer led the defense for the Middlesex team; halfbacks Cobb, Savage and Matthew Fruhan played the midfield, and Billy FRuhan left wing.

Rollins to lead young Lion squad

By David Cuddy
Sports Correspondent

The excitement in his voice is clearly evident. Art Kojoyian is as happy as pig in mud. It's football season, and Kojoyian's Newton South Lions have just finished their first day of double sessions.

"I saw a lot of good things out there today," said the veteran coach entering his 10th season at the helm. "The kids we're going with are young but I think they'll do the job. There's no question we'll make mistakes but we've got four weeks before our first game and a lot will be straightened out.

"We haven't lost yet and we're going to go out there and play some ball. I think we're going to have a little fun."

On a down note, senior captain Mike Levine has been lost for the year after a car accident early last week severely injured his hands. Levine, a 220-pound offensive lineman, broke both hands and a wrist and will be "really missed," according to Kojoyian.

"Levine could have really helped us out," Kojoyian said. "He's a big kid and he's one of the few experienced players we've got."

Levine was among four senior captains on this year's team and his injury knocks the list of tested players down to three. Among the remaining three, though, is veteran tailback and DCL All-Star Kevin Rollins, last year's Division III leading scorer with 122 points.

The 190-pound senior is "one hell of a ballplayer" according to Kojoyian, but his stats speak for themselves.

Rollins gained over 1,000 yards in '84 despite missing two games with an ankle injury. His 4.9 yards per carry were second only to fellow all-star Darvell Huffman (graduated) and his 19 touchdowns were more than the rest of the team combined. He should have some fun with the pigskin this year.

The fun for everyone began Monday, Aug. 26, with about 60 rough-and-tough hopefuls looking for a job, and it just so happens the job market at South is knee deep in openings.

Kojoyian had to let 16 seniors go last fall and will be breaking in a very inexperienced squad. The coach estimated that "some 20 sophomores and some 20 freshman" were on hand Monday.

Beside Rollins, Kojoyian has two other senior captains with valuable hands-on training. Converted guard Jonathan Linder will fill one of the tackle positions and will see action on both sides of the ball.

The 205-pound lineman certainly has the size and know-how to lead the boys in the trenches and his performance on the field will be a key to South's success.

Lining up in the backfield with Rollins is David Mosby, a 210-pound fullback who will break into the starting corps this season.

The senior captain played last season in the backfield but was primarily used as a blocking back. If it turns out he can carry the ball, Mosby will be an excellent accessory in an already-strong backfield.

Another senior, Seth Oliver, is playing his first season and will most likely see tackle duty alongside Linder. At 190 pounds, Kojoyian said a steady performance from Oliver is just what the team needs.

Seven juniors with on and off playing time round out the list of returning players.

Aaron Harrell saw limited action as a back last year and Kojoyian said the small junior could start on defense. Jeff Brewington also played last year and could break into the starting lineup as an end along with Kris Tyler.

John Hillis played defensive end at times last season but will make the jump to offensive guard this fall.

Kojoyian said he has high hopes for 165-pound Dominic Costa, a first-year junior center, and George Sapp, a 240-pound bruiser who could become a valuable addition to the defense. Steve Yeradi rounds out the list and could start at one of the guard spots or as a linebacker.

The quarterback spot is up for grabs now that All-Star Steve Altman has graduated. What Kojoyian has to work with is three prospects (two sophomores and a freshman) with no varsity playing time. Most coaches would agree that breaking in an inexperienced quarterback is not the ideal situation to be in, but look what Brockton's Tom Colombo did.

As a sophomore, Colombo led Brockton to an undefeated Super Bowl season and will start his third year behind the line this fall.

Kojoyian said the inside edge at South has to go to sophomore Ben Burlingame. A tall and lanky rookie, Burlingame played freshman ball last season and the book on him is fair.

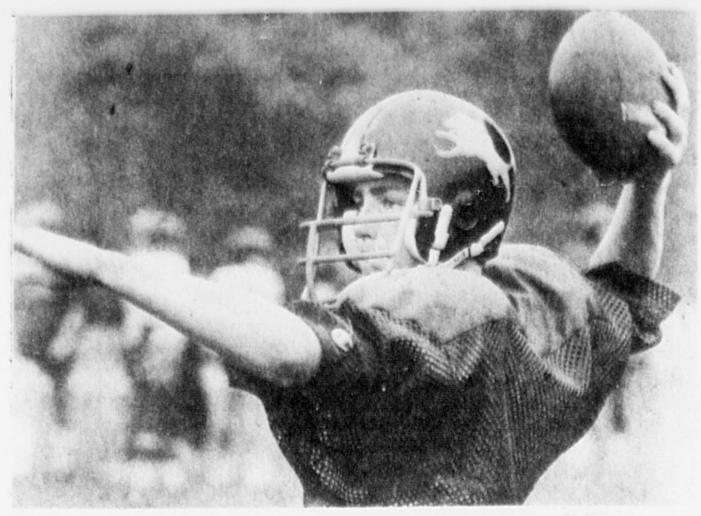

"He's got a good arm and he's picking things up pretty well," Kojoyian said after a one-day look. "He's going to have to do it and I think he can. He seems to have the poise."

Sean Brady, the other sophomore hopeful, "shows a lot of promise," according to the coach. A Pop Warner player last year, Brady has a few lessons to learn, said Kojoyian.

Freshman John Spagnuolo "is a very good prospect" and his dedication and enthusiasm will make for an interesting situation.

"You can't go through a season with just one quarterback," Kojoyian said. "I'd have to say Burlingame has the inside track as the starter but we're going to need another."

Robert Hillis, a sophomore, was mentioned as a probable starter on defense by Kojoyian after the first day's practice. The 160-pounder is the younger brother of junior John and could play linebacker.

McPhee to coach Northeastern nine

BOSTON — When Northeastern University Director of Men's Athletics Irwin Cohen was looking for a baseball coach that knew how to win, he didn't have to look any farther than the school's Varsity Club.

The vice-president, a guy by the name of Neil McPhee, just happened to be an ex-Husky two-sport star, an ex-minor league ballplayer, and most importantly, a baseball coach who could boast 16 winning seasons and only one losing one.

Cohen had to go through the process of winnowing down some 40 applications, but he knew he had his man and made it official last Thursday when he named the former Newton South mentor the Husky coach.

"The timing was perfect," said McPhee, a Waltham native. "As it turned out, I've been actively in search of professional advancement in the two areas I'm involved in, in education as an administrator, such as an athletic director position, or in coaching a position such as this."

Thursday's phone call to McPhee's Natick home ended a process that began at the end of June, when he heard about the opening through the baseball grapevine.

The last of several interviews came "about a week and a half ago," according to the new Husky head honcho. By that time, the original list of more than 40 applicants had been narrowed down to "a couple."

McPhee admits that he's "not familiar" with the talent he's inheriting at Northeastern, "except what I've gathered over the last two weeks. I hear that it's a talented group of athletes...(but) very young.

"I'm looking forward to getting started."

Toward that end, McPhee is already trying to get together a fall schedule, despite his late start. He's "in the process" of trying to contact area coaches so he doesn't have to wait until the spring to see what he has to work with.

Last year, the Huskies were 14-19 under outgoing coach Charlie O'Malley, who held the position for four years. That squad lost just one player to graduation.

Northeastern's gain will leave a large void at Newton South. Coaches who win 16 years out of 17, and make the tournament 11 times in that span don't exactly come by the dozen.

The Lions won three Dual County League titles during his tenure, and shared the top spot last spring with Acton-Boxboro. They reached the semifinals of the Eastern Mass. Tournament twice.

The season just finished was called one of "the most gratifying" by McPhee.

"Basically the same team that was co-champ this year was the team that had the only losing record in 17 years. I was very pleased for the team itself, because nobody likes to break a string of good records and not have a chance to redeem themselves. They proved they were a talented group of players."

Neil McPhee

Fittingly enough, McPhee's first year on the job is probably the other one he remembers the most.

"We had a tremendous group of athletes: Tom Rezzuti, Jim Gamble, Frank Hurwitz. That team lost to Newton North in the quarterfinals of the tournament. Prior to the loss we played 13 innings in a tie that ended because of darkness. We ran out of pitching the next day and they beat us."

One other group that sticks in the coach's mind is the team that went to the semifinals "about five or six years ago." That group included Steve Mosca, Mike Kasten and Mike Pappas.

In addition to certain teams, every coach has a few players that stand out over the years. Some of McPhee's include Peter Cappadona, now in the Red Sox farm system at New Britain ("he was an outstanding pitcher for us"), Rezzuti ("one of the greatest"), Kasten ("a fantastic athlete"), Steve Altman ("terrific") and Joe Spagnuolo ("he's another one").

"They were a cut above," he said. "It's nice to have a few of those around."

McPhee also has a soft spot in his heart reserved for the Mosca family.

"The Moscas as a family have to be one of the fondest memories. Steve, Dave, Bob and Mike, the four Mosca boys, were synonymous with Newton South athletics."

More than individuals though, McPhee will miss "the type of player we had over there. We never seemed to get a good number of superstar-caliber athletes. We got the type that was a real worker. They did their job day-in, day-out and really put forth the effort."

Untested North girls confident

Not too often will a coach admit to feeling completly confident about moving a large group of underclassmen into the thick of things. But listen to Barry "Fuzzy" Howland for five minutes and it becomes clear why the Newton North girls' soccer coach is so relaxed.

Howland is sporting six freshman and three sophomores on this year's North squad, and he can still hold his hands out as steadily as ever thanks to a youth soccer program that has mass-produced talent for the last decade.

The Newton Youth Soccer League annually pumps out close to 1,000 talented booters for both of the city high schools and the hard work has started to pay off over the last few years.

"Its not the fault of the older girls," explained Howland, "it's just that the youth soccer program has been outstanding in developing real talent."

The bottom line is that the upcoming freshman and second-year sophomores are not experiencing their first taste of real competition when they hit high school. Most girls have been playing the sport since second grade.

Which supports Howlands' preseason indication that North "has depth in all areas."

Despite losing half of last season's starting team (which swept through the league with an unscarred 18-0 record), Howland can still claim depth at every position.

The coach welcomes back 14 letter winners, only six of them seniors this fall, and rolls out the red carpet for a medium-sized entourage of newcomers.

Fair is fair, though, as Howland said. His seniors will contribute. Most of them have more than a few years of playing experience behind them, whether it be in high school action or the highly-competitive youth program.

In fact, senior Captain Carolyn Natale is possible the best all-around athlete on the team. At the center halfback position, Natale should make things happen. Her 12 points last season were fifth on the team.

Kristen Hughes is back for her final season, coming off a 12-goal year in '84. Howland is high on Hughes' ability as a goal scorer and calls the senior the major offensive threat on the team.

Hughes can shoot with both feet, something that the youth programs are developing with good success. Her aggressive play allows her to roam inside, where she can work in crowds, or hang back and shoot from outside the 18-yard mark, where she can be equally effective.

Marion Mann has developed herself into a stronger, more aggressive player over the summer, according to the coach, and will play alongside Natale at midfield. She is aslo a senior.

Carol Ventura will get a chance to put in a full season's worth of playing time. A versatile senior captain who could see action at every position, Ventura missed most of last season with mono, but is expected to return to her tough, aggressive style this fall.

On defense, senior Captain Becca Locke, sweeper Kendra Daley, and stopper Janet Burke will protect a pair of senior goaltenders.

Liz Speliotis and Laura Yellen split the duties in goal as juniors last season and will do so again this fall. Howland said Speliotis has excellent ball control and plays the breakaway very well. Yellen was a standout goalie last year, never allowing a goal in 15 games, and is expected to pull a repeat in '85.

Howland can again thank the youth program for a large flock of returning juniors who last year, as sophomores, saw regular duty.

Heading the list, Ann Meng is a strong set-up type player who will play up front and create a lot of opportunities, said Howland.

Kendra Daley played sweeper in '84 but will be pushed to midfield this year. Robin Greene should see action at fullback along with Stephanie Koontz, and Amy Drew ("she's improved tremendously") will play wing and halfback.

Rachael Sabbag is coming off an "excellent camp" and will contribute at halfback, Tiffany Heanue will use her quickness to her advantage at one of the wing positions, and Marilyn Schultz is a "smart player" and could play midfield.

Maria Farrar will keep the two senior goalies on their toes as she threatens for an occasional start between the posts.

Sophomore Angie McKenna made her presence felt as a 9th grader last year, scoring 11 goals and finishing third on the team in scoring with 17 points.

Between McKenna and Hughes, North's strikers should do the job offensively.

Sharon Salter, another sophomore with playing time as a freshman, has the potential to become a sleek scorer, according to Howland, and Diane Tormey prefers to pass the ball off for goals and will contribute.

Among the highly touted freshman, Rachael Schultz and Amy Satter could play the most important roles.

Satter is a fast, goal-scoring striker who, like Hughes, can shoot with both feet.

Center halfback Heather Hughes and sweeper Rebecca Howland are, according to the coach, the players of the future. Both have the potential to become all-stars and can play excellent all-around soccer with a good knowledge of the game.

Maria Fellows rounds out the list of freshman, and Howland said she has excellent skills and is a strong ball handler.

North will open the season against a pair of newcomers to the Suburban League. On Sept. 10, the Tigers will play at Medford and will open at home on Sept. 13 against Peabody. Both teams come over from the Middlesex League.

The champs

Troubadour wins crown

Troubadour erased an early three-run deficit to come away winners Thursday, 10-6 over Heshal Club, to sweep the Newton Softball League Championship played at Cabot Park.

Six runs in the bottom of the first completed a three-game sweep for Troubadour.

Heshel had edged out in front, 3-0, going into the bottom of the first but Troubadour stormed back with six runs to reverse the lead.

A Kevin Miller three-run homer began the six-run rally. Mike Nolan and Dave Prince both scored on the homer, a missle to left-center.

Larry McGrath and Andy Moore both singled home runs and Moore scored on an error to end the frame.

The summary:

TROUBADOUR(10)-Nolan 3-1, Prince 3-0, Goodfellow 3-3, Miller 3-3, Lewis 2-1, McGrath 4-2, Greenwood 3-0, Moore 3-1, Loree 3-1, Boudreau 0-0. Tot. 27-12.

HESHEL(6)-Grodnitzy 2-0, O'Neil 4-1, DiPietro 4-1, Role 4-2, Reid 3-1, Brownstein 4-1, Aronson 4-0, Davis 3-0, Schwartz 2-0, Goodman 0-0, Keohane 0-0. Tot. 30-7.

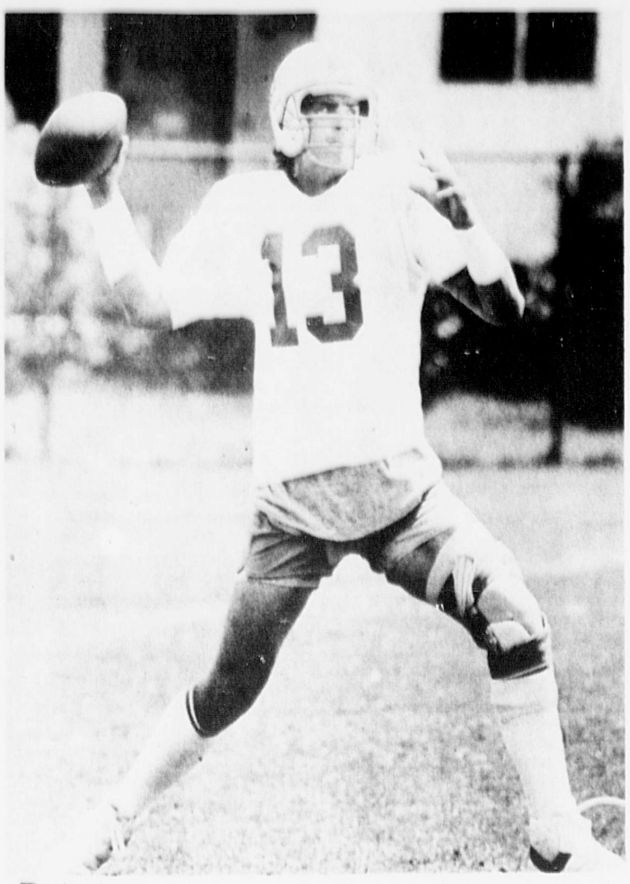

Score by innings:

Heshel.....301 000 2- 6-7
Troubadour.....601 111-10-12

2B-Lewis, McGrath. 3B-Nolan, Reid. HR-Miller, Loree, Role. WP-Boudreau. LP-Goodman.

Newton Tag Football has openings

There are still two open spots for teams in the Newton Men's Tag Football League. Those interested in entering a team in the circuit or desiring further information should contact Joe Connors at 552-7120.

Returns

Miami Dolphin quarterback Dan Marino throws with determination during his first full practice Monday since he walked out of camp on July 24th. Marino said he came back because of the team, the fans and his love for the game after an 18-day walk-out over a contract dispute. He hopes to be prepared for the season opener against Houston next Sunday.

5 South players lacrosse 'stars

To the surprise of absolutely no one, Eastern Mass. champion Newton South dominated the Division 2 South lacrosse All-Star team, which was recently announced by the circuit's coaches. Five Lions earned spots on the 14-man team.

Next in line was Acton-Boxboro, which lost to South in the Eastern Mass. finals by one goal. The Colonials had three All-Stars named.

Waltham put only one player on the squad, midfielder Pat Kavey.

The five players that South had reflected the talent on the squad that was spread from the net all the way out to attack. The Lions were represented at each position, and had two middies make the squad. What may be even more intimidating to league coaches is the fact that three of the South All-Stars will be back next spring.

Matt Ranen was one of four attackers placed on the team. There were six midfielders named, with Whit Dorf and Dave Kowal representing South.

On defense, Seth Oliver made the mythical unit, and, for the second year in row, Alex Levine was the All-Star goalie.

Acton-Boxboro's All-Star strength was concentrated on offense, with attack Brian Lukacz and middies Tom Bouvier and Steve Colby all on the team.

Though the team wasn't quite as successful as Newton South or A-B, Wayland also put three names on the team. Attack Bill Nixon, middie Chip Hazard and defenseman Josh Blake were cited.

Rounding out the squad were two players from Hingham, attack Brian Sullivan and defenseman Tom Dedian.

Newton South also had attack Peter Murphy named as an Honorable Mention. The number two goal-scorer on the team with 26, Murphy was the Lions' Comeback Player of the Year.

The area players on the first team:

Matt Ranen: The number two scorer in the league with 24 goals and 26 assists for 50 points, Ranen was called "an outstanding lacrosse player" by his coach, Paul Murphy. Though he doesn't have great size, the 1985 graduate is very quick. He has a nose for the net, as the 24 goals would indicated, but he's unselfish enough to be a very good feeder in front. He and Kowal waged a duel for the scoring title all season, but many times they would get points on the same play when one would feed the other.

Ranen, who also played varsity soccer at South, will be attending Harvard where Murphy thinks he'll have a chance at playing more lacrosse.

Dave Kowal: This big, strong middie finally won out in the season-long duel with Ranen for the scoring championship. He finished with 29 goals and 25 assists for 54 points, just ahead of Ranen. Four points was about as wide as the margin got all season, as the two usually were within one point of each other.

The team's Most Valuable Player was as good a one-on-one player in front as there was in the league. Murphy called him "an exceptional dodger." Once Kowal got loose, the goalie was usually at the mercy of his hard shot.

South's other senior All-Star, Kowal was recruited by Yale to play lacrosse and he's taken them up on the offer.

Whit Dorf: Though the Lions' other All-Star middie posted 31 points on 19 goals and 12 assists, it wasn't his scoring that got him on the team. Dorf contributed to South's championship in a variety of ways. His expertise in faceoffs was an integral part of the effort, as Murphy called him "outstanding" in that phase of the game. Like Kowal, Dorf boasts a hard shot. He came on to play extremely well in the playoffs when it really counted.

Only a junior last spring, Dorf also is a member of the varsity gymnastics squad.

Seth Oliver: Another senior-to-be, Oliver sparked South's superb defensive unit. He always drew the toughest assignment, taking on the opposition's best scorer. More often than not, Oliver won his individual battle while South was winning the war.

Oliver was exceptional at clearing the ball, and was at his best in the big games. The 185-pounder is a three-sport man. He plays football and wrestles in addition to lacrosse.

Alex Levine: Next spring as a senior Levine will have a chance to achieve something rather rare — being named to an All-Star berth for three straight years. It's even more impressive considering that this isn't one of those leagues that names three or four goalies to the All-Star team. There's only one, and for two straight seasons, Levine has been it.

"He's just outstanding," said his coach. "He comes up with the big saves."

Levine knows what to do with the ball once he gets it too. He's an outstanding passer, and more than once this season used his speed to get the ball upfield himself.

There's no question that he'll be one of the top goalies in the state next spring.

Pat Kavey: Though the Hawks had a tough season, Kavey was superb. He has "real good skills," according to Waltham coach Ed Boudreau. "He plays the midfield position real well."

The '85 grad led the club in scoring with 17 goals and 9 assists for 26 points.

Kavey, who also played hockey and football at WHS, is an exceptional student as well as an athlete.

The all-stars:

Attack

Matt Ranen, Newton South; Brian Lukacz, Acton-Boxboro, Bill Nixon, Wayland; Brian Sullivan, Hingham.

Midfield

Defense

Goalie

Alex Levine, Newton South.

Respect goes with Winkler

By David Cuddy
Sports Correspondent

Even if you have never met the man, the good word from others is enough to impress you. George Winkler is a very well-liked and respected man.

Winkler, ex-football and wrestling coach at Newton South High School and athletic director at the school for the past 12 years, has announced that he will be stepping down from his administrative duties.

The former Boston University three-sport star and native of Troy, N.Y. underwent triple by-pass heart surgery last spring, surrendering his AD duties for the remainder of the school year, before deciding to retire.

"It was a dificult decision to make but it was a time in my life when I thought I should move on," Winkler said. "Retirement hasn't really hit me yet. It's still like a summer vacation. I think when school starts up again it might become a reality. I'm retired."

Retirement for Winkler will not be just any old day at the beach, he assured. The 58-year-old Magnolia resident (Winkler and his family moved from Newton about a year ago) is now working for a real estate company in Gloucester and also operates a stained glass business with his wife Jeanne.

Winkler said he also plans to polish the old golf clubs and head out to the greens after a 30-year layoff from the sport.

Future plans include a vacation to Hawaii in November and visits to Florida and Arizona in the near future.

Change might come as a surprise to a man who has spent a good 30 years in the same business, and the change will undoubtably affect the people George Winkler worked with.

"George is someone whom everyone likes and respects," said Dr. Ernest Van Seasholes, Principal at Newton South since 1973. "He's a real gentleman, he truly is. I'm terribly fond of George and I hate to see him go."

As a professional, Winkler's administrative qualities and abilities are recognized throughout the state. His strongest followers, naturally, are the coaches who worked under him and the seven other athletic directors in the Dual County League.

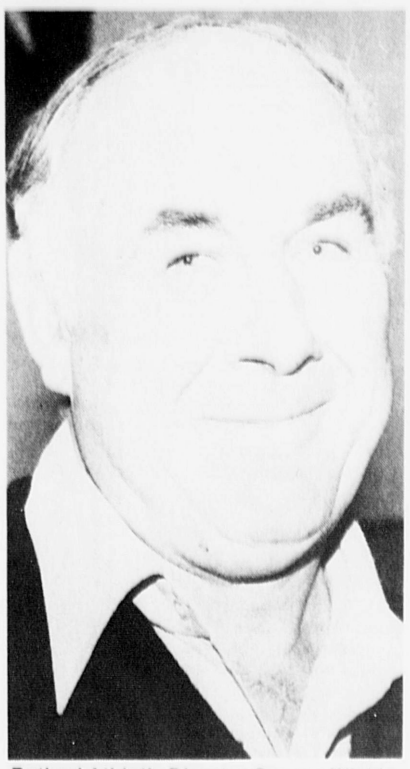

"Once George became an administrator he shifted his focus to the overall picture," said Newton South's acting-AD, Warren Bechtold. "He was quite a leader. George developed a very good relationship with all the people he worked with. He was always the boss, but was always well received. He made you feel like you were somebody."

Neil McPhee, baseball coach at Newton South for 17 years, said, "George is as professional an administrator as I've ever run across. He is totally dedicated and a superb administrator. Any coach of any sport couldn't ask to work under a better man."

Keith Adams, AD at Bedford High School for the past 13 years, added that Winkler "was big on rules and regulations. He would bring up a lot of ideas, general things that would benefit the league."

Winkler was, of course, concerned with the way his own ship ran also. Football Coach Art Kojoyian, who has been at Newton South since 1962, was an assistant under Winkler in both football and wrestling. He said Winkler was "always trying to improve the department and the facilities."

In the late 1970's, Winkler worked with city officials to get South High its football field and track. Last year, Winkler collaborated with the Boosters' Club on the funding and construction of bleachers for the football field, and according to Kojoyian, "was instrumental" in getting the stands.

Retired Athletic Director George Winkler

'Retirement hasn't really hit me yet. It's still like a summer vacation. I think when school starts up again it might become a reality. I'm retired.'

George Winkler

What made Winkler a superb director, most say, is his patience and understanding. His ability to mesh with so many conflicting personalities. Maybe George Winkler should have been a politician.

As a personality, Winkler was "top shelf, A-1, and very up front" according to Adams.

"George was the type of person that was there when you needed him, whether for advice or guidance," said McPhee. "I would have to say I learned more from George, in the areas of the organization and handling of athletes, then from any other person I've ever worked under. He has been the single most important influence on me in those areas."

"In my four years as athletic director, George has helped me out tremendously. He taught me little things, intangibles," Foley remembered. "He had nice organizational skills. At a meeting he can look at a whole problem and put it into prospective. I really enjoyed working with George and I'm sorry to see him go."

George Winkler was not only highly regarded by his peers but was looked up to by the students he so admirably directed.

"There was a feeling of total respect and a genuine liking of George among the students and athletes," recalled McPhee. "George showed an intense interest in the student-athlete, and it carried to all sports. He did not favor one over another."

Seasholes added that Winkler was a step ahead of everyone when it came to equal rights for girls' sports.

"He was way ahead of federal and state rules on women's sports," Seasholes said. "He was not only (verbally) in favor of equal participation, he showed interest and made sure that they were treated equal."

Nor did Winkler favor the natural superstars over the hard-working survivors. "George was once a great competitive athlete," said Seasholes, "and he always understood that some kids just didn't have that talent. He tried to find ways that they could contribute with the talent they did have."

Added Bechtold, "George was interested in the athlete's well being. Where they were going to college, scholarships...he was very active. He wanted everyone to get the best that they could get."

Girls' Basketball Coach Mark Aronson remembers Winkler's interest well. It was tournament time, and Aronson's girls were playing in their first-ever post-season tourney at home against Dennis-Yarmouth.

Before the game a telegram arrived, silver-screen style, to the South locker room. Winkler, who had undergone surgery two weeks before, had wired his support because he couldn't be there. Win one for the Gipper.

Winkler knows what it's like to win. An ex-Marine, he spent 14 months in the service and played 90 games for the Quantico Marine baseball team, which captured the East Coast Service Championship.

He went on to star at Boston University, and became one of only a handful of athletes to ever earn 11 varsity letters at the school. Football, basketball, and baseball kept the burly star busy for four years.

In the early 1950's, Winkler came to Newton as a teacher and coach at the old Newton High School, and after leaving to do scouting work for B.U., Winkler was back in Newton in no time.

His big break at Newton South came only two years after the school had been in existence. In 1962, Winkler was named head football coach at South and guided the Lions to a 6-1 record.

In the next 12 years, Winkler would lead South to six winning seasons and a combined 58-53 record.

In the winter, Winkler kept busy with wrestling. The first-ever head varsity wrestling coach at South, Winkler coached from 1964 through 1967 and had only one losing season.

Following his wrestling coaching days, Winkler took the job as state tournament director, and in 10 years the program grew from a mere 35 schools to well over 100.

So it was no surprise that Winkler, along with good friend Kojoyian, was among six initial inductees into the Mass. High School Wrestling Coaches Association's Hall of Fame in February, 1980.

He served as the President of the Mass. High School Football Coaches Association in 1974-75 and in April, 1982, Winkler was inducted into that sport's Coaches Association's Hall of Fame.

"It meant a lot to me (being inducted into the hall of fame) because you were chosen by your peers," Winkler said. "(Football) has always been close to my heart and its something I'll always cherish."

Meanwhile, Winkler was named athletic director in 1973. He coached the football team one final year before relinquishing the job to his long-time assistant, Kojoyian.

George Winkler, a Newton legacy and friend of many, will be honored at a testimonial dinner on Oct. 4 at the Hillcrest in Waltham.

SMU out of race even before kickoff

By Mike Rabun
UPI Sports Writer

The 1985 Southwest Conference football season begins on Saturday evening and for the first time in history one of the league's clubs has been erased from the championship chase before it even takes the field.

Southern Methodist University had been the pre-season favorite to win the conference title for the fourth time in five years. Not any more.

A recently enacted piece of SWC legislation forbids any team on probation from winning the league title and that means the Mustangs — now carrying the burden of a severe three-year NCAA sanction — are out of that picture.

There is nothing that says SMU cannot win games, however, and the Mustangs will try to start doing that Sept. 7 at Texas Stadium against the improved Texas-El Paso Miners.

That will be one of four games opening the SWC season — three of which will be played on the league team's home ground.

In addition to the Mustangs, those opening their campaign will be:

— The Baylor Bears, who will host the Wyoming Cowboys. Last year Baylor opened its season with national champion Brigham Young so there is a little more optimism around Waco when it comes to season opening wins. Baylor's next two assignments, however, will carry the Bears to Georgia and Southern California.

— The Texas Tech Red Raiders, needing a good season to improve coach Jerry Moore's job security. Tech begins its year at home against New Mexico, a team that beat the Raiders last year, 29-24.

— The Houston Cougars, who along with the TCU Horned Frogs provided the SWC with its biggest surprise of 1984. Houston shared the league title with SMU a season ago and this year opens on the road against the Tulsa Hurricane.

Four additional SWC teams begin their schedule on Sept. 14 — Rice hosting Miami, Texas A&M visiting Alabama, Arkansas traveling to Mississippi and TCU opening at home against Tulane.

As is often the case, the Texas Longhorns will be the last team to start. The Longhorns' first game comes on Sept. 21 at home against Missouri. Texas will be the next-to-last major college team to begin its football season this year. Only Oklahoma (which begins on Sept. 28) has a later start.

SMU will be going after its 14th consecutive season opening victory when it hosts Texas-El Paso, a team hard-hit by academic-related losses.

But after the Mustangs play the Miners, they will not play again until Sept. 28. That large gap in the schedule has come about because of the switch of SMU's meeting with Oklahoma to Dec. 7.

"That is unusual," said SMU coach Bobby Collins. "Right now we are planning on giving the players some time off after the Texas-El Paso game.

3 Newton club champs in tourney

WESTON — Three Newton men will be among approximately 125 champion golfers from throughout Massachusetts vying for this year's championship at the 1985 Tournament of Club Champions on Monday, Sep. 9 at the Pine Brook Country Club.

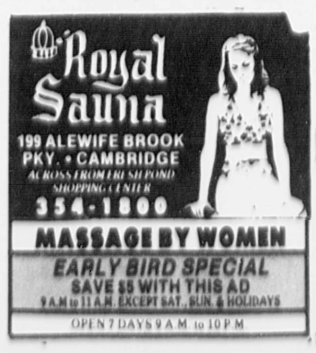

The tournament has been an annual event since 1953, named in honor of Joseph Looney, a former Boston sportswriter who founded the event 33 years ago.

Joe Knox off Newton, Larry Kelley of Newtonville, and Scott St. Clair of Waban will take part in the tourney, an 18-hole stroke play event with the winner receiving the Joseph Looney Trophy.

Knox earned a berth in the touney by winning the club championship at the Newton Commonwealth Club while Kelly took the championship at the George Wright Golf Club. Kelly has also competed in the Tournament of Club Championship for the past two years.

St. Clair won the Brae Burn Country Club Championship and has competed in the Tournament of Club Champions three times, in 1977, 1982, and 1984.

FOXFIELD AT WESTWOOD

Rugged, yet elegant. Solid, but not overbearing, and the best new home in town. This balanced, nine room Colonial is brick faced with granite accents and offers four or five bedrooms with one skylighted, privately entered guest area with bath. A comfortable, spacious, fireplace living room is enhanced by dental moldings and lighted by a floor to ceiling glass bayed end wall. Formal wainscotted dining room with double french pocket doors provide uninterrupted view of familyroom's floor to ceiling stone fireplace. A country kitchen provides breakfast bay and access to roofed screened porch and adjacent sundeck. Set on just shy of its own one acre lot. This property shares common ownership of additional private woodland restricted to the recreational use of its owners.

Three and one half baths with hot tub in Master, four zone forced hot water heating system, two zoned air conditioning system, security and internal vacuum systems complete the interior. Underground lawn sprinkler system for shrubbery and sod lawn complete the exterior. $475,000

British 'luxury yacht' finds land

EDINBURGH, Scotland (UPI) — The Royal Scotsman, Britain's newest luxury train, recreates the elegance of European "Belle Epoque" limiteds for wealthy tourists who pay $500 a day to travel in a style that would have kept even Queen Victoria amused.

The eight-car privately operated train, resplendent in a livery described as "dark plum and spilled milk," began operations in May. Until the end of October and again next spring, a select group of 30 passengers can board here for a 6-day, 1,100-mile journey through the Scottish Highlands. For those with less time (or thinner pocketbooks) 3-day trips can be arranged.

The BBC once described the Royal Scotsman's route as one of the "Great Railway Journeys of the World." It would be hard to argue with that assessment. Destinations like Kyle of Lochalsh, Dunrobin Castle, Inverness and Aviemore conjure up romantic images.

"This is really a luxury yacht on land," said Dante Stephensen, an Atlanta, Ga., restauranteur who flew here just to make the trip. He said it was worth it.

As befits a luxury yacht, the galley produces first-class fare. The Royal Scotsman's "nouvelle cuisine" menu is served in the ornate dining car. Tables are set with crystal, monogrammed silverware and starched linens. Food and drink are included in the ticket price.

The setting for offerings like "Fennel and Apple Soup, Rendezvous of Seafood, and Homemade Nectarine Ice Cream with Wild Strawberries" is, itself, something of a "piece de resistance." The dining car, constructed for the London and North Eastern Railway in 1891, is the oldest vehicle of its type in regular service.

It was discovered near Southampton, retired to inglorious duty as a beach house. To rescue this relic, the former owner was paid to build himself a new house and the car trucked to a repair shop where it was furnished with new wheels and a suitable undercarriage. It took months to restore the solid walnut interior to its former splendor.

With the diner's sister vehicles — a 1912 varnished teakwood saloon car and an observation car built in 1892 — the Royal Scotsman could be mistaken for a museum exhibit were it not trundling along through the Trossachs each week. Over 1.2 million pounds ($1.7 million) were spent in the restoration effort.

Three sleeping cars, a "State Car" (with twin-bedded compartments and en-suite bathrooms), and a service car accomodating the ten-person crew, complete the train. These are newer, but their decor carries out the theme of Edwardian luxury.

The Royal Scotsman is, after all, a train, and passengers do more than sample food and nostalgia. They travel through some of Britain's best scenery.

The route takes them along Loch Lomond, and through the rugged Pass of Brander, where special "trip wire" fences guard against the ever-present danger of landslides. The train also ventures across the bleak expanse of Rannoch Moor.

Unable to find solid footing in the moor's endless bogs, the railway's builders were forced to "float" the tracks on mattresses woven from brushwood. The lasting legacy of this unusual construction technique is a gentle bounding action as trains vibrate the bogs on the floating cushion.

At Fort William, the diesel locomotive is exchanged for a veteran 4-6-0 type steam locomotive. The highly-polished steamer takes the train on to Mallaig, a remote fishing port across from the Isle of Skye.

Occasionally, unplanned events lend color. During a long wait for a passing freight train at the upland hamlet of Bridge of Orchy, all nine pupils from the village school were invited on board. The young Highlanders tiptoed through in silence, apparently afraid to give more than a shy side glance at a convivial group of orthopedic surgeons from Kalamazoo, Mich., who were sipping champagne in the mahogany-paneled saloon car.

The Royal Scotsman competes in the same market as the better-known Venice-Simplon Orient Express. The VSOE operates similarly restored equipment on the London-Paris-Venice route.

"We're not just taking people from A to B in an old form of transport," said Fergus Hobbs, Chief Executive of the Great Scottish and Western railway, which operates the Royal Scotsman.

As a part of what he calls "a complete travel experience," Hobbs' company provides a luxury bus that tags along and meets the train at various stations so that passengers may be taken on side trips to gardens, castles and country estates.

If they wish, passengers can get in a round of golf at St. Andrews or visit Colloden battlefield, where Bonnie Prince Charlie's cause was finally crushed by the English. Of course, there is a visit to a whiskey distillery.

Hobbs ran a canal boat cruising firm in France before getting the idea for his "rolling hotel" last summer. It took only nine months to raise the money, negotiate with the state-owned British Rail system for operating rights, locate the equipment and organize the itinerary.

Reservations are made through the U.S. travel firm Abercrombie and Kent.

China loosens restrictions on foreigners

PEKING (UPI) — China plans to relax restrictions on the entry of foreigners and the exit of Chinese as part of its drive to open to the outside world, the Ministry of Public Security said Monday.

Foreigners who invest in China or come for economic, scientific and technological cooperation will be granted lengthy or lifelong residence permits, Vice Minister of Public Security Tao Siju said.

Tao was outlining revisions to laws governing travel to, from and around China at the 12th Session of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. The session met Monday to examine several draft laws.

Existing regulations regarding travel by foreigners and Chinese "cannot meet the developments resulting from the implementation of China's 'open door' policy,"

Businessmen face worries of terrorism

DOBBS FERRY, N.Y. (UPI) — Terrorism remains a continuing threat to all travelers, especially those on business.

Potential victims can do much to avert attacks before they leave, however. "Travel Smart For Business" magazine offers these precautions against terrorism.

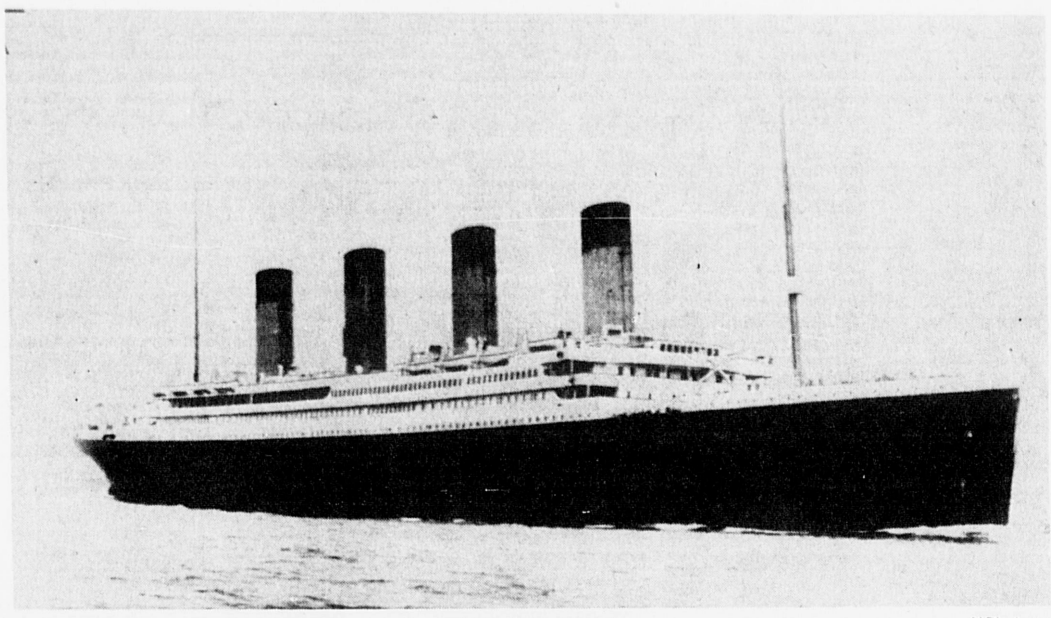

— Contact the U.S. Department of State's Citizens Emergency Center in Washington, D.C. at (202) 632-5225, to see if a current Travel Advisory exists regarding the country you are visiting.

— Call the Foreign Commercial Service's Information Center at (202) 377-0332 for alerts affecting the conduct of business in that country.

— On arrival, follow an unpredictable routine.

— Use travelers checks. Carry as little cash as possible and don't use a wallet which displays credit cards.

— Don't wear expensive jewelry or flashy clothes.

Company ponders salvaging Titanic's discovered remains

LONDON (UPI) — The insurance company that owns the hull of the Titanic is ready to listen to schemes to salvage the 45,000-ton luxury liner but one survivor says she wants it left at the bottom of the North Atlantic.

Reacting to news that the liner was found off the Canadian coast by a joint U.S.-French team, the Commercial Union insurance company said Tuesday it owns the hull because of insurance payouts it made after the Titanic struck an iceberg and sank 73 years ago.

But Commercial Union does not have a legal right to the fortune in jewels believed to have been stored in the Titanic's strongroom.

Ten millionaires, including John Jacob Astor, were aboard the ship when it sank during its maiden voyage April 15, 1912. Because of its double-bottomed hull and reinforced bulkheads, the ship had been considered "unsinkable."

"We led the team ... who paid out ($1.38 million) when the Titanic sank in 1912 and we are legal owners of the hull," said a Commercial Union spokesman.

"We're waiting for people to get in touch and negotiate. It could be that we will pay the salvage people a fee, perhaps a percentage of the salvage value. Or it is possible that we could sell our rights. That is something which our marine people are looking into at present," the spokesman said.

But one of the survivors, Eva Hart, 80, who lives northeast of London, does not want the vessel raised.

She was 7 and making the crossing from Southampton, England, to New York City with her family when the ship sank.

Her father was among the dead.

"As far as I'm concerned it's my father's grave and for that reason I would rather it be left," she said. "I lived with it all my life and it's so horrific — the sight of it going down and the sound of all those people drowning. I don't want to see it. I have too many dreadful memories."

One British salvage expert, John Pierce, has already said he would seek to raise the liner if it is in one piece.

Dr. Robert Ballard, head of a joint U.S.-French expedition that discovered the Titanic, said Tuesday the liner was in "beautiful condition" and he planned to ask the U.S. and French governments to declare the ship an underwater memorial.

Ballard, senior marine scientist at the Massachusetts-based Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, said talk of salvaging the Titanic is "ridiculous".

"We have no desire to raise the Titanic. It's ridiculous. The ship is in beautiful condition where it is. It looks gorgeous," said Ballard in a recorded conversation with members of the Institute.

A recovery team announced Monday that the liner was found about 370 miles southeast of Newfoundland in North Atlantic waters about 13,000 feet deep. It was located by an unmanned submarine.

Members of the expedition have refused to reveal the exact location of the wreck to other salvage experts who might want to recover the valuables that went down with it. The valuables in the ship's strongroom are said to include diamonds that were worth an estimated $7 million in 1912.

Developers eye coastal village

SANTA CRUZ, Mexico (UPI) — In the small coastal village of Santa Cruz, the raucous sounds of grunting pigs compete with the tranquil rhythm of Pacific waves, but this will soon change when developers start putting up modern hotels.

At dawn most days, a dozen fishing boats push off from the protected bay to return a few hours later, each with about hundred fish caught in their nets. During the rainy season, the fishing families of Santa Cruz turn to their fields to sow corn and sometimes beans.

"We live from fishing and farming, fishing and farming ... and up until now we haven't stopped fishing and farming, because this is how we eat," said Feliciano Garcia, one of the village leaders.

The quiet lifestyle of Santa Cruz in the state of Oaxaca is about to change drastically.

The village lies within a 20-mile strip of stunning coastline that has been slated by the Mexican government for a massive tourist development. According to the plans, by the turn of the century the region will be the next Cancun — home to high-rise hotels and luxury resorts — and 200,000 permanent residents and 2 million visitors annually.

The comparison with Cancun, on Mexico's Yucatan peninsula, is apt because the new project, called the "Bays of Huatulco," has the same genesis as Cancun — a 16-year-old report by the Banco de Mexico.

At that time, a group of national bankers set out to develop the Mexican tourism industry, which up until then had been defined by one word, "Acapulco."

Their purpose was to both create new sources of employment and to generate foreign exchange.

They explored long stretches of Mexico's coastline, especially in states with higher levels of unemployment and relatively lower coastal population density.

The result of their search was a set of blueprints for five "ideal" tourist sites — Cancun, Ixtapa, Loreto, Los Cabos and the Bays of Huatulco.

Already, four out of the five projects have been realized, demonstrating the government's ability to create cities where there were once only villages.

Like the earlier tourist projects, millions of dollars will be spent transforming the Bays of Huatulco into an international vacation spot.

For those who live in Santa Cruz, though, the price will be the loss of a way of life.

On May 29, 1984, President Miguel de la Madrid officially initiated the Huatulco project with the announcement of the expropriation of more than 50,000 acres of land, the very land where 3,000 residents, such as Feliciano Garcia, have established their homes, farms, fishing boats and small restaurants.

When the government took the land it paid the residents only for the improvements they had made, such as fences, wells, fruit trees and houses, since the land itself was federal property.

In March, the negotiations between farmers and the government were completed, leaving many bitter about the amount of money they received.

Private school busing restored

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The crowd at Bigelow Junior High School auditorium erupted into thunderous applause Monday night as the School Committtee unanimously passed a motion which reinstates busing to private schools at the city's expense.

"I think it's appropriate that this city pay for the transportation of all children regardless of the school they attend," Richard Cronin, the father of two children attending the Solomon Schechter Day School, said.

The motion, "passed under duress," also authorizes the city solicitor office to "go foward with litigation" against the state for passage of a law in July which forces cities and towns to provide private school transportation under Proposition 2½.

The motion passed because the committee feared it might lose $4,400 it receives from the state for public education transportation because of the new state statute. "I don't favor transportation of this kind," Committee Member Nancy Mann said. "But, we can't afford not to pass this motion."

The State Legislature passed the new law as a "budget binder" when it approved the state budget in July. The "budget binder" uses state funds for public education transportation as a ploy to force cities and towns into financing private school transportation under Proposition 2½. "It's tantamout to extortion," City Solicitor Dan Funk said.

The "budget binder" was passed to reinforce the language of Chapter 663 which was found to be illegal under Prop. 2½ this year in a court case the city and Lexington filed against the state. In its decision, the courts said cities and towns did not have to provide funding for programs mandated by the state while Prop. 2½ was in effect.

Long drive to the top

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — Believe it or not, some people actually relax by playing golf.

You know the story. Get together with the boys, have a few pops and tackle the course. After three or so hours of chasing little pocked balls around a couple hundred acres of trees, ponds, swamps and sandtraps, a week's worth of office and familial problems melt away with a quick glance at the scorecard.

Or so it seems.

Others, like Newton's Bob Rundlett, see golf not as a hobby, but as a livelihood. His future depends on hitting little pocked balls a long, long way — between trees, over ponds, swamps and sandtraps and into holes.

When he isn't hitting the ball 350-plus yards, Rundlett teaches those without his ability the finer points of the gentlemanly game of golf at the McGolf Driving Range in Dedham.

"I picked up the game when I was 11," the 32-year-old West Newton native recalls. "I used to watch it on television, took a liking to it and asked my parents to get me a set of clubs."

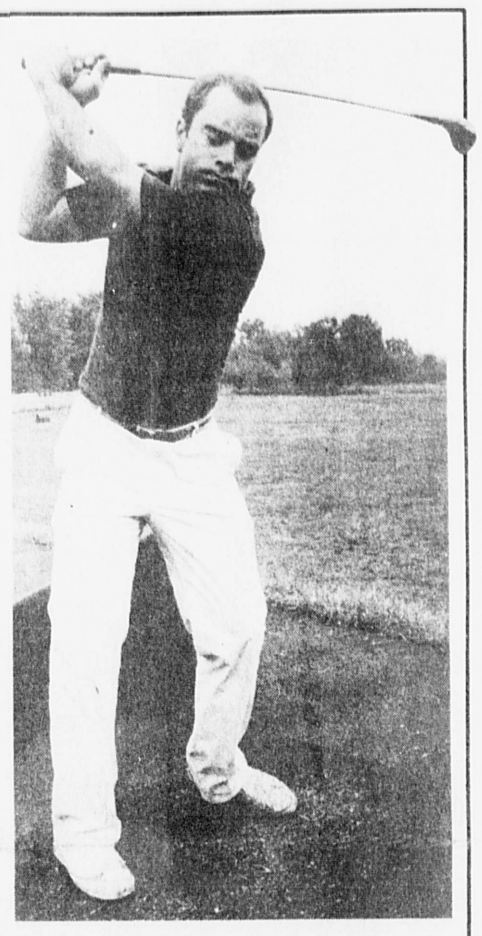

So, with visions of Palmer and Nicklaus dancing in his head, Rundlett set off for the old Albermarle Golf Course to hack away at a dream.

He got out of high school, dropped out of college and worked a bunch of "nowhere" jobs, but all the while he held onto the dream with a driver in one hand and a scoresheet in the other.

Now, 21 years after driving his first ball, Bob Rundlett is still at it.

"It was a financial decision, really," he says, grinning. "I played so much golf that when I took a job at Stowe Acres eight years ago as a pro, I actually took home more money even with a cut in pay because the greens fees and equipment were paid for."

A lefthanded lesson for the links

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

It was the greatest mismatch since the Christians took on the lions in ancient Rome.

For this semi-active duffer taking on a guy who made it to the finals of the national Long Drive Competition, the result of our own long drive competition at the McGolf driving range in Dedham was pretty much the same.

Unlike the lions, righthanded Bob Rundlett gave himself what I thought would be a distinct disadvantage — he hit lefthanded. Little had I known that Rundlett often shoots lefthanded to combat the boredom of long hours of practicing.

"That's a pretty good grip," Rundlett told me during my impromptu lesson on how to properly address the ball on the tee.

Moe, Larry and Curley would have been proud as I haplessly hacked away at the elusive sphere.

Plink.

Library plan gets a boost

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — In his strongest message to date on the issue of a new main library, Mayor Theodore D. Mann said the Executive Department is "ready to deliver" a 21st century facility and urged cooperation from the Board of Aldermen.

"This community was looking for leadership and I provided it by appointing a committee to study the issue. Conversation now ceases ... The gestation period is over. We are now ready to deliver," Mann said during his weekly press conference.

'The gestation period is over. We are now ready to deliver.'

Mayor Mann

The mayor used the opportunity to take a tough stance on a number of library-related issues, especially his preference for undeveloped land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets as the location for the building.

Mann described as "absolute folly" the idea of converting the vacant Warren Junior High School into a library.

"Every responsible body involved with the library issue has rejected spending millions of dollars to rehabilitate a building that cannot withstand the pressures of the 21st century," he said.

Mann said he is confident the full board "would not pass up this opportunity."

"Selfish interests" and politics may arise during the debate, Mann said, but he believes "it has never been the intention of the Board of Aldermen to hamstring the desire of the city government to build a city building on city property."

"The more we delay, the more we lose. We are making every effort to get the Board of Aldermen to move as quickly as possible on this," he added.

Crafts St. fears draw big crowd

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Supporters of a petition to rezone approximately 200,000 sq. ft. of land on Crafts Street, who fear that ongoing development might destroy their neighborhood, packed a Land Use Committee public hearing Monday night.

The petition, introduced by Aldermen Ron Marini and Bruce Carmichael, asks that the land be rezoned from a manufacturing district to a residential district.

"Look at Crafts Street and see the heavy traffic," Marini said to the committee and the overflowing gallery. "It is quite possible one or two property owners can buy out someone else and put a major, major development up and destroy the area. Now is the time for the Board of Aldermen to act. We have the power. The people in the neighborhood want to protect their quality of life — that's why this chapel is filled."

Marini refered to the construction of a six-story office building by Michael Iodice and the Chatham Development Company across the street from the land in question. That construction was allowed when the Zoning Board of Appeals ruled that an office building can be con-

Series completed

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTON — With the publication of the seventh volume of "Newton's 19th Century Architecture," the eight-year combined effort of the city's Department of Planning and Development and the Historical Commission, aimed at documenting Newton's architectural treasures, has come to an end.

Financed with Community Development Block Grant funds, the series has made a complete inventory of structures in the city that were built before 1907. The seventh volume, committed to exploring all the areas of the city that previous books missed, rambles through Newton Centre, Oak Hill, Chestnut Hill and "the Commonwealth Avenue Corridor."

Susan Abele, who wrote the bulk of the most recent piece, is quick to credit her editor, Thelma Fleishman, and others who helped her wrap up the series.

John Eliot's 'divine mission'

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

At the beginning of the 17th century over a hundred Native Americans lived in the area now known as Newton. But by 1677, all "the Indians were gone" thanks to the arrival of God-fearing English Puritans who felt it their "divine mission" to convert Indians into Puritans, say two Newton researchers.

In fact, Newton was the site of the first Indian Christianization attempts in New England when Rev. John Eliot, a Puritan minister from Roxbury, held four conversion meetings in the area, say Newton residents Martina Jackson and Karen Dacey, who are researching and writing a book on the christianization of indians in Newton and New England.

"It was like a Billy Graham crusade," says Dacey, of the Christianization efforts.

"Just as the fear of Russia influences (U.S.) policy," she continues, so were the Puritan's laws influenced by the Indian threat.

The city seal celebrates John Eliot's teaching Christianity to the Indians.

Still, the plight of American Indians in the Newton area closely parallels that of other tribes across the United States when Europeans descended upon their lands, pushing them further and further west, and killing them off with European diseases.

Although Dacey and Jackson have not yet begun looking for a publisher for their book, they have been researching the subject for five years.

Their background in writing and in Native American history includes several years of writing for the now defunct "Newton Times." Jackson, who has been active in Newton politics for the past 10 years, has a degree in English Literature, and Dacey completed graduate courses for a Ph.D. in American Civilization at Harvard University.

According to the two writers, the story of Indians in Newton has provided them a unique opportunity to study the convergence of the two "very different" cultures of the English Puritans and the American Indians.

The pair found that the available literature approaches the subject from either the Indian point of view or from that of the Puritan's.

"We're trying to set the two different cultures together and find some balance," explains Dacey.

The Indians and Puritans "couldn't have been more different" in that the Indians' lives were controlled by nature while the Puritans liked to control nature, Jackson says. For the lat-

It's a long drive to the pro circuit

Yesterday, Rundlett played in the New England Open in Queechee, Vt. A few weeks ago, he went to the national finals of the Long Drive Competition. He has competed in pro and amateur tourneys all over New England.

Soon, says the former hockey player with the wrists of steel, he will try to make it on the professional circuit — a demanding and grueling journey of fortitude and frustration.

"Something I always wanted to do," Rundlett says between mortar-like strokes — "is to be out there on the circuit and make a living exclusively from playing."

To get there, Rundlett will have to tighten up his game. He will have to devote all his time and energy into working out the bugs that haunt him — chipping and wedging on the fairway. While he is better than most, Rundlett says he still has "a way to go."

"Right now," Rundlett says, puffing on a Marlboro and surveying the driving range in front of him, "I'm teaching and working at McGolf. I do a whole bunch of things — take care of the course, and so on. At the present time, I only get on the course once a week. If I really want to get serious about my game, I will have to make a decision soon to go for it and play every day. There are still a lot of things I have to work on before I am ready to take on the best in the world."

Rundlett admits that training for the tour is no picnic.

"It is hard work. You have to put all of yourself into your game. You can't just go out there with a lackadaisical attitude if you want to get anywhere."

Rundlett notes that, while duffers and hackers can enjoy a lazy day out in the sun, a professional golfer is all business.

"You have to practice, practice, practice," he sighs with a far away look. "You have to get out on the course and work on the things that are your weaknesses, and polish the things that are your strengths."

Rundlett's ace in the hole is his driving game. While he can routinely drive the ball 280 yards — which can help on a par five or a long par four — his "real work is taking advantage of that.

"What good is it," Rundlett questions, "if you can hit the ball all that way and blow it with a lousy short iron shot? It's a psychological thing I am working on — 100 yards and in."

It is hours and hours of swinging and putting. Blisters cover blisters as confidence and concentration ebb and swell with every stroke. The euphoria of an eagle on the front nine becomes depression with a bogey on the 14th as you fight your worst enemy — yourself.

What keeps you going, Rundlett says, is the hope that someday, all the hard work and thousands of shots will pay off.

"Even the best golfers," Rundlett says like a man seeing the light at the end of the tunnel, "get into the position where they find themselves not doing what they want to do with the ball. It can get very frustrating. Things can get worse and worse. I have to slow myself down and remind myself what it is I am doing, and where it is I want to go."

The next time you watch the pros on television or stand in the gallery and think how easy it is to be a professional golfer, remember what Bob Rundlett says:

"For every Arnold Palmer, there are thousands of Bob Rundletts working their butts off for a shot at the glory."

Laughable links lesson

"Just testing you," I answered, trying to save some face.

I sympathized with Rundlett's obvious frustration. Here was a man who makes a living at a game that to me is as much fun as competing in an Iron Man race.

Chasing after a little ball all day in the hot sun is not my idea of relaxing. It's OK for the first couple dozen hits, but after a while I begin to feel like Marlin Perkins on an African safari.

Anyway, being the good sport I am, I tried not to let on to Rundlett that golfing is right up there on my list of things to avoid along with root canal and acupuncture.

"All right, let's try it again. Remember, keep your feet even, about shoulders-width apart," Rundlett said. "Think about what you are going to do."

That was the problem. I kept thinking about breaking my driver over my knee.

Like the soldiers of F-Troop trying to fire the cannon, I was trying. Errant balls flew over the course as our photographer dove for cover.

Although to me it seemed just one big fruitless loop, Rundlett remained calm and composed.

"I get all kinds of players out here, you know. Some of them good, some of them not so good. Just relax."

Ya, relax. Here I am making a fool out of myself and the guy tells me to relax. I could just see him on the deck of the Titanic telling icecube jokes to the band as the ship went down.

After a while, though, Rundlett's patience began to pay off. My foul shots and wormburners slowly turned into half-way decent drives.

Four buckets of practice balls and many blisters later, I was ready for action.

Confidently, I stepped up to the tee. The imaginary hush of the gallery filled the air as I wiggled and jiggled and set up for the shot, thinking of the Lite Beer commercial I would be asked to do.

Not too bad, a 175-yard drive straight up the fairway. I turned to Rundlett and smiled, thinking he would never be able to do half as well lefthanded as he did righthanded.

It was Rundlett's turn. Without fanfare, the West Newton wacker walloped a drive 250 yards on the money.

It was the agony of defeat. Dejected, I offered my battered and sore hand to the victor.

In the immortal words of Red Sox fans everywhere, I had but one thing to say: "Wait till next year."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING FOR
NEWTON COMMUNITY BLOCK GRANT MIDYEAR AMENDMENTS
Thursday, 19 September 1985, 9:00 P.M.
RM 209, Newton City Hall
1000 Commonwealth Ave., Newton, MA

NEW FY86 PROGRAM:

Proposed Water Service Connection Rebate Program

The Community Development Program is proposing a new program which would provide a 50% rebate (low income households) and a 30% rebate (moderate income households) for the cost of updating the provate portion of water service connections. Funding priority would be given to low and moderate income households on streets scheduled for reconstruction either by the Community Development Office or the City. Other eligible households would be served, after priority households have been funded, on a first come, first serve basis. It is proposed that this program would be established in the Spring of 1986. Funding of $25,000 for the program would be set aside from CDBG program income.

CANCELLATION OF FY85 PROGRAM

Historic Housing Rehabilitation Loan Program (85-1D) - $15,000

The Historic Housing Rehabilitation Loan Program (HHRLP) provided low interest loans and or deferred loans for appropriate home repairs to low and moderate income owners of historically significant properties. Over the past year, only three homeowners have applied for the above mentioned program, despite extensive outreach. At a meeting held on 7 February 1985, the Newton Historical Commission voted to support the reallocation of the remaining HHRLP funds as outlined above. Due to the lack of interest in this program, the City is proposing to reporgram HHRLP funds (remaining balance of $15,000) to the existing Newton Housing Rehabilitation Fund (NHRF) and amend the guidelines of the NHRF to include a historic rehabilitation component. The historic component of the NHRF program as proposed will broaden homeowner participation by providing greater incentives to those who are eligible.

SUBSTANTIAL CHANGE TO FY86 PROGRAM:

Porposed Revision to the Newton Housing Rehabilitation Fund Program (NHRF) (86-1B) to Include Historic Housing Component - $50,000.

Because of the cost of undertaking historically appropriate repairs can be costly, especially for low income households, the Community Development Program is proposing revisions to the existing Newton Housing Rehabilitation Fund (NHRF) guidelines to include funding mechanisms to help offset the cost of making improvements which meet local and federal historic guidelines. It is proposed that owners of historically significant properties participating in the NHRF program would be eligible for a grant to cover the additional cost of undertaking historically appropriate repairs, as opposed to conventional treatment (i.e. the cost differential between clapboarding and aluminum siding). Grants would be made available to owner-occuped low income households for 100% of the cost difference and 75% for moderate income households (the remaining 25% would be added to the NHRF loan). It is proposed that the program be initiated with the first round of applicants processed for FY86 (expected late Fall, early winter 1985).

PROPOSED REVISIONS TO THE NEWTON AFFORDABLE RENTS POLICY:

The City currently considers affordable rents, as per Affordable Rents Policy adopted in December, 1983, to be 60 percent of the current Fair Market Rent. The City is recommending that the Affordable Rents Policy be revised to reflect the full Fair Market Rent levels. The revision to this policy would allow more multi-family property owners with low and moderate income tenants to participate in the NHRF program and thereby improve the living conditions of low and moderate income persons. A full explanation of the proposed changes to the City's Affordable Rents Policy is available at the Community Development Office.

The Newton Community Development Program's Citizen Participation Plan requires that when changes to the Newton Community Development Program are proposed which include adding or deleting projects, the Planning and Development Board must hold a public hearing prior to making recommendations concerning proposed changes.

Comments may be submitted until October 4, 1985 to the Community Development Program, City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave., Newton Centre, Newton, MA 02159. More information is available by calling Elisabeth Ruben, 552-7135.

More input needed on hotel/motel tax

NEWTON — The aldermanic Finance Committee has postponed action on Mayor Theodore D. Mann's plan to impose a hotel/motel tax until it can gauge reaction to the proposal.

After a brief discussion of the issue Monday night, FinCom decided to invite interested residents, business leaders and officials from the city's four hotels — the Marriot, Holiday Inn, Howard Johnsons and Susse Chalet — to the committee's Sept. 23 meeting.

Unless persuasive arguments against the new tax are offered, however, the majority of FinCom members appear ready to endorse the mayor's proposal when it comes before the Board of Aldermen.

A majority vote by the board will be needed to implement the plan.

The tax's enormous revenue-raising capacity and its minimal impact on the consumer are the two main reasons behind the growing support for the move.

Officials estimate a 4 percent tax — the highest allowable — would bring the city $70,000 a month or about $850,000 a year in revenue, while only raising the price of one night's stay at area hotels anywhere from $1.59 to $4.80 under the current room rates.

Low-income housing stock increased

NEWTON — The Board of Alderman Monday night unanimously approved a plan to purchase two condominium units with state money for use as low-income housing.

The proposal, originally submitted by Mayor Theodore D. Mann, calls for the Newton Community Development Authority (NCDA) to purchase the Winchester Park units for a total of $120,000. That price, according to Alderman Paul Coletti, is far below their market value.

Coletti said Kosow Developers agreed to provide the units in accordance with the city's ten-percent zoning ordinance. The ordinance requires developers of residential housing to provide ten percent of a development's units for low-income housing.

"When Kosow developed the Sidney Hill Country Club," Coletti said, "part of that agreement was to provide either on-site units or comparable off-site units. Kosow purchased the two units at Winchester Park and offered to turn them over to the city to comply with the ten-percent ordinance.

Coletti said the two units "were quite a bargain."

"These units will be in a new condominium project. We are getting two upper-income units to add to the city's low-income housing stock."

Coletti lauded Kosow's cooperation and compliance.

"In the past, some of the developers have been giving us sub-standard units to comply with the ordinance. The last four units my committee looked at have been supplied by Kosow and they have all been exceptional," the Finance Committee chairman said.

'Pooper scooper' proposal wins friends

NEWTON — The city is one step closer to having cleaner streets and parks. The aldermanic Public Safety and Transportation Committee Monday night unanimously passed a "pooper scooper" ordinance that will force dog owners to clean up after their pets.

The ordinance, similar to one now in effect in Cambridge, holds that "it shall be the duty of each person who owns, possesses or controls a dog to remove and dispose of any feces left by his/her dog on any sidewalk, gutter, street, park or other public area or on any private property neither owned nor occupied by said person."

In addition to making dog owners clean up, the ordinance states that dog owners will have to carry some type of device — such as a "pooper scooper" — to clean up the feces when on public property.

Alderman Rodney Barker, who introduced the motion, said the ordinance would be enforceable either by police acting upon seeing an offense committed, or reacting to a "reasonable" complaint from a citizen.

He added offenders would be fined $25 and the fines would increase after each offense.

The motion will go on to the Legislation and Rules Committee, according to Barker.

Ald. Shaevel steps down from EDC

NEWTON — Ward 8 Alderman William Shaevel has resigned as a member of the city's Economic Development Commission (EDC) because of excessive time commitments.

During his special election campaign to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Robert L. Shuman, Shaevel had said he would remain on the EDC if voted into office.

"I wanted to, but this week, for example, I have four meetings — not counting the EDC Thursday night. You can just be in so many places at so many times. I was having trouble devoting 100 percent to the Board of Aldermen," Shaevel said Monday night.

Shaevel reached his decision at almost the same time EDC member John Hearn received a lucrative job offer requiring him to relocate to Phoenix Arizona.

Hearn, a financial analyst, had also been a member of the city's ad hoc Main Library Facility Committee.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann has recommended Nathan A. Nager, who ran Shaevel's aldermanic campaign, be appointed to fill the unexpired portion of Hearn's four-year term.

Nager, an antique dealer who lives at 875 Dedham St., is past-president of the Oak Hill Park Association.

Bill Shaevel

Mann has also recommended that Mitchell L. Fischman, of 41 Brush Hill Road, be appointed to fill the unexpired portion of Shaevel's five-year term on the committee.

Fischman is a project coordinator for the Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA).

Sticker parking closer to acceptance

NEWTON — A proposed ordinance for the implementation of a city-wide daytime permit parking program is now in the hands of the Traffic Commission.

If passed, the suggested ordinance, which would divide the city into 12 village permit parking zones, could make it possible to restrict parking in some neighborhoods to vehicles with resident stickers or visitor permits.

Under the current wording of the draft ordinance, one or more residents, Police Chief William F. Quinn or Traffic Engineer Roy LaMotte may ask the full board to establish a restricted parking area within a zone, but "at least 50 percent of the dwelling units located in the area" must support the move before the full board can act on the petition.

The proposal calls for LaMotte and aldermen to evaluate the petition using four criteria — vehicular circulation and safety; pedestrian safety; lack of convenient off-street parking for residents; and, level of demand for on-street parking by nonresidents.

The draft does not allow aldermen to establish restrictions between 2 a.m. and 6 a.m..

The stickers, which would be good for one year and cost five dollars, must display the vehicle's registration number and "shall be permanently affixed to the left (driver's) side of the rear windshield," the draft states.

Car owners would have to pay all outstanding fines on their vehicle before receiving a resident parking sticker, which would cost two dollars to replace.

Fences around pools recommended

NEWTON — The aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee has voted to require "private" swimming pool owners to construct five-foot fences. The move is the first step in closing a ten-year pool ordinance loophole committee members argued could create hazardous situations for young children.

According to Assistant City Solicitor Gayle Smalley, the state passed a building code in 1974 that superceded city ordinances. Smalley said that code failed to include private pools constructed on single-family home sites. The loophole allows new pool construction to take place without any fencing requirments.

Building Department Commissioner James Cameron said even though there is no city ordinance requiring fencing, his department "strongly recommends" those seeking swimming pool construction permits install fences.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss
No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 901, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Please don't wait to call. You really do deserve to be thin!

Funds for library warrant approval

It is with a certain amount of dread and misgiving that we look into the near future and see some traditional, partisan and parochial storm clouds brewing over the next phase in the 40-year-old campaign to create a new main library facility for the City of Newton.

Mayor Theodore Mann has requested appropriations totalling $280,000 to get the ball rolling. He wants $250,000 for preliminary research that would produce architectural renderings, initial site specifications and a detailed cost analysis.

He also wants an appropriation approved that would provide $30,000 needed to hire a competent project manager whose energies would be devoted entirely to nursing the library plan along.

The funds would come from an account set up months ago to help finance a new library. Into that fund have gone revenues garnered through the sale or rental of surplus city properties.

A new revenue source, a hotel/motel tax estimated to yield the city nearly $70,000 a month, will also be directed to the same fund. This money, unplanned for in previous considerations of how the new library will be financed, is the direct result of the mayor's lobbying on Beacon Hill. The tax was approved as an integral part of a legislative package designed to bail the City of Boston out of its financial crisis, but it was submitted and pushed by Mayor Mann for years before it finally passed.

If estimates are correct, the new hotel/motel tax, which has yet to be approved by the Board of Aldermen, could pay for the mayor's two recent requests in only four months.

Let's get on with it. Let's keep up the momentum we will need to carry us through to the conclusion of a long, complicated process.

Time has come for sticker parking

The Newton Graphic encourages the Board of Aldermen to do everything possible to understand and approve the most recent proposal for sticker parking in the city.

The advantages of the proposal, aimed at relieving a situation which appears difficult in some parts of the city and impossible in others, far outweigh whatever disadvantages will be brought up during future discussions.

The fears of Police and Fire Department spokesmen, who are legitimately concerned with the possibility that crowded streets might limit access to emergency situations, can be address adequately when the new ordinance is written up.

DPW concerns over the possibility that parked cars might hamper streetcleaning efforts, especially in the wintertime, can also be dealt with in the final wording of the new ordinance.

Fees to be derived from the sale of stickers would be a welcome byproduct of such an ordinance.

Doctors sick over suits

By Loring Swaim

Doctors and surgeons in Massachusetts — a medical mecca of the world — are heard to complain these days how terrible it is that their malpractice insurance is costing so much more.

"We can't function with our patients properly," the claim is made, "if our fees are fixed while costs like insurance soar out of control."

Federal and state regulators, on the other hand, tracking the climbing costs of health care, say, "Cool it fellas, the crisis isn't that bad; you'll get relief but not as much as you want."

Some are even heard to mutter that if the medical profession would only discipline its members with some dedication, the bad-apple doctors would be removed and malpractice would be sharply reduced.

Gov. Dukakis, mindful of the state's world-renowned hospitals and clinics, has reportedly passed the word he wants an equitable solution found to the dilemma as quickly as possible. The Supreme Judicial Court has ruled that last year's 42 percent allowance was too low.

What to do?

Hearings have been held by the Rate Setting Commission; tomes of testimony have been taken; briefs have been filed by major parties in the dialogue. Recommendations are expected this month or this year.

Clearly, some astronomical court awards have been made recently in celebrated malpractice suits. The dramatic awards have wound up five-year trials before sympathetic juries to whose humanity adroit lawyers are learning to appeal. Now-permitted advertising by lawyers has exacerbated the temptation of big suits and big settlements. (That legal professionals harbor few compuctions about exploiting the vulnerabilities of medical professionals is another matter again.)

The difficulties occur, says one state official privvy to the complaints aired at recent hearings, because of the extended time lapses between the alleged medical offense, the decision to charge malpractice and the date of final adjudication.

A physician with a spotless record may have been paying fees for malpractice insurance at rates going at the time, only to have a disgruntled patient decide to file malpractice charges. The latter must inch their way through the courts for years, to end, conceivably, in a finding of guilty and an award in six or seven figures.

By that time, accumulated losses by the insurance facility presently in Massachusetts the Joint Underwriting Association, established in 1975, will have to be replaced by higher contributions from participating insurance carriers and, in turn, higher premiums from individual physicians.

The present mood in the profession, according to Mass. Medical Society spokespeople, is to avoid malpractice suits by shunning specializations or treatment procedures most vulnerable to claims; to seek early retirement or to practice elsewhere; or to anticipate malpractice suits by ordering redundant tests and analyses which, in turn, hike the cost of medical care.

Meanwhile, as one way to curb these rising costs, state and federal agencies (and private third-party insurers) are moving to set fixed rates of payment for specific medical or surgical procedures. This puts the squeeze on physicians whose rising insurance costs cannot be recouped by increasing their fees.

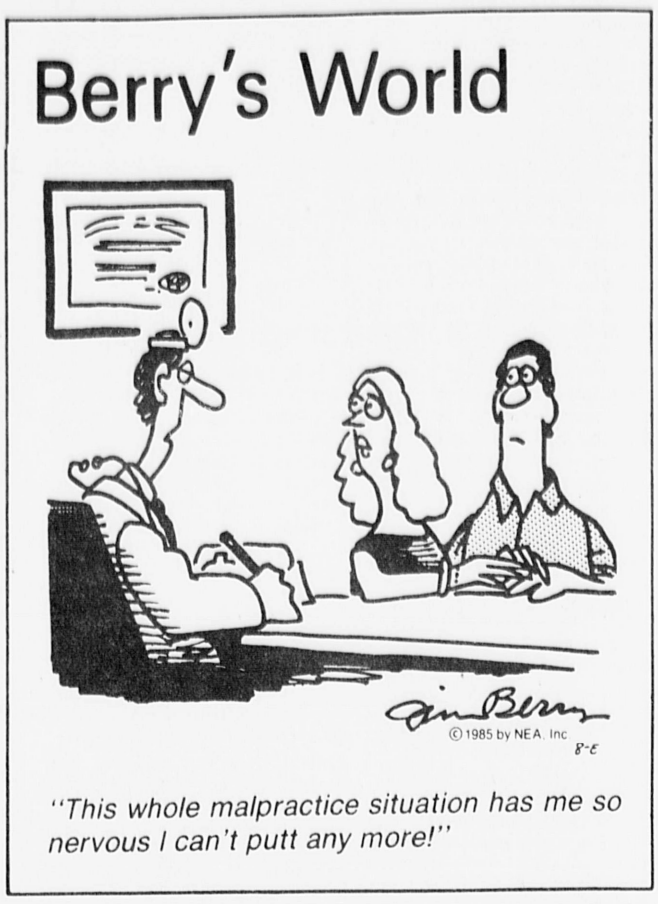

Massachusetts happens to have more doctors per square foot than elsewhere in the country. It is extraordinarily attractive for professionals. And malpractice insurance rates here are below the national average. In N.Y., premiums in some specialities reportedly reach $100,000.

The J.U.A. wants a 138 percent rate hike. That would cost an orthopedic surgeon $40,000. Other experts think half that could do the trick. MMS proposes a wider package of controls including lawyers' contingency fees.

Some sources expect a malpractice insurance rate decision as early as this month. Meanwhile the other control programs are waiting in the wings.

However accomplished, malpractice reform's time has come.

(Loring Swaim is a state columnist.)

"This whole malpractice situation has me so nervous I can't putt any more!"

Seat of city government gets refinished

Speaking of the recent renovation of the city's august Aldermanic Chambers, Mayor Theodore Mann pointed out that the aldermen's chairs required extensive rehabilitation while the benches in the spectators' area needed almost no repairs.

"It's a shame," he commented, apparently referring to the lack of citizen participation in city government. "More people should see what goes on over there."

Board President Emeritus Wendell Bauckman has been witnessing "what goes on over there" for almost a half century now.

Recently pressed into service as presiding officer during a full board meeting, Bauckman sometimes found it difficult to keep order in the state's largest municipal legislature.

"Will the gladiators please take their chairs?" an exasperated Bauckman pleaded at one point.

At a recent aldermanic Public Facilities Committee meeting, Bauckman questioned the amount of money needed to transport leaking or decrepit fuel tanks out of the city.

"For 2,000 bucks, you're not going to be able too go far with these things," he told Building Commissioner James W. Cameron. "Just where are you going to bring them?"

"Needham," joked Alderman Elaine Gentile before Cameron could say the tanks would likely be hauled out of state.

Another statement made during the fuel tank debate is likely to keep Alderman Michael Malec's wife, Myrna, looking over her shoulder.

The faux pas occurred when city officials said they would remove tanks that have been in the ground more than 25 years.

"I'm very sympathetic to replacing anything that's over 25 years old," Malec said.

When observers and other aldermen, especially female ones, began to laugh loudly, Malec realized his slip and quickly added, "I mean anything that's underground."

As the aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee debated the merits of a proposal to realign the city's wards and precincts, Alderperson Carol Robinson likened the resulting map to a medieval fiefdom.

"I wonder when people are going to look at the City of Newton," Robinson said, "as the City of Newton, and not their own private kingdoms."

Chief Administrative Officer Richard Kelliher, a.k.a. "Deputy Mayor," is pulling out the stops to avoid having the projects on Mayor Mann's Supplemental Budget languish unacted upon in committee for months on end, as they did last year.

When Public Facilities Committee members decided they were not satisfied with the money requested for one item and moved to hold it in commitee, deja vu caught up with Kelliher and he began to innovate.

"I would suggest the committee give this matter its conditional approval," he said.

"What's conditional approval mean?" Alderman Michael Malec asked.

"That's a good question. I just made it up this moment," a blushing Kelliher replied.

Gubernatorial contenders are in disarray

By George B. Merry

If next year's election were held today, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis might be well advised to ready his acceptance speech for delivery early in the evening.

Just about everybody's voter-opinion polls continue to indicate that substantially more than half of those questioned give the Bay State chief executive high marks for his performance.

This certainly could change, especially if economic conditions in the commonwealth sour or public confidence in his leadership in Massachusetts government is shaken.

Thus far, however, would-be Dukakis topplers can take little comfort and are anything but tripping over one another to take on the governor.

While the Brookline Democrat could well end up without a challenger - at least a formidable one - for renomination in his party' primary next September, the possibility of a political free ride to a new term on the November 1986 ballot is remote.

There is no shortage of could-be Republican contenders. Most of those whose names are being bandied about are either comparatively unknown across the state, particularly beyond GOP circles, or may have become a bit shopworn from previous elective tries.

Perhaps the most familiar of those with potential governorship leanings are former Democratic Gov. Edward J. King, who earlier this summer became a Republican convert, and Raymond Shamie, the GOP's unsuccessful nominee for the US Senate in 1982 and again in '84.

Neither, however, despite their less-than-lukewarm enthusiasm for Governer Dukakis, may be all that interested in running again next year unless they become convinced that the now second term chief executive could be knocked off.

Much, too, could depend on the measure of support either could generate within party leadership ranks where the hunger pangs for a winner are particularly strong. After all, their party has not elected a governor since 1970.

Other potential GOP candidates include former state Rep. Andrew H. Card Jr. of Holbrook, former US Reps. Paul W. Cronin of Andover and Margaret M. Heckler of Wellesley (currently in the Reagan Cabinet), state Sen. David H. Locke of Wellesley, former Boston radio talkmaster Avi Nelson, state minority floor leader William G. Robinson of Melrose, and possible John W. Sears of Boston, the party's 1982 nominee for governor.

The latter, however, while keeping the door of speculation ajar, may in effect have all but closed it by suggesting recently the GOP candidate for governor should be someone other than one who has previously tried. That comment was presumably directed at former Governor King and any idea he might have of a 1986 comeback bid.

US attorney William Weld, who has gained valuable exposure over the past couple of years as one of the nation's more aggressive and successful federal prosecutors and has been viewed by some prominent Republicans and others as perhaps interested in the commonwealth's top office, has now all but said, "No, thank you."

Also seemingly out of the picture is John R. Lakian, the financier who finished second to Mr. Sears in the GOP governorship primary three years ago. His recent unsuccessful libel suit against the Boston Globe and some of the publicity it produced have virtually ended speculation concerning any 1986 electoral aspirations he might once have had.

Obviously there will be a Republican gubernatorial candidate next year, but it is questionable whether he or she will be much more than "an also-ran."

Clearly what may be needed is a fresh face, somebody all segments of the GOP can rally around and who can capture broad-based voter enthusiasm outside Republican ranks, which now make up but 14 percent of the state electorate.

One of those quietly testing the gubernatorial waters is Charles D. Baker of Rockport, the former head of prominent business consulting firm and until recently undersecretary of the US Department of Health and Human Services.

Another Republican, from the business community, who might be interested in going after the governorship at some point, is John Larkin Thompson, president of the Blue Cross and Blus Shield and a former chairman of Massport, who is hardly a Dukakis admirer.

Some GOP activists hold that avoiding a fight for the gubernatorial nomination in the 1986 primary would be in the party's best interest. This would free all Republican resources, including funding and campaign organizational efforts, to support a single candidate, and early on.

It would give the GOP candidate a lot more time to become better known statewide, especially among non-Republicans who may be looking for an attractive alternative to the incumbent head of state.

If nothing else, the absence of a Republican primary competition would eliminate the possibility of a party split, and the problem of trying to close ranks in the six or seven weeks before the November election.

Referenda yield information

In a September 4 editorial, The Graphic raised two issues: the question of whether referendum questions are a valid part of designing public policy, and whether a moratorium would be an appropriate way of dealing with zoning concerns of residents.

As a general principle, the point that voters should express their concerns through their elected officials rather than by referendum is an important one. There are, however, times when a referendum, particularly one of a non-binding nature, can provide representatives with valuable information.

One such time is this election year, when most of the alderpersons are unopposed incumbents who might benefit from hearing what their constituents have to say on such a vital issue.

Certainly referendum questions should be used sparingly, but in this case there is no more pressing, all-encompassing issue facing the city today.

Developers and others with a financial stake would like to have people believe that a moratorium would be some sort of radical step. Actually, the reverse is true. Right at this moment, development is occuring at such an accelerated pace that the very nature of the city will change if residents don't take control of the situation.

A moratorium would be a thoughtful, prudent measure designed to prevent Newton from becoming another cement city, during the process of developing a rational zoning policy.

But whatever one's position on a moratorium, the question now is whether voters have the right to respond directly by non-binding referendum. That question is currently before the Board of Alderpeople, and anyone interested in having a stake in the outcome should call their alderperson immediately to voice support for the referendum.

Falwell's defense in demand

Jerry falwell's recent acceptance of South African premier Botha's apartheid policies points up anew the humiliating fact that public figures should not try and espouse "causes" about which they know nothing and, even more to the point, publically plan to use other people money to further that aim.

It is to be hoped that, had Mr. Falwell given this crisis more thought, he would have felt differently about a regime whose only concept of "law and order" would seem to lie in the constant use of rubber bullets, whips and tear-gas. This should be obvious when one remembers many of his earlier proclamations against force, evil-doing in high places and the championship of the Christian ethic.

One thing is certain, if he continues to adhere to this desire to spread the word of South Africa's "good intention's" he will not be short of offers from other governments. Poland, Afghanistan and all of Eastern Europe will flock to his banner, begging for equal time... and equal contributions.

What about the Afghanis?

It amazes me that the Russians murder one million Afghanis and the public and press are silent.

Frank's stance hypocritical

Recently our Congress voted to impose harsh new penalties on Americans who want to keep South Africa from becoming just another Soviet satelite.

Sanctions against South Africa are currently in style. But few lawmakers have the courage to support similar measures against communist regimes, which trample on their people civil liberties. Now is a great time to see that our congress takes a stand on the issue of human rights throughout the world, not just in anti-communist South Africa.

We should ask, why our Congress voted for sanctions against South Africa, i.e. (H.R. 1460), while refusing to support bills such as H.R. 97, which could put a stop to the United States subsidizing trade with the communist slave nations?

Surely no congressman who voted for H.R. 1460 and claims to support civil liberties in South Africa would deny his or her support to the oppressed people in Communist nations. Congressman Barny Frank does not support Congressman Philip Cranes' bill H.R. 97 and I think his constituency deserves to know why? This bill is peaceful. Its passage would simply end one form of aid to ruthless communist dictatorships.

Any congressman who claims to support civil liberties in South Africa, should certainly work to restore freedom in Communist countries.

I would like Congressman Frank to explain the obvious contradiction in his stands on these two bills.???

Sidewalk spill spells trouble

On a recent Monday morning, I left my home about 9:30 a.m. to do volunteer work at the Senior Citizens Center a short distance away. When I was between the gas station and the tire store on Walnut Street I tripped and fell. I looked down and saw two pieces of wood - an uncompleted repair job where there was no warning sign.

I managed to get up off the sidewalk and walked to my work station.

On arriving there the people asked, "What happened to you?" I replied, "I fell on the sidewalk down the street." The nurse there said I had to have stitches, so the lady in charge provided transportation to and from first aid and stayed with me in the operating room. I had to have four or five stitches on my head. I have a sore hand and I lost a fairly new pair of eyeglasses.

To whoever is responsible for the negligence in permitting a sidewalk repair job to go unfinished - no thanks. And to those good people who aided me in my time of trial. Thanks a millon.

Thanks from Water Nymphs

Our senior group would like to express our thanks and appreciation to the wonderful Recreation Department workers at the Gath Pool. Everyone has been so helpful and friendly. We were even treated to a "pool party" recently.

We have had a marvelous summer working out with Stephanie Meyer and Marianne Fay on our aerobic aquatic exercises. Their endless and contagious energy made the program so attractive that our numbers have grown greatly and will continue to grow. The program has been a great morale and therapeutic booster.

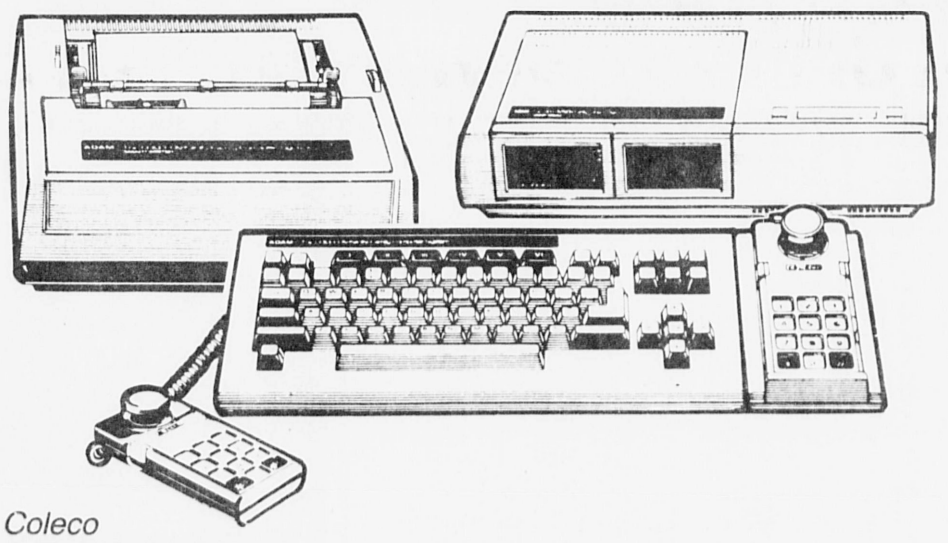

We certainly look forward to next summer, and that pleasant thought will carry us through the winter doldrums.

Once again, thank you all.

Residents probe Indians' plight

ter, time was important, while, for the former, time was seasonal.

Further, she continues, "the Indians lived healthily through nature" — without disease or "terribly bloody" wars.

Although the Puritans were not as robust as the Natives Americans, the Puritans' "idea of progressing swallowed up the Indians' land," says Dacey. The Englishmen "took more and more land, and eventually the Indians got in their way."

"Technology prevailed," says Jackson, explaining that the English had metal tools, while the Indians had not progressed that far.

The two cultures "lived relatively peacefully" together, according to Dacey, but the Puritans' fear of the Indians lead them to seek to control them.

One way control was achieved was through converting them into Christians, she says. The Indians were made to act like Puritans in dress and work — women would spin on a wheel, and men would work in the fields.

"That would dilute their 'Indianness' and therefore not make them a threat anymore," says Dacey.

The tribes, which were weakened by diseases brought over by the Europeans — including measles, small pox and The Plague, all of which killed 75 to 90 percent of the American Indian population — were more open to the Puritans' Christianity conversion efforts, a task drawn up by the

Englishmen in a charter prior to leaving England.

In 1631, Eliot arrived in Newton and learned to speak the Indian language, Algonquin. About 15 years later, he met with a Nipmuck Indian by the name of Waban "the merchant" — the namesake for one of Newton's boroughs — and eight other Nipmucks, who became the nucleus of Eliot's conversion efforts, according to Jackson.

Waban's function was to serve as an agent for Eliot and gather the Indians together for meetings, which are commemorated in a plaque off Waverly Street in Chestnut Hill, the site of at least one of the four meetings held.

Eliot conducted the meetings over a period of several months, preaching Christianity to Waban, his men and their families. Ultimately, in 1647, Eliot petitioned the General Court and won land in Newton in what is now Nonantum. This area became the location for the first Christian-Indian community out of 14 established by Eliot in the years ahead (the largest one being Natick).

But, according to Jackson, "Many see the Indians' Christianization as the Indians' capitulation. But a remnant tribe really doesn't have a choice."

Although the Indians were open to conversion efforts, the Puritans still treated them as third class citizens. "They encouraged livestock to trample unfenced Indian fields and contrived to cheat the Indians of their property by enticing them with alcohol and gambling," says Jackson.

In 1650, the Indians were pushed completely out of Newton and relocated in Natick. Then, in 1675, they were transported to Deer Island for a year because the English feared the Natick Indians were spies for "King Philip," a Wampanoag tribesman, who, along with other Indian tribes, were warring against the English at the time.

Half the Indians died of starvation on the island because they were not allowed to chop down the trees for firewood, and the only available food involved fishing for clams, according to the Jackson-Dacey team.

After the remaining Indians returned to Natick, they were slowly "absorbed into the culture," says Jackson, and by 1790, any indication of the existence of an Indian community had disappeared.

Says Dacey, "Puritan domination was so complete the physical presence of the indians was removed."

Historical series aimed at preserving treasures

latest edition of "Newton's 19th Century Architecture" offers the city yet another version of much of its distinguished history. It traces the development of the city, beginning on the north side and stretching out to the south, and it ties much of the historical sequence of events to the development of the city's railroad system.

According to Abele, "Newton owes its abundance of 19th century architecture to its proximity to Boston and its consequent development as a suburban community. Made accessible to middle income homeowners by the advent of the railroad in 1834, the city changed from a predominantly farming community to a series of suburban villages in little more than half a century.

"By reading the landscape and the architecture, one can trace Newton's development and gain an understanding of the city in which we live today."

The city Abele's work depicts is one which takes some looking to locate these days. An excerpt from an 1888 Boston area guidebook describes it as follows:

"Newton, the most favored and delightful among the many attractive suburbs of Boston, is distinctly a city of beautiful homes ... noted for its magnificent country seats and luxurious dwellings, its superb drives, exquisite scenery and elegant surroundings, its beautiful lawns, gardens and conservatories ... This is, in short, an ideal American community, and represents the highest development of New England Civilization."

The last edition of "Newton's 19th Century Architecture," along with previous editions, is available at no cost in the city's Planning Department, in the basement of City Hall.

Puppet theatre's new season

The Puppet Showplace Theatre in Brookline Village has resumed its fall-winter schedule, presenting performances every Saturday and Sunday at 1 and 3 p.m. Highlighting the new season is the return of Paul Vincent-Davis' handsome and exciting production of one of the world's best loved tales, "Beauty and the Beast" for three successive weekends, Sept. 14, and 15, 21, and 22 and 28 and 29.

Winner of the International Award for Excellence in the Art and Puppetry for 1984, "Beauty and the Beast" has proved one of the theatre's most popular shows, with a magic island, a shipwreck, special effects and beautifully sculptures puppets.

Show times are 1 and 3 p.m.

structed in a manufacturing zone. Marini and the other petitioners moved to prevent similar construction by changing the zoning ordinance.

"Commercial development is being jammed down the throats of the people," Carmichael said. "We have the chance to make things a little better for people so they can go home at night with a little more feeling of relief."

In addition to asking the board to adopt their petition, some supporters took issue with the Department of Planning and Development's recommendation that the land in question be divided between residential and business zoning.

"If this recommendation is accepted," Alfred Coletti of 46 Lenglen Road said, "they might as well drop a bomb on Newton. We want residential property. It is high time something is done about what is happening to the city, but by the time the board does anything the city will be all built up."

John O'Brien of 66 Prescott St said that the Planning Department's recommendation would not be sufficient.

"Their report would still allow three to six-story buildings in a residential area," O'Brien said. "You would have tall buildings with a lot of people. It would mean an intense population per square foot."

While supporters of the petition argued that any zoning changes would protect established businesses in that area, a group of area businessmen represented by attorney David Roseman argued the proposed changes would be detrimental to his clients. "The deepest of human rights is the right to own property," Roseman said.

Reading from a statement objecting to the petition on behalf of eight area businessmen including Iodice, Roseman argued that changing the zoning would affect the property owner's investments.

"By down-zoning the land, it may result in a withdrawal of fair compensation because some uses may not be allowed," Roseman said. He added it "is unfair to change the rules in the middle of the game."

His statement contained references to previous court cases involving zoning changes he said backs his contention that "when a city rezones an area, it should result in the uniform zoning of districts which have the same general characteristics."

Marini was undaunted by Roseman's challenge.

"It is irrelevant," Marini said. "This is the first step to changing the zoning in the community and the city."

Marini said he was "excited" by the turnout, which he estimated to exceed 100 people.

"This is going to carry a lot of weight," Marini said, "when the board votes on the petition in October. It's time to do it. I don't see how anyone can reasonably look at this issue and vote against the petition."

Mann promotes library plan

valuable holdings — valued at $7 to $10 million and now housed in the deteriorating Newton Corner facility — is in serious danger of being lost, according to Mann.

"The repository of that collection is a building ready for serious damage from natural sources or whatever. (A new library) becomes a matter of self-preservation. I think a real risk exists there," he said.

A "muni-cultural center" — the aesthetic combination of a modern library set far back in the Homer/Walnut parcel and the city hall complex across the street — is among the "very interesting options" the mayor said he is considering.

There is also the possibility of a private developer helping to build the facility in return for the right to develop other surplus city properties, he added.

In response to concerns raised by some aldermen, Mann provided more details about his plans to pay for the library.

He said property taxes would not be used to pay for the $12 million project, which is scheduled for a March 1987 construction start.

A private fundraising campaign coordinated by the Library Trustees and Friends of the Library, along with the imposition of a hotel/motel tax, will definitely be major parts of the financing plan.

He said the vast majority of the money needed will be raised by the disposal of surplus city properties like the existing Main Library, the Warren, the Hyde School, the former Auburndale Yard and the former Claflin School.

Mann said he has been talking to individuals about the possibility of obtaining state or federal grants for the project, but rates "the chances of success" as a "three" on a scale of one to 10.

The issuance of general obligation bonds will "probably" be a component of the financing plan, he added.

Alzheimer's support group to begin

The Alzheimer's Diseases Family Support Group, sponsored by Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Social Work and Continuing Care Department will begin Sept. 18.

The 11-week series is open to anyone who has a family member with alzheimer's disease. On Sept. 18, a panel will discuss "community resources for alzheimer's families.

Guest speakers will be Joanne Koenig, the Alzheimer's program director at the Newton-Wellesley Nursing Home; John Karkin, a social worker at the Veteran's Hospital Respite Care program in Bedford; and Roberta Guez, a social worker at the Milton Adult Day Care Center.

To attend this free program, call social work and continuing care, Newton-Wellesley Hospital, at 243-6085.

THE GOLD LADY
FASHION PEARLS
Pearls will never go out of style as a fashion accessory. They can be worn with everything from jeans to a black evening dress. Here are some ideas for different looks: Twist several strands together to give the look of a chunky choker. It is great for evening wear. Take three opera-length (84-inch) strands and knot one to create a flirty, 1920's look. Add some lustre to a suit by pairing two strands together with an earring at the juncture. Wear as a double strand. For wear with a sweater, mix colored strands of pink, silver and gray with white. With a white blouse, wear three or four strands of different pearls. Baroque, seed and granulated. Lastly, team bead necklaces with pearls for a textured effect.
Pearls are elegant yet so simple. You don't have to be sophisticated to wear them, you just have to have good taste. For any length or color pearls you want, come to CAROL "THE GOLD LADY". Chambers renovated

New seating plan irks some officials

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The renovation of the main aldermanic chamber in City Hall has given the city's legislators an opportunity to stop turning their backs on the public.

For decades, aldermen attending full board meetings have sat in two semi-circular rows facing away from the public seating area and toward the board president's rostrum.

Tuesday night, however, they arrived to find their newly refinished desks arranged in four straight rows of six — two lined up along the right side of the chamber facing two along the left.

The new arrangement gave those residents in attendance the chance to gaze upon the facial profiles of their elected representatives.

"I have personally initiated this change at my own liberty and, may I add, at my own peril," Clerk of the Board Ed English said.

"This action was precipitated by a number of complaints from various aldermen over the years arguing that, under the traditional seating pattern, some desk assignments were more desirable than others.

"This was especially true among freshman aldermen, who were usually, on a last choice basis, relegated to sit along the outer ring near the rail with their backs totally to the public seating area and gallery," English added.

"In the past, because the desks were secured to the floor, no effort was made to break with tradition. However, since the restoration work began, it now affords the aldermen the first opportunity since the board's size increased to 24 to consider an alternative seating plan," he said.

The new arrangement has also created space in front of the president's rostrum that can be used by aldermanic committees for recess meetings, English added.

But the rewiring of the chamber's public address system could present one of the major stumbling blocks to the fate of the new configuration, he said.

If the cost of adjusting the microphone set-up to complement the new seating plan is "prohibitive," the desks will be put back into their traditional pattern.

"This arrangement is only tentative, until such a time as either the old or the new plan is acceptable to the voting membership," English said.

> 'It's very distracting not to be facing the president. I'm too close to the public.'
> Ald. Paul Coletti

President Emeritus Wendell Bauckman, who served as presiding officer last week, attempted a poll of aldermen after the session and immediately encountered controversy.

"I like it," out-going Alderman Edward L. Richmond said.

"I don't," Alderman Paul E. Coletti countered.

Under the old arrangement, Richmond complained, he could not squeeze by the two desks located closest to the rail separating aldermen from the gallery.

"I think this new set-up is very dignified," he added.

On the other hand, the new seating plan put Coletti off into the farthest corner of the room.

"I have never missed so much of what's going on. I can't concentrate. It's very distracting not be facing the president. I'm too close to the public. I find it unacceptable," he said.

Richmond is retiring from the board in January anyway, Coletti added.

Bauckman, who sits one seat away from the rostrum, tried to placate Coletti by offering to switch seats with him, but no firm agreement was ever reached.

Some observers argued that English's assertion about freshmen being shortchanged on desk assignments did not stand up to reality because some of the full board's most senior members — including Aldermen Robert Tennant, Richard McGrath, Richmond, Matthew Jefferson, Elaine Gentile, Dominic Taglienti and Wendell Bauckman — all sit on the outer ring.

Meanwhile, three of the board's seven freshmen have been assigned seats in "the inner circle" — the area supposedly coveted by the most veteran members.

As with most controversial issues, aldermen were unable to reach an immediate consensus.

"The real deciding factor will be how they rewire the microphones. Why don't we just rest with it for a couple of meetings and see how it works," English told aldermen as they adjourned until Sept. 17.

The new format has aldermen sitting facing each other instead in a semicircle around the president.

Enrollment increased in elementary schools

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — This year marks the first time in 26 years that student enrollment at the elementary level has increased, according to Assistant Superintendent for Operations and Planning Vincent Silluzio. "We thought it was going to happen in 1980," he said.

Silluzio expects student enrollment to increase by 9.5 percent over the next five years. "It's going to be a gradual increase," he said. "It's not going to be anything like the decreases."

Despite the projection of 35 extra elementary students this year, Silluzio said, the total number of students enrolled in city schools is still down from last year. "There are 295 fewer students at the secondary level," he said. "That means there has been a net decrease of 260 students throughout the school system."

Decreasing number of students at the secondary level is a result of the larger classes leaving the junior and senior high schools while "very small" classes are entering from the elementary levels, Silluzio said. This year, Silluzio has projected the secondary level to boast 5,392 students. "By 1990, it'll have just under 4,000 students," he added.

Current enrollment figures are only projections, Silluzio said, but they are "very close" to the actual numbers the School Department is required to file with the State Board of Education by Oct. 1.

The assistant superintendent's enrollment projection process is two-fold. With city census data, he first examines the number of children in the city who are younger than four years of age. "Enrollment is directly related to the birth rate," Silluzio said.

The next step is to study the historical "migration" of families from the city so as to draw a general aplicable conclusion. A final consideration of Silluzio's is the role of private schools in enrollment projections. "There are fewer kids going into private schools than in the past," he said, which might explain the increase in the current elementary population.

Over the past five years, Silluzio said, the number of childern enrolling in private schools has been increasing, however, that also seems to have been slowing over the past two years.

One reasons parents seem less inclined to enroll their children in private school is the result of a program started by Superintendent John Strand three years ago, Silluzio said. Under the program, the assistant superintendent's office writes to the parent of each student about to become of school age, asking if they plan to enroll their child in one of the public schools. "Even if they say 'no,' the principals of the schools call the parents to explain the programs being offered by the city," Silluzio said.

Homeless share market's bounty

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Leftover tomatoes, summer squash and green peppers may not sound appetizing, but the donation of these and other vegetables to Bristol Lodge will provide the area's homeless with some degree of variety at suppertime.

"We're always looking for donations of food," Bob Hughes, director and founder of the Waltham-based shelter, said. "I can't express my gratitude enough to mayor and city of Newton."

Because of efforts by Mayor Theodore D. Mann, the two-year-old lodge and soup kitchen received for the first time yesterday a truck load of surplus vegetables from farmers participating in the city's weekly Farmers' Market. Most of vegetables will be used to complement meals that are served at the Bristol Lodge soup kitchen in the basement of the First Congregational Church on Main Street.

"The mayor became aware of the possibility of donating food to the shelter, and he told us," Dianna Patten, a outreach worker for Department of Human Services, said. "That's how the idea evolved."

According to Barry Mathis, the Farmers' Market Master, farmers who park their trucks and vans around the War Memorial Circle every Tuesday until Oct. 29 were "very responsive" to the suggestion of donating their surplus produce.

"I talked with them (the farmers) last week about making donations to Bristol Lodge," Mathis said. "They said if they have any left over, they would donate the vegetables without any problem."

This is not the first time an open-air market has donated its extra produce to shelters for the homeless, Mathis said. A Brookline farmers' market introduced the practice earlier this summer. Like the Brookline market, he said, farmers plan to contribute those vegetables which are bruised or damaged, and those which they can not sell the next day. "It's a great idea," Mathis said. "I can't see taking the food and dumping it somewhere when people are hungry."

Since Hughes serves 40-50 meals seven nights a week at the soup kitchen, he is always looking for donations which will provide the homeless of Newton and Waltham with a balanced diet. The donation of fresh vegetables, for example, might allow him to serve a salad with the dinner donated every Wednesday night by the Chateau Restaurant.

"We depend on donations of this kind to operate," Hughes said. "That's the way the program operates."

Donations to the shelter and soup kitchen come from many different organizations, Hughes said. Besides the Chateau — which was instrumental in interesting other community groups — there is a church group from Burlington that prepares and serves a meal at the soup kitchen every week. As there is a group from Waltham's Plympton Elementary School.

Hughes believes the donation of surplus vegetables by the Farmers' Market will keep these organizations — who were feeling the "strain" of coming to kitchen every week — interested in donating their time and energy. He has been searching for donations — like the fresh vegetables — to help augment the meals being prepared these groups.

According Hughes, weekly donations of vegetables from the Farmers' Market will be distributed to two other programs operated by the non-profit organization. One is a family shelter on the Waltham-Newton line which serves 42 meals a day. The other is the Golden Maple Lodge shelter for single males and females which serves breakfast every morning.

Five candidates run for Ward 5 seats

Coletti runs with good track record

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Paul Coletti says he will stand on his record to earn a fifth term as Alderman-at-Large from Ward 5.

Coletti, 36, is a development engineer for Microwave Associates in Burlington. He and his wife Dolores have two sons, Anthony, 7 and Matthew, 4.

Q: Why do you believe you're the best candidate for Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I would say firstly I have a proven track record and dedication over the past eight years. I have the best attendence record of the other candidate in my particular race. I have demonstrated commitment and held major committee chairmanships, which include the chair of the Revaluation and Finance Committees. My educational background and management skills also help to make me the best candidate.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during the last term?

A: The last term was my first two years as chair of Finance, where I got the budget approved and passed by the full board and handled the financial interests of the city in a professional manner.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: My goal is to continue to oversee the next phase of the city's revaluation program and the effects of classification on the city, in taxing policies in the city. I'm going to make sure I continue to spearhead 150 percent classification for business and to attempt to oversee the even distribution of property valuation.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: They definitely should both be paid. I was one of the aldermen who sponsored stipends for School Committee members in Finance, and believe $3,000 adequately compensates much of the expenses incurred in the job.

Q: Do you support a moratorium on commercial construction in the city until zoning laws can be revised?.

A: I would indicate at this time that I do not suppot a moratorium on commercial construction. I do support strict revision of special permit applications during the time zoning ordinances are being reviewed. I am not certain they are going to be changed and I think the city's tax base requires a certain amount of development.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: The city does need a new library. I'm in total agreement on that. I support either the Warren Junior High site or the Ed Center site in Newtonville and if either of those two fail, I will lastly consider supporting the Homer and Walnut site.

Paul Coletti

Paul K. Daley

Daley aims to solve city's zoning issues

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Upper Falls resident Paul Daley says he is confident that he will be re-elected to serve a fifth term.

The 40-year-old Daley, a well-known marathoner, is divorced and the father of a daughter, Stacey, 14. He is a real estate appraiser and consultant. He has been associated with the Newton Boy's Club, Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis Club, Newton Jaycees and is director of the Garden City Child Abuse Prevention Committee.

Q: Why do you believe you are the best candidate for Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I've got eight years of recordable representation of the people in the City of Newton. I've put special effort and emphasis into dealing with land use and public safety problems of the city. My accomplishments are a matter of record and the people involved know that and appreciate the end result of my efforts. Also, 20 years of experience in land use matters unquestionably makes me the most qualified person.

Q: What accomplishment are you most proud of during your last term?

A: I think my greatest accomplishments are in the land use area. I think my contribution to city government is to act as a moderate voice on the board in terms of solving problems we face in dealing with the special permit process and reuse process.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I would like to be a major key in solving zoning problems facing the city at this time. I would further like to solidify the reuse process of municipal land and buildings that the city presently owns.

Q: Should the aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work, and if so, how much?

A: Both the School Committee and Board of Aldermen should definitely be paid. If you take the efforts of individual School Committee members and the Board of Aldermen without generalizing, their individual efforts can be equally as great. Therefore, the amount of compensation should be equal. I don't think either could be paid a fair wage for the time they put in, but at this point in time the compensation they get is reasonable enough to compensate them for out-of-pocket expenses such as babysitters or printing.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: There should be no moratorium at all. A moratorium as proposed would stagnate the city and be probably the most counterproductive element to effect the city in the last 20 years. To stand still in the face of a problem never has proven to be a method of solving the problem.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: There should be a new library. The existing facility in Newton Corner is terribly outmoded, unsafe and is not located centrally enough for accessibility for all parties in the city. The most reasonable method and location in my opinion is the Warren Junior High School. It has an exceptional location in terms of public transportation. The amenity of the surrounding park impressed me. Adaptive reuse was possible under reasonable fiscal restraint and an alternative for a brand new facilty at Homer and Walnut. I'm of the opinion that there are other possible sites that should be re-looked at before a decision can be made by anybody as to whether or not the city constructs a brand new facility.

Activist to bring experience to post

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

Harold S. Williams

NEWTON — Former importer Harold S. Williams says he wants to bring his business and community activism experience to the Board of Aldermen as an Alderman-at-Large from Ward 5.

The 73-year-old Williams lives in Waban with his wife Esther. He is the father of four children; Robert, 38; Alan, 37; Rebecca, 35 and Morissa, 27.

Williams is active in many civic and religious organizations.

He is Chairman of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and a board member of the Newton Community Center, Hospice of the Good Shepard, the Council on Aging, West Suburban Elder Services, Waban Improvement Society and a member of the Newton Recycling Committee.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for the job of Ward 5 Alderman-at-Large?

A: First of all, I would be more attentive to what an alderman should do. I would attend more meetings and, because of my background educationally and in business, I have a wealth of experience. I have a lot to contribute because I have dealt with so many people from so many different walks of life.

Q: What's the one thing your opponents failed to accomplish last term?

A: One of my opponents, Paul Daley, is best known for his lack of attendence. Otherwise, I can't pick them out as individual failures. They do spend a lot of time in settling the library question.

Q: If elected, what one goal would you have for the upcoming term?

A: My goal is to do what's best for the city and people of Newton. What ever comes up, I will try to do what is best and vote for what I think is best. There should be more feeling between the villages. The villages should get together more often and do what's best for the city. It's important, because when things come up, sometimes one village will say they don't want a certain project and so forth. We need to work that out.

Q: Do you think aldermen and School Committee members should be paid, and if so, how much?

A: I think aldermen and School Committee members should get paid. I do believe people should get paid if they attend to work properly. I personally think they should be paid because they put in a lot of time and effort and there is a certain expense to doing this work. It is one thing to be a volunteer and another thing with expenses. Those things should be taken care of. I am not really sure, however, how much aldermen and School Committee members should be paid.

Q: Do you think there should be a moratorium on commercial development until zoning laws are revised?

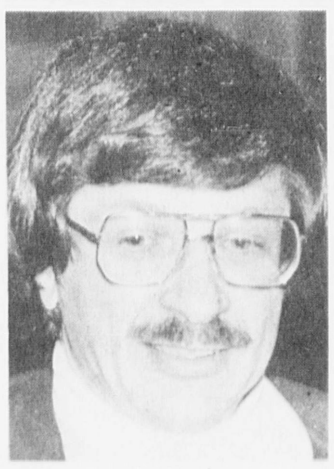

A: It depends on how soon zoning ordinances are changed. I would not want to see a long, complete moratorium. I think it would hurt many people. I think too many hardships would be created by having a full moratorium. On the other hand, I see merits for a very short moratorium until zoning laws are changed — a few months or less. Some new projects are legitimate, and some new projects are for speculation. It is very hard to make a decision.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where do you think it should be located?

A: There is no question that the city needs a new library. It's needed one for years. The longer we wait, the more costly it will be. Already, it's cost $7 million more than the original amount. As far as the location, it should be the decision of the people who've worked on it. They've had consultant projects to determine what is the best place. I have no objections to the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets. I personally think it's a good site.

Malec uncontested in third try

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

Michael Malec

NEWTON — Ward 5 Alderman Michael Malec, running uncontested, will begin his third term on the Board of Aldermen in January.

Malec, 44, is a Professor of Sociology at Boston College.

He lives at 53 Margaret Road in Newton Highlands with his wife, Myrna. They have two children, Timothy, 18 and Thomas, 14.

Malec is an ex-officio member of the Newton Highlands Neighborhood Association and is a member of the Waban Improvement Council.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: I think I have mixed reactions. From a selfish, personal viewpoint, I'm glad I don't have to ask friends for money to finance my campaign and I'm glad I don't have to spend a lot of time conducting a campaign. From a broader, more civic point of view and looking at this issue city-wide, I think it's unfortunate that there aren't more people seeking office.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of during the last term?

A: I'm most proud of the fact that I think I had a lot to do with pushing for funding of city facilities; the Crafts Street yard and the Elliot Yard. I think one of the biggest rewards of being an alderman is when you can do something seemingly small on a city-wide perspective, but which is very important to an individual constituent, like helping get a tree stump removed. It is the little things an alderman does on a day-to-day basis that don't really get noticed, but are very rewarding.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: My new goal is the development of plans for the reuse of a number of currently surplus city buildings. In particular, I would like to see the final plans for the use of the Hyde School.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until zoning laws are revised?

A: I voted for a limited moratorium when the issue was before the Board of Aldermen, but I don't think I would support a moratorium right at this moment given that there are at least three committees or groups looking into zoning and related issues today.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid for their work, and if so, how much.

A: I voted against the most recent salary increase for the Board of Aldermen. Our current level of pay is a little on the high side. Whatever level of pay the board gets should also be received by the School Committee.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: Yes, we definitely need a new library, and I have advocated since 1970 the Homer Walnut site.

Meet the candidates

Each week, The Newton Graphic will highlight candidates running for alderman and school committee seats. The series focusses on issues facing Newton and topics that are likely to be discussed during the race, which culminates on election day, Nov. 5. The series started in The Graphic's Aug. 7 edition with Ward 1 candidates.

This week's paper focuses on Ward 5 candidates. Out of fairness to all parties involved, this newspaper will continue to interview candidates numerically, ward by ward.

School Committee

Nielsen interested in long term

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

Angela Nielsen

NEWTON — Angela Nielsen — uncontested in her reelection bid for the Ward 5 School Committee seat — believes the purpose of education is to "delight and entertain" students throughout their entire life.

"(Our goal as School Committee members) is to decide how we can best help the kids in this city get a good education and not just with regards to the short term," Nielsen, a resident of 129 Wood End Road, said.

The mother of two daughters — Lara, a senior a Newton South, and Anna, a seventh grader at Brown Junior High — Nielsen feels many of the decisions made by the School Committee last year were "shortsighted" mistakes that could effect established educational standards for children throughout the the city. "In a school system like ours, it's very easy to get into short term planning," she said. "But these are lives we're dealing with."

Seeking her second term as a member of the committee, the graduate of the University of Pennsylvania feels the decision to close Bigelow Junior High School was one of those "horrendous mistakes." With the loss of Bigelow, she believes, the committee has "cut off its option" of grade reorganization, and the city's other schools will not be able to handle the combination of grades six, seven and eight.

As a result of overcrowding, "the School Committee has been forced to ask for money to refurbish buildings because we don't have the space," Nielsen said. "I'm gald they're over. It was a major mistake, but it's past history."

A former president of Brown Junior High School's PTA, a member of the search committee for the assistant superintendent of curriculum and instruction, a member of the PTA's Executive Board and currently a member of Newton South's PTA, Nielsen is running because she knows a lot about the city's school system.

"I'm a good listener, and I care about what happens to the people in our schools," Nielsen said. "We have a super staff, terrific kids and very supportive parents."

School Committee members, like their counterparts on the Board of Aldermen and in the executive department, should receive a stipend as a "matter of equity," she said. "The $3,000 dollars is not really pay. You don't do it (serve on the committee) for the money."

Nielsen, who is currently teaching European Literature part-time at Brookline High School, thinks limiting the tenure of school committee members is a good idea since they tend "to get tired, worn out." Once that happens, she added, "they don't listen to what other people are saying."

Other School Committee concerns this year, she said, should include monitoring declining enrollment at the secondary level, promoting teacher development, examining the committee's priorities and listening to couples who do not have children in the school system. "We must pay attention to what we are doing as a system and why," Nielsen said.

Police briefs

Car radios lifted from autos in driveway

AUBURNDALE — Radios were taken out of two cars parked in a driveway off Leslie Road, according to a police report received last week. An Alpine AM-FM radio/cassette player reportedly worth $900 and a pair of sunglasses worth $40 were stolen out of a 1982 Saab. No value was put on the radio stolen from a 1984 Volkswagen.

Pleads not guilty of receiving 'hot' tires

NEWTONVILLE — Angelo D. Paolini, 53, of Newtonville, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment yesterday in Newton District Court on four counts of receiving stolen property over $100.

Paolini, a self-employed contractor, allegedly received four Goodyear Eagle GT radial tires and rims on different dates.

Newton Police spokesperson Cynthia Webster said Friday that the police department was investigating the possibility that the tires may have come from police vehicles.

Chief William F. Quinn was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Coach threatened by destructive youths

NEWTON CORNER — The coach of a girls' soccer team playing last week at Cabot Park was allegedly threatened by a group of boys, one of whom had a baseball bat, after he asked them to stop beating on a bench near the field, according to police.

The victim told police he saw two boys in the early teens striking the bench with a baseball bat. He demanded they stop, but they continued and the bench was destroyed. The boys ran away, but returned later and implied they might strike the coach with the bat, according to police. The youths then fled to a house on Winchester Road, the coach told police, who are still investigating the matter.

Vandals break into Spencer Street home

WEST NEWTON — A home on Spencer Street was broken into last week. The break was reported to police at 2 p.m. Friday.

CHESTNUT HILL — A woman who left her keys in her car while she ran into the post office on Middlesex Road Saturday returned to watch her car being driven away by an unknown white male, according to police.

The car was recovered by Boston Police Monday on Old Harbor Road, South Boston. The tires, ignition and front end of the car had been damaged. The woman also left her purse, which contained $100 and credit cards, in the car.

Saab looted; radio and wallet missing

NEWTON CENTRE — A Saab parked on Sumner Street was broken into last week, according to police. Taken were a portable radio and a wallet containing $10 in cash, credit cards and a driver's license.

Car reported stolen from MBTA station

CHESTNUT HILL — A car was reported stolen from the Chestnut Hill MBTA station at 4 p.m. Saturday, according to police.

Pair arrested after fleeing by car, foot

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A high-speed police chase through Newton Centre, Brookline and Brighton Wednesday afternoon, culminating in a footrace between a Newton policeman and a suspect, resulted in the arrest of a man and a woman on larceny charges.

Andre Hunter, 23, of Roxbury, and Rosalynn Averett, 21, of Brighton, were arraigned last week in Newton District Court on charges of larceny of property over $100 and larceny of a motor vehicle. They were being held in Middlesex County Jail in lieu of $1,000 cash bail.

Police received a call just before 5 p.m. from an employee of The Lodge clothing store on Needham Street after Hunter and Averett allegedly tried to steal eight pairs of jeans from the store.

According to police, they were noticed by the employee and left the jeans in the store. However, the clerk was able to get the license plate number of the light blue four-door in which they left.

A computer check listed the car as stolen out of Boston on Aug. 26.

As Newton Police Officer Hugh Downing, in his cruiser, approached the car in Newton Centre, the car sped away and Downing followed. The chase continued east on Beacon Street. Hunter drove through numerous red lights and stop signs along the way, according to police reports.

The fleeing car finally crashed into a Volkswagen bus in front of 1965 Beacon Street, and its passengers jumped out and fled on foot.

By this time, Downing had been joined in the chase by Brookline Police Officer Robert Murphy, who took off after Averett while Downing chased Hunter. Averett was quickly apprehended. Downing caught up with Hunter near Strathmore Road in Brookline after climbing over the steel fence along the MBTA Green Line while pursuing him on foot.

During the car chase, the suspects had tossed into the street about $370 worth of clothing stolen from Potpourri Designs in Newton Centre. An employee of the store confirmed she had seen two persons in the shop matching the descriptions of the suspects earlier in the day.

Hunter and Averett both pleaded not guilty to charges of larceny of a motor vehicle and larceny of property over $100. Hunter also pleaded not guilty to failure to stop for a police officer, operating a motor vehicle negligently so as to endanger and operating without a license.

Their case was continued to Sept. 12.

Hotline ready for drug information

CAMBRIDGE — Middlesex County District Attorney Scott Harshbarger has established a toll-free hotline for the general public to call with any information they have concerning narcotics. Harshbarger emphasized that citizen involvement in law enforcement efforts which combat the illegal use or distribution of narcotics is critical. Information received through the hotline is forwarded to the appropriate police department with jurisdiction. The toll-free number is 1-800-445-4499.

The drug hotline has been used on numerous occasions since it became operational in June of this year. Hotline callers have provided the District Attorney's Office with substantial information regarding illegal drug-related activity in the county.

District Attorney Harshbarger's Office has continued to focus attention on aiding local narcotics enforcement efforts. "We are committed to alleviating the fear of drug pushers and the threat they represent to the citizens of Middlesex County. Cooperation between law enforcement agencies and the general public is essential to continuing our committment to ensure public safety," said Harshbarger.

Car reported stolen from MBTA station

CHESTNUT HILL — A car was reported stolen from the Chestnut Hill MBTA station at 4 p.m. Saturday, according to police.

A first-day-of-school story

Mrs. Marion S. Blank is a Professor Emeritus in the Boston University School of Social Work. For over 20 years, she taught clinical courses in social casework and in casework with children and adolescents at Boston University.

This story may be read to youngsters before they start elementary school. Hopefully it can be used to encourage an interchange between the child and his parents — or any caretaker.

Mrs. Blank is currently Chairperson of the Newton Commission.

Billy is ready to go to the big school. He is excited and a little scared. Most new adventures make you feel both ways.

Billy has his new navy corduroy pants. He will be wearing a red and white striped T-shirt that his grandmother sent him last year. He has finally grown into it. She always sends him clothing which is a little too large. She tries to encourage him to grow faster. Maybe it helps. He is getting bigger.

Going to school is not new to Billy. He attended swimming class before he could walk. He learned to enjoy the water and to swim and become a "Certified Water Baby." He attended "Mommy 'N Me Creative Music Class."

Billy also attended nursery school. The teachers liked him. He heard one tell his mother, "He is a fine addition to the group." He also listened when his father and mother talked about his Nursery School experience. They looked pleased when they used words like curious and bright, helpful, with a good sense of humor. They spoke of his learning the difference between leading and being bossy.

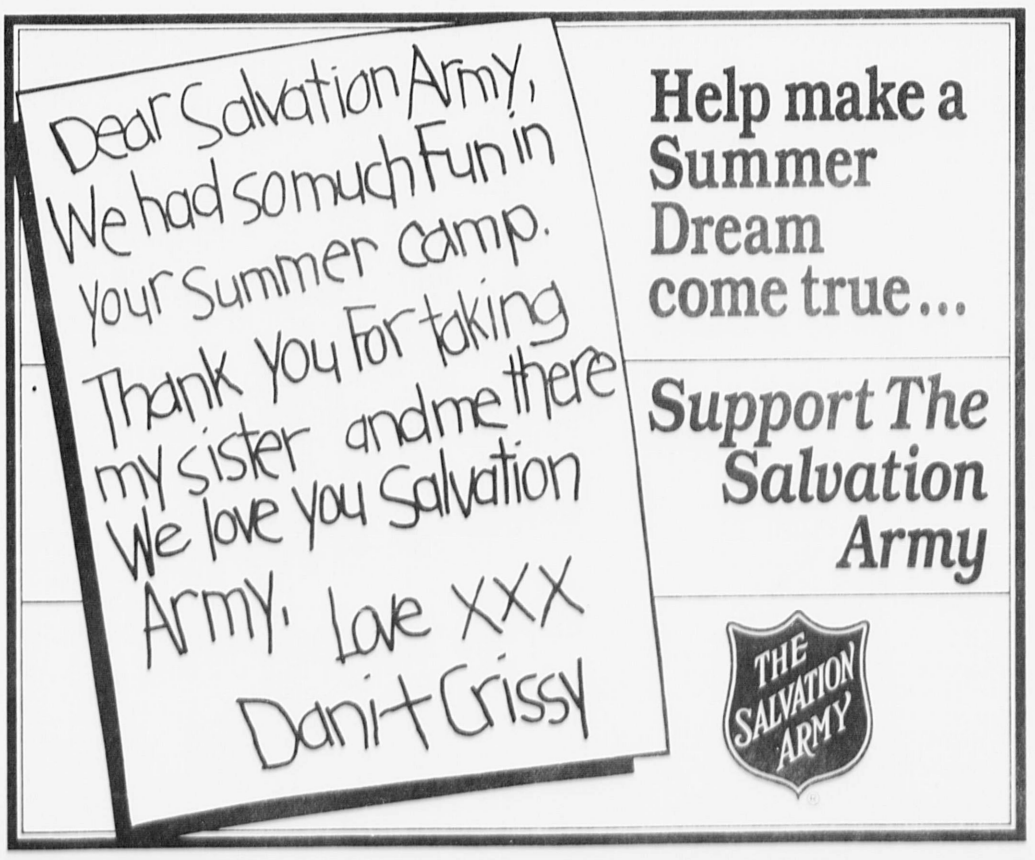

Billy has frequently played school and has been told a lot about school. His parents always talk with him and tell him what's ahead. As much as they know, that is. There will be more children in his class than before. There will be one teacher. He met Miss Howell last spring when he toured the school and he visited her classroom. He wondered if she was noisy when he heard her name, Miss "Howl". But, she spoke softly to him and looked pleased to meet him. The other kids in the class that year looked happy and comfortable too. There were lots of toys and books around. There were colorful drawings and papers with writing hanging everywhere.

Billy can read and write some. But he knows he has much more to learn. He is ready to get to it. Many of his family live far away. He hopes he can write them letters soon. Then he will receive more mail, which is always fun. He'd love to be able to read his letters to his parents rather than having them read to him.

Billy's school bag is ready. His new pencil case is in order. His hair has been cut. Plans have been made for him to walk to school with his older friend next door. His mother offered to walk him or drive him. She looked as if she wanted to do one or the other. But going to school is a big and important step in growing up. He might as well start walking with his friend. His mother will understand. He knows she will be at home waiting for his news at the end of that first day of school.

Electric rates may shock consumers

By Gregg Howard
Copley News Service

Consumers are in for a jolt this year. Electricity rates are expected to be higher than ever in many parts of the country, and that may mean a shock for consumers when they see their bills.

Recent media reports have cited the following rate increases:

— The Long Island Lighting Company's electric rates may double in five years.

— The Public Service Company of New Hampshire expects rates to increase at least 40 percent within a year.

— Arizona Public Service has asked for a 55.7 percent increase to be phased in over five years.

Some of the causes of increased rates: delays and cost overruns in utility construction projects, inflation, high interest rates and increased costs in labor and supplies, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

"Although many state regulatory agencies are acting on behalf of the consumer and trying to phase in the increases, the utilities still have to cover costs of constructing new generating facilities," said Alan Nogee, a utility analyst for the Environmental Action Foundation, a Washington, D.C.-based public interest group. "Consumers can expect steady increases in electric rates for many years to come."

The best way to curb the increases, then, is to reduce energy consumption so that new facilities are not necessary.

"The key is conservation — cutting down on enery usage," said Richard Trumbull, vice president of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., a manufacturer of insulation.

Installing insulation, tightening up the home and cutting back on appliance use will save on both heating and cooling costs, Trumbull said. Insulation, for example, helps keep the house cool in the summer the same way it keeps a home warm in winter — by slowing the transfer of heat.

Trumbull recommends that home owners have an energy audit — a thorough inspection of the home by a trained professional — to find out where improvements can be made to cut down on heating and cooling costs.

"Most utilities offer this service to their customers at a very low cost, usually under $15," he said.

Many utilities also guarantee low-interest loans for customers who want to upgrade insulation or implement other energy-saving recommendations.

Utilities offer other programs to help consumers save money on electric bills, such as making peak-hour electricity more expensive. That's right, more expensive.

Peak hours — 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. — are when thousands of households run energy guzzlers such as air conditioners, dishwashers, dryers, fans and power tools. Customers often are charged as much as 25 percent more for electricity during those hours.

This way, the utility still enjoys healthy income from peak-hour electricity usage, but consumers can opt to use as little electricity as possible during the peak hours and therefore save money with less expensive off-peak rates.

There are even devices available to help consumers avoid peak-hour usage. For example, a special control for a water heater will heat water only during off-peak hours. If the tank is properly insulated, the water will remain hot for use during peak hours. This unit enables consumers to use less of the costly peak-hour electricity while not having to change their lifestyles.

Consumers are in for a surprise. Electricity rates are expected to be higher than ever in many parts of the country.

Seeing the way to energy efficiency

By Eric Jude
Copley News Service

If the high cost of heating and cooling your home is becoming a burden, take it out on your windows.

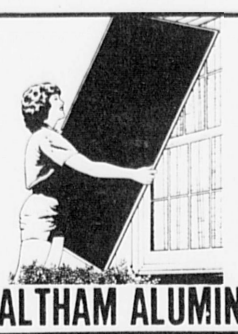

"Windows can be a prime culprit in high heating costs," said H.T. "Hank" Fenderbosch, president of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry, a 3,000-member trade association based in Arlington, Va.

"Leaking or inefficient windows allow warm air to penetrate your home in the summer and let cold air in during the winter," he said.

But before you board up your windows, consider this: "The installation of storm and/or energy-efficient replacement windows now will begin paying for itself immediately," Fenderbosch said. "In fact, you pay for new windows whether you have them or not. You either pay for increased heating and air conditioning costs, or you pay for new windows," he said.

Fenderbosch suggests contacting a professional contractor to install storm or replacement windows.

Storm windows can be fitted to either the interior or, more commonly, the exterior of existing windows and frames. Energy-efficient replacement windows actually take the place of existing windows to provide better insulation than regular windows. "The purchase of replacement and/or storm windows offers the consumer many choices of materials in a wide range of prices," Fenderbosch said. "A contracter will not only install your storm or replacement windows, but can also help you select the best product for your needs and budget."

Setback thermostat can cut costs

By Dean Carroll
Copley News Service

During summer, you may try to cut energy costs by turning off the air conditioning during the day while no one is home. After work, however, you may have to cool off in front of an open refrigerator until the air conditioner reaches full force again.

In winter, the scenario may be even more frustrating. At night, you set back the thermostat to 58 degrees Fahrenheit, just before hopping into a multi-blanketed bed. The alarm goes off eight hours later, and you break an icicle off the dog's tail while waiting for the furnace to reheat the house.

U.S. Department of Energy statistics show that home owners can save 30 percent on winter heating bills and up to 25 percent on summer cooling bills by using the thermostat setback method.

But does it have to be uncomfortable?

No. With automatic and programmable setback thermostats, you can enjoy energy savings without sacrificing comfort.

A programmable thermostat uses a computerized, electronic memory to accomplish the task of raising and lowering the temperature in a home at the time a home owner specifies. It is capable of remembering different daily programs so a person can match his weekday and weekend schedules with energy use.

For example, on steaming August days, the programmable thermostat automatically will turn on the air conditioning 15 minutes before you walk in the door.

In winter, the programmable thermostat will turn on the heat 15 minutes before your alarm goes off. So you can wake up to a warm home after saving energy all night long.

Some thermostats, rather than simply turning on the heater at the time specified, actually calculate when the furnace should come on to meet a programmed setting.

"This ensures that the desired room temperature is reached at the exact time the user specifies," said Mike Levine, chairman and founder and Quad Six Inc., a thermostat manufacturer. The thermostat's ability to calculate how long it will take to reach a programmed set-point eliminates unnecessary running of the furnace, he said.

A variety of setback thermostats offer great flexibility allowing you to set night, week and weekend temperatures all at once. Most programmable thermostats can handle at least four different timed temperature settings a day. Some offer as many as six.

Thermostats also can include features such as digital clock display, manual override and the ability to keep a tally of energy use for saving comparisons.

Most thermostats are installed through direct wiring. Check with a professional to ensure that the wiring on your old thermostat is compatible to the wiring necessary for the programmable thermostat.

Other thermostats do not require rewiring. These add-on programmable thermostats are compatible with more than 80 percent of round and rectangular thermostat types, according to Jerry Carrino, vice president of sales and marketing for First Alert, manufacturers of the autostat thermostat. Add-on programmable thermostats use the same microprocessor technology as the more expensive wired-in models, but they can be installed in minutes by virtually anyone, Carrino said.

Install your own garden pool

By Popular Mechanics
Distributed by UPI

A garden pool makes a very appealing addition to your landscaping. Planted with colorful flowers and stocked with fish, it takes on a vitality of its own. Waterfalls and fountains add to the visual interest and introduce a pleasing sound.

The first step in water gardening is to select the type, shape and size of the pool you want.

A simple tub pool requires no construction and is the easiest water garden to tend. Other options are a pool lined with flexible PVC sheet plastic that can have any freeform shape that appeals to you; a rigid fiberglass pool that can fit easily into a shallow, hand-dug excavation; or a masonry pool, whether made of concrete or concrete topped with brick, that gives a look of permanence as well as elegance to your yard.

When planning a pool, first select a sunny site where water flowers can thrive. Keep the pool away from shrubs and trees that will shed their leaves into the water, requiring constant cleanup.

If you want fish or water plants, the minimum depth is 1½ to 2 feet. A reflecting pool or one for strictly shallow-water plants requires less depth. No matter what type you choose, remember that local building ordinances may require that pools of a certain depth be fenced.

Also, pumps or lighting in the pool will require electric power and grounding. Use three-prong grounded circuits and plan the source before building the pool.

Tub gardens, whether made from half a wine barrel, an old claw-foot bath tub or a simple plastic pan, can be your introduction to water gardening. The same techniques you'll learn to keep the water clear or chemically balanced in them will work with larger pools as well.

Water lilies partly cover the water surface to help minimize oxygen loss and keep the water cooler. Snails eat algae and consume the decaying matter on which algae feed. Fish eat algae and other pests.

In addition to being good for modeling any size or shape pool, PVC liners can also repair leaky pools of any type. Determine liner size by adding twice the depth of the pool to total width and twice the depth to total length.

For a freeform shape, make an outline on the ground using a garden hose or rope before starting to dig. If you plan edging, remove the turf to make room for it. Leaving 9-inch-wide planting shelves 9 inches below the planned water level accomodates shallow-water plants.

Level the edges of the pool so the liner won't show by using a spirit level on a flat board bridging the pool. Pivot the board from one point at the edge of the pool so all sides will be the same height around its perimeter. Remove any sharp stones or roots that might puncture the liner. Lay a ½-inch cushion of damp sand along the bottom to cushion the PVC liner. On rough ground, add an underlayment of building-grade polyethylene.

Place the PVC liner in the prepared pool opening with plenty of overhang around the edges. Weight the liner with stones and fill it slowly with water, making adjustments as it settles. Let the liner settle for a week or more before trimming the edges to create a 6-inch lip. Peg the liner to the ground with 20d nails.

Edge the pool with stones or brick laid in a mortar bed of 3 parts sand to 1 part cement. Take care to keep the mortar out of the pool, because the lime in it will kill your fish and plants.

Concrete or brick and concrete pools can be major construction projects. When digging out the pool area as planned, allow for 4 inches of crushed stone fill in the bottom. Lay 6x6-inch, 6-gauge steel concrete reinforcing mesh over the bottom of the pool, propping it up on the crushed stone so it will be about 3 inches above the bottom.

Use ready-mix concrete for the bottom slab. Spread the concrete with a spade and level it with a screed. Keep the slab wet by sprinkling it with water, then covering it with polyethylene sheet.

After 8 to 10 hours, wet down t plywood forms for the walls a brace them in place. Install r forcing mesh, then pour concrete to the top of the forms. Let the walls dry for 10 hours before removing the forms, and for 5 days before backing the hole.

Kathy (Musser) and Gordan Marshall

Kathy Lou Musser marries Gordan Marshall June 29

At an 11 a.m. ceremony held June 29 at the Annisquam Village Church in Annisquam, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Rowley Musser of Hanover, N.H., formerly of Wellesley Hills, and sister Karen Whitla gave their daughter/sister, Kathy Lou in marriage to Gordan Marshall of Newton and New London, N.H. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Fayette Severance of the Annisquam Village Church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Marshall of New London, N.H. and Annisquam, formerly of Newton.

The bride wore a gown imported from England of pure white cotton lawn, ruffled and bowed with a hooped petticoat. Silk sprigs of white apple blossoms and Lily of the Valley held a sheer white veil trimmed in white satin, and she wore white lace gloves. The bride carried a cascade of white roses, Stephanotes, Baby's Breath and English Ivy.

Karen Whitla of Medway, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Janet Marshall of Watertown, sister of the groom; Barbara Douglass, Wellesley; Maura Sullivan, Wellesley; Laurie Rutherford, Montreal, Canada; and Sally Lee of Beverly Farms. Susan Kempton of Swansea attended the guest book.

The attendants wore printed cotton striped dresses of periwinkle blue and white. The matron of honor wore a cotton striped dress in dusty rose, and all wore a garland of meadow flowers. Their bouquets were meadow flowers.

Roderick Marshall of Kettering, Ohio, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were Duncan Marshall, brother of the groom of Dublin, Calif.; Jonathan Soule, Concord; James McGarry, Arlington; Donald Krier, Westfield; Thomas Skinner, Newton; and David Teplow, Newton.

The bride is a graduate of Wellesley High School, 1980. Kathy received her B.A. in art/mathematics from Colby College, Waterville, Maine, 1984. She is presently attending the Art Institute of Boston. The groom attended Newton North, 1977; Tabor Academy and Colby College, Waterville, Maine, 1983. He is presently employed as a brokerage representative for Fidelity Brokerage.

Following a reception at the Life Saving Station, Annisquam, summer home of the groom's parents, the couple left for Bermuda. They are living in Watertown.

Debra and Ronald Lipof

Lowenstein weds Lipof

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lowenstein announce the marriage of their daughter, Debra Lynn, to Ronald Charles Lipof, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Lipof, of Newton. The couple were married on Sunday, June 30, at 5 p.m. at Temple Emanuel in Newton.

Rabbi Samuel Chiel and Cantor Harry Gelman officiated the ceremony. Sandra Richman was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Laurie Handler, Robin Eliasberg, Julie Osinski, Anne Prince, Sheryle Lipof, and Patricia DeMarco. Best man was Mark Lipof, brother of the groom.

The bride wore a white satin gown, long train, puff sleeves, embroidered lace bodice and sleeves. A matching headpiece was worn with a long train veil. The bride carried a bible covered with orchids, roses and baby sweet breath.

Debra graduated from Simmons College and is an executive with the Jordan Marsh Co. The bridegroom attended Boston University, and is currently employed at Fleet National Bank.

Following a honeymoon to St. Maarten, the couple reside in Norwood.

New arrival

Patrick and Leanne (Nicolas) Ball of Newton announce the birth of their second child, a daughter, Brenna Lee, on July 5 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Brenna joins her brother, Patrick. Materal grandparents are Patrick and Audrey Nicolas of West Newton and paternal grandparents are Raymond and Margaret Ball of Newtonville.

Test your knowledge of social security now

Social Security celebrated its 50th birthday in August, 1985. How much do you know about this important program that has served several generations of Americans over the past century? Test your "Social Security I.Q." by answering true or false to these questions. The answers appear at the end.

1. America was the first country to have Social Security and, even today, is one of the few nations to have it.

2. Social Security pays benefits to people of all ages.

3. Social Security checks are paid only to people in need.

4. Disability benefits are paid only to those who are permanently and totally disabled.

5. Children can get survivors' checks even if a deceased parent paid into Social Security for only 1½ years.

6. A retiree can get benefits only if he or she has no income from working.

7. Social Security only partly replaces income that is lost or reduced due to disability, death, or retirement.

8. If you switch occupations or start working in aother state, you lose all Social Security work credits previously earned.

9. Most Social Security beneficiaries pay federal income taxes on their monthly benefits.

10. People who continue working full time poast 65 can still have Medicare even though they are not retired.

ANSWERS - How did you do? If you got 9 or 10 right, your knowledge of Social Security is "excellent". A score of 7 or 8 would be "good," and 5 or 6 "average".

1. False: When the Social Security Act was signed into law in America in 1935, several major nations already had social insurance (in fact Germany's system began a half-century earlier). Today, most countries of the world have some form of Social Security.

2. True: Over 36 million men, women, and children — more than one in every seven Americans — receive monthly disability, survivors, or retirement benefits.

3. False: Social Security benefits are paid to insured workers and their families as an earned right. If a person has worked long enough (and recently enough in the case of disability checks), benefits must be paid. There is no means test.

4. False: Disability benefits can be paid if a person's impairment prevents all substantial gainful work for at least one year. The impairment need not be permanently disabling.

5. True: Children can receive survivors checks if a parent earned Social Security work credits for as little as 1½ years in the three years before death.

6. False: A person does not have to stop working entirely to receive Social Security. Free leaflets at any Social Security office explain how much an individual can earn and still receive some benefits.

7. True: Social Security never was intended to replace all income lost or reduced because of disability, death, or retirement. Workers are encouraged to build supplemental protection with savings, other insurance, pensions, investments, and so on.

8. False: Since most employment and self-employment are now covered by Social Security, any and all work credits earned can count toward future benefits.

9. False: Only about one in 10 beneficiaries — those with high outside income in addition to benefits — pay federal income tax on part of their benefits.

10. True: A person does not have to retire or reduce earnings to get Medicare, hospital, and medical insurance.

Radio event

Vermont governor will speak at forum

NEWTON — The Lillian Shapiro Radlo Forum presents Madeleine Kunin, Governor of Vermont, in its first event on Sept. 19 at 1:45 p.m. at Newton South High School, 160 Brandeis Rd., Newton Center.

The forum, a memorial to perpetuate the ideas of Lillian Radlo, will provide a setting for the free exchange of ideas and the airing of controversial viewpoints.

Lillian Radlo, described as a "renaissance woman," was active in education, politics, the arts and parenting. She was a member of the Newton Democratic Committee, a delegate to the State Nominating Committee and chairperson of the Newton Events Committee of Barney Frank's congressional campaign. An accomplished writer, she served as an Assistant to the Superintendent of the Newton Public Schools from 1972 to 1983. She was also on the Board of Directors of the Dana Hall School in Wellesley.

The forum sponsored by members of the Lillian Radlo Fund is free and open to the public.

Contributions for the continuation of these forums may be made to:

'Fiddler' to open

NEWTON — The Turtle Lane Playhouse is producing "Fiddler on the Roof" Sept. 13 through Oct. 12, Thursday through Sunday evenings at 8 p.m.

"Fiddler on the Roof" tells the story of Tevye, a dairyman, and his family who live as their forefathers did, observing the dictates of tradition until these dictates no longer suffice and they must become part of this changing world.

New rec complex

NEWTON — The Newton Parks and Recreation Department announces that the Newton North Recreation Indoor Complex at Newton North High will open on Monday, Oct. 7, and will be open Monday through Friday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Arts foundation seeks performers for touring

CAMBRIDGE — The New England Foundation for the Arts is accepting applications from performing groups that wish to be considered for the Foundation's regional touring roster.

The New England Touring Program roster is a list of more than 100 groups that perform classical, contemporary and folk music, as well as jazz, opera, dance, theater, mime and puppetry. These groups are committed to touring throughout New England. Organizations presenting groups from this list can apply to the Foundation for grants to cover up to one-third of the artists' fees.

Each year the Foundation accepts applications from performing groups (not individuals) interested in being included on the roster. A description and picture of each group accepted is published in the Foundation's "Guide to Programs and Services," which is distributed to more than 3,700 potential presenters in New England.

Performing groups must reside in one of the six New England states and all members of the group must be paid appropriate proessional wages. Groups applying for inclusion on the regional roster are evaluated on the basis of artistic excellence, touring experience, experience and ability in audience education and outreach, quality of promotional material, and management capability.

Performing groups interested in being evaluated for the New England Touring Program should contact the Foundation immediately for application materials and complete guidelines. Call the foundation at 617-492-2914. Deadline for submission of complete materials is 5 p.m., Sept. 16. Early applications are encouraged.

Celebrity golf Sept. 23

The keys to a Volvo donated by Ray Ciccolo of Newton's Volvo Village will be awarded to anyone shooting a hole-in-one at the First Annual Celebrity Golf Tournament and Dinner to benefit the seven arts organizations of the Fund for the Arts in Newton (FAN) on Monday, Sept. 23 at the Woodland Golf Course.

The day-long event will be highlighted by lunch, golf, a celebrity dinner hosted by WHDH's Jess Cain and the presentation of the Theodore D. Mann Cup.

The event is chaired by Barbara Levy, Mark Warshaw and Dave Freedman. Celebrities who have already signed up to participate in the tournament are Dick Albert, Frank Avruch, John Dennis, Rep. Joseph DeNucci, Brian Dowling, Pat Eagan, Kenny Hodge, Brian Leary, Dave Maynard, Jack Williams, Frank Maznicki, Eileen Prose, Milt Schmidt, Len St. Jean, Billy Sullivan, Jr., and Wilbur Wood.

A contribution of $150 to FAN will allow you to play with celebrities as well as enjoy lunch and dinner. Separate dinner tickets at $25 per person are also available. Call FAN at 332-9110 for more information or reservations.

Pearl Bailey takes Lung post

NEWTON — Entertainer Pearl Bailey has accepted the national chairmanship of the 1985 Christmas Seal Campaign of the American Lung Association according to George S. Bennett, president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association located in Walpole.

Bailey, who also served as the association's 1984 National Christmas seal chairman, is only the third individual to be asked to serve a second term as chief spokesman for the 78-year-old organization's annual Christmas seal fund raising effort. Vikki Carr and Bob Hope were the other repeat performers as Christmas Seal chairman.

Last year Bailey traveled an estimated 15,000 miles making appearances on behalf of the Lung Association and Christmas Seals. Her stops ranged from calling on the president at the White House, to TV studios in Chicago, press conferences in California, and special presentations backstage on Broadway.

Financial planners: Are they needed?

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

By Neville D. Frankel

Dear Mr. Frankel:

We'd like to have your opinion on a matter causing some disagreement in my family. I have an uncle who constantly teases my patient husband (a successful financial planner), saying that he provides an unecessary service. He bases his argument on the fact that my grandfather who was a stockbroker, helped his clients with their tax returns, answered insurance questions for them, and even discussed their estate plans with them.

Is there a difference between what my grandfather did, and financial planning? If so, what is it? I hope you can say something definitive that will end this boring topic of conversation in our house.

A. C., Brookline

Dear A.C.:

This may be a boring topic of conversation, but it's not a new one. It results, I believe, from a lack of knowledge. Your uncle has obviously not been reading my column, or he would know better.

First I'll address his blanket statement concerning financial planners. Experience teaches that, for purposes of our discussion, people fall into one of three categories.

There are those who have no aspirations, no needs, no responibilities, no income, or outgo, no assets, no taxes. Such people probably have no need for financial planning, but I wouldn't know, having never met one.

Then there are those able to satisfy the demands of family and of profession, and still be butcher, baker, and candlestick maker. Such people have the time to become expert in insurance, taxation, investments and estate planning. Your uncle is correct about them — they need no planner. They have something in common with the first group — they have no needs that they themselves cannot fulfill. They are generally not people who need people, and most often, others can do without them, too.

The third group consists of everyone else, and each member of this group needs help in achieving at least some of the following objectives:

1. Covering all insurable risks with the best coverage at the lowest cost;

2. Making sure that retirement income is sufficient;

3. Arranging an estate plan that will adhere to the wishes of the client, and that will take advantage of all the appropriate estate-tax reduction techniques;

4. Lowering income taxes;

5. Ensuring that investments are appropriately selected, adequately diversified, and at the right risk tolerance level;

6. Providing cash-flow management where necessary, and making sure that a variety of other needs (college planning, support of a relative) are best met in the most tax-wise manner possible.

Your grandfather sounds like an admirable man, and I'm sure that he had many devoted clients. The fact is that anyone working in one financial area cannot help but pick up a certain amount of knowledge about the others. The taxation expert knows something about estate planning; the stockbroker knows something about insurance, if only because he has read company literature recommending the purchase of stock in an insurance company. And the insurance agent understands estate planning because the product he sells is often purchased to complete an estate plan. However, few of them would claim to be expert in all the areas mentioned.

The function of a planner is to help people achieve the six objectives mentioned above, and this is done with the help of a team of experts. Each expert knows better than anyone else where his area of expertise begins–and where it ends. And because he knows his limitations, he is happy to hand the reins over to someone who will put his recommendations into a larger context.

(On the subject of family conflict: The best way to silence a bully is to call his bluff. Have your husband offer to prove his usefulness by completing a financial plan for your uncle, who will than have to put his money where his mouth is. Who needs Ann Landers?)

John El-Masry suspended for season at Duke

By David Cuddy, Sports Correspondent

DURHAM, N.C. — Duke University's John El-Masry, a former Waltham High standout athlete, has been suspended from the school's football team following his involvement in an assault of another Duke student, university officials announced Saturday.

According to The Sun-Herald in Durham, N.C., El-Masry was unknowingly part of a cocaine deal gone-sour in February involving a friend, two other university students, and an outsider.

In February, El-Masry and a student-friend allegedly encountered Alexander Van Dyne, who was apparently fleeing from a bogus cocaine deal involving El-Masry's friend and one other student.

Van Dyne and the outsider had reportedly set up a phony drug deal in which Van Dyne made off with $10,000 after showing up to make the deal without the drugs. Van Dyne then reportedly stuck a gun in the buyers' faces and took the money.

In a later encounter, El-Masry, who wasn't at the initial confrontation and knew nothing about the drug deal (as it was proven during court testimony), reportedly slapped Van Dyne.

El-Masry pleaded guilty in June to one count of simple assault but was released without a conviction and with no punishment by the court. Testimony by Van Dyne also revealed that El-Masry had been instrumental in stopping any further attack on Van Dyne.

On Aug. 28, El-Masry, a starting defensive end for Duke, appealed the university judicial board's suspension to both William Griffith, Duke Vice-President of Student Affairs, and University President Dr. Keith Broadie. Both school officials declined to reopen the case to the board, comprised of four students, two faculty members, and a college dean.

El-Masry was suspended from the team and from school for two semesters. He has one year of football eligibility left.

"I decided to decline a review of his appeal," said Broadie. "For me to entertain the matter there had to be demonstration of new information or evidence of procedural error."

El-Masry, a 1982 graduate of Waltham High said, "I'm still in disbelief over the whole thing. I made a mistake but I think there could have been an alternative punishment. I basically think I took the brunt of this whole thing and that's kind of unfortunate because I had the least to do with it."

El-Masry's friend and another student received small fines while Van Dyne and his partner were ordered to play $2,500 in fines. No one involved received jail sentences.

Broadie described El-Masry to a reporter from the school's Duke Chronicle as "an extremely nice young man. You can't help but feel that he got swept up in something he didn't know much about."

At Waltham High, El-Masry was a four-year letterman in football, and a member of the track team in his senior year.

As a senior halfback, El-Masry sparked the Hawks to an 8-1 record, leading the team in both rushing and points scored. The senior captain rushed for a phenomenal 1,141 total yards and scored 17 touchdowns. He was an All-State selection that year and was named to both the Shriners All-Star roster and the Agganis All-Star roster.

As a junior, El-Masry was second on the team in rushing behind his older brother Steve, who would later star at Dartmouth College before transferring to Tufts University.

Muccini directing North field hockey

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If the new coach's credentials have anything to do with it, Newton North is in for a great field hockey season.

Rookie mentor Andrea Muccini, a Weston native, comes to North with an impressive resume. A June graduate of the University of Massachusetts, she spent four years there playing field hockey, capping her career by being named an All-American as a senior.

She didn't stop playing when the college season ended. Her exploits at UMass garnered her an invitional to a national developmental camp, the first step along the road to the National Sports Festival. Many fell along the wayside, but she made the entire journey, playing for the silver-medal North squad at the Festival in New Orleans.

"I really learned a lot this summer," said Muccini of the experience.

Now a Newton resident, Muccini played for Weston coach Marie Butera for four years. In Muccini's senior year, the Wildcats won the state championship.

Muccini, who hopes to eventually get into physical therapy as a career, believes in building the attack first, though her normal position is left back.

Fortunately, she has a real head start in that area. The Tigers are a senior-laden team, and the coach said the attack "is very strong. They work well together."

Not all of the seniors are varsity veterans, but Muccini indicated that those up from the junior varsity have been performing extremely well.

Much of the strength in the attack will be located on the right side. The trio of seniors on that side should account for the bulk of the Newton scoring, at least early in the season.

Tara Feeney (right link), Jen Lowney (right wing) and Marcie Plotkin (right inner) all boast a lot of offensive potential.

"Our right side is really strong," the coach said.

The attack could get even better later in the season when Robin Silver returns. The captain is out until at least midseason with mononucleosis.

On the other side, Muccini admitted to being "in the experimenting stages." Senior Mindy Marchand and junior Liza Moore have been impressive, however.

Junior Becky Venduccio is another whom the coach says is "really coming along."

Andrea Carderelli, another wing, might be the only sophomore to make the varsity squad.

Though the attack is loaded, the situation is much different on defense.

"We're definitely up in the air at the other end," said Muccini.

One sure starter is Elisa Babigan, though the coach isn't sure just which position she'll fill. The senior will likely wind up wherever she's needed most.

Beth Lewinger, another senior, came out late, but is making a strong challenge for a starting job.

The sweeper position has boiled down to a two-girl duel between junior Amy Jessup and senior Kiera Lymperis. "They'll probably both get a lot of time," the coach said.

Others who figure in the fight on defense are seniors Sarah Phillips and Noel Borelli.

The net is another position up for grabs at the moment. Incumbent Felicia Moschella, who saw a lot of time last fall as a sophomore, is being challenged by transfer student Sue Colleton.

No matter who finally wins the open jobs, the Tigers will be primarily a senior team. That doesn't concern Muccini, who would rather have the younger girls playing regularly on the junior varsity instead of sitting on the bench with the big club.

"What I'm trying to do is let the kids who have potential stay on the junior varsity to give them a full year. This year, the kids who played JV last year have been doing great."

Behind the seniors, there aren't many juniors, but there was a large sophomore turnout this year.

As a new coach, Muccini couldn't say too much regarding the team's potential for success within the Dual County League, since she hasn't seen the competition for four years. Still, she's happy so far and anxious to get going.

"I had to idea what to expect but I am pleased with the progress they've made," she said.

The Tigers open the season on Tuesday at Lexington Christian Academy, and make their DCL debut on Thursday at Lincoln-Sudbury.

Tigers work to cut mistakes

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — As the football season draws nearer, the time comes when football coaches have to stop playing everybody and start making some hard decisions about who will contribute to the coming contests. After three scrimmages, Newton North coach Peter Capodilupo is narrowing down the choices in many areas as he tries to get ready for the invasion of Natick on Sept. 21.

One thing's for sure, the coach knew how to get ready for Natick, unbeaten in the last three years, and Brockton, the defending Super Bowl champion.

How to prepare to two potential powerhouses? Simple, go out and get the best bet to dethrone either or both and sign them up for a scrimmage.

That candidate would be Walpole, which has designs wresting the Bay State League crown from Natick and going on to the Super Bowl.

The Tigers took on the Rebels last week, and though Capodilupo admitted that "it was obvious they were the superior team," he was quick to add that he was "pleased with how we did."

The Rebels only pushed across one more score than North did, partially due to the fact that the Tigers are "hitting better than we did last year," according to their coach. "I see a lot of improvement defensively."

North may have had a bit of a letdown after that, because Capodilupo was very disappointed with the first-half effort in Saturday's scrimmage against Medfield. (Newton also scrimmaged Milton earlier.)

"Medfield kicked the heck out of us in the first half," said the coach. "They're a big physical team."

The Tigers did show a big improvement after the intermission, to the relief of the coach.

During the entire preseason Capodilupo has made it clear that the defense is his first priority. Though he indicated that there are still too many mistakes on that side of the ball, he his happy with how the D is "coming along.

"If we continue to work and get rid of the mistakes defensively, we'll be all right."

The most pleasing group on defense has been the down linemen. Joe Fresolo and Brian Claflin have made Capodilupo comfortable with the tackle situation, while John Flynn and Rick Patriacca are waging quite a battle for the nose guard slot.

There have been some mistakes at defensive end, but the "good group" of four or five players who are challenging should come up with a couple of solid starters. Scott Lancilotti and Josh Field probably have the inside track.

The backfield isn't as experienced or deep, but the coach is encouraged with the progress that's been shown back there.

Dave Gates, Anthony Filipone and Milt Britton are all inexperienced, but "they're all tall and have speed." They're the frontrunners for starting posts in the defensive backfield, with Otto Mariano most likely joining them as monsterback.

"They're getting better every day," said the coach.

Capodilupo feels the offense is "on schedule," with the most pleasant surprise being the line.

"I've been real pleased with that," he said. Dan Vetraino and Dimitri Diatchenko are playing their way into the lineup at tackles, with Steve Bliss performing very well as the blocking end.

The guard situation is a little more unsettled, though Dave Redmond seems to be earning himself a spot.

John Talmo and Lancilotti are in a duel for the center post.

"We've been a little more aggressive off the line and getting into people," said the coach in comparing this group to last year's.

The coaching staff would like to limit most players to either defense or offense, but Capodilupo admits "there is a core of kids that it's going to be hard to keep off the field."

The development off the offensive line has helped the running game blossom, despite the absence of Chris Rutan with an ankle injury. He's just now starting to round into form, seeing quite a bit of action against Medfield.

In his absence, Mark Adams and John Flynn have been starting behind quarterback Mike Ryan, who has started to emerge as the number one candidate at that post.

Adams has broken several long runs, while Flynn is both blocking and running well, according to the coach.

Josh Carpenter and Mariano have looked sharp filling in.

The most impressive thing about Ryan is that "he gets better with every scrimmage," said Capodilupo. "If Mike continues to grow I think we'll have an offense that doesn't make many mistakes."

When Ryan throws the ball, usually on a sprintout or play-action, his favorite targets have been Dennis Rohanna and Ron Coppola, a senior out for football for the first time.

"We'll be okay if the offensive line comes through," said the coach.

The kicking has been solid, but is still unsettled. Diatchenko and Rutan are fighting for the punting job, while Redmond and Evan Galanis have been handling the placekicking.

Still, Capodilupo stressed "we'll live and die with defense. We're getting better slowly."

One thing the Tigers need in a hurry is for the sophomores to get ready to make the jump to the varsity. They'll be in the game both as starters and backups, and

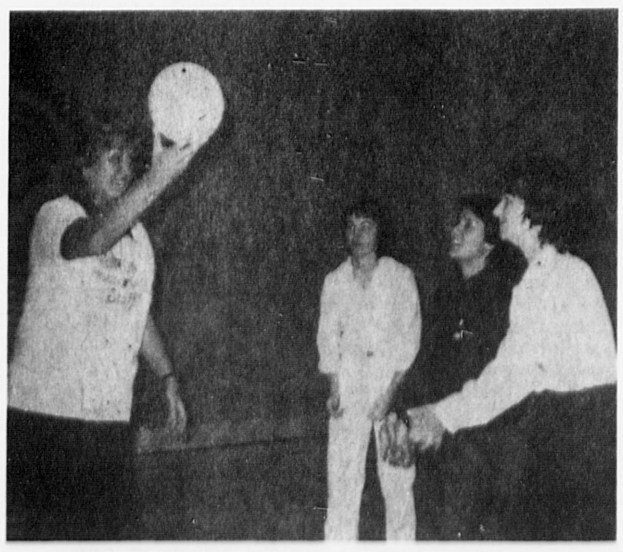

Coach Peter Capidolupo

Capodilupo knows they "have to mature very quickly for us to be effective early in season."

The Tigers will participate in the Middlesex League Jamboree on Friday night, taking on Woburn. They should hit the turf at Watertown's Victory Field at approximately 7:15, for what will be roughly a long quarter of play. Tickets, $2 in advance and $3 at the gate, are available at the Newton North Athletic Office or from any player.

North will wrap up the preseason with a game scrimmage on Saturday against Framingham North.

Volleyball clinic underway

Judith Slamin, state official and past chairman of the Boston Board of Officials, invites all area residents 18 years and over to attend an instruction clinic for new perspectives.

People interested in becoming a volleyball official should call 527-4842 now to reserve class space.

This is a three-week clinic which began Tuesday at Day Junior High School in Newtonville. The group will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7 to 9 p.m.

Recent rulings will be discussed and time alloted to practice the latest skills.

7 starters return for Brandeis soccer

WALTHAM — Optimism is the key word for the Brandeis University men's soccer team. Optimism stemming from the fact that veteran coach Mike Coven's Judges return seven starters and 17 lettermen from last season's NCAA Division III national finalist.

However, Coven would like to add the word cautious before any talks of the upcoming season begin. "After last season, a lot is expected from our kids this year," said Coven. "We won a lot of close games last year, especially throughout the playoffs. We had a lot of luck and hopefully that luck will stay with us this season."

The luck may stay with them, but four talented seniors have graduated, including goalkeeper Jim Leahy. Leahy was named the 1984 Adidas Goalkeeper of the Year, an award given annually to the top keeper in the country, regardless of division. Thorughout his career, Leahy recorded a school record 40 shutouts, including a scholl mark of 14 as a senior. Also lost to graduation were mifielders Glenn Conlon and Dan Grondin , two of the tri-captains, and back Todd Simon.

Forward Jeffrey Steinberg was rwriting the offensive record books while Leahy was rewording the goalie columns. Steinberg's 23 goals and 55 toal points set new school marks and he also tied the Brandeis record for consecutive games scored in with seven. The talented junior is expected to spearhead the Judges offensive attack this season.

Also returning up front is junior forward Dov Bulka, who was the team's second leading scorer in 1984 with 11 goals and five assists. Another junior, Peter Cherchwich, who had three goals and six assists last season also returns to Brandeis' frontline.

Third team All-American Jim McCully heads a host of returners at midfield. McCully, a tri-captain, was named the defensive MVP of the 1984 national championship game and was a first team All New England selection.

Tri-Capt. Greg Allen, who may also see time at forward, chipped in with four goals and eigfht assists last year. Three-year starter Mike Violette, who led the team in assists with nine, and sophomore Peter Moroh bring added experience to the middle.

Heading the backline will be tri-captain Peyton Gibson, the team's defensive MVP last season. Junior defender Steve Stone, the team's Unsung Hero a year ago, is back for his third year as a starter. Junior back Dave Mishol is also back after a solid second season.

The major question mark, to nobody's surprise, is who will man the goalkeeper position? Junior Dave Cedar, who has been Leahy's back-up the past two years, is back. However, he saw action for only 51 minutes as a sophomore. Ted Porterfield, an All-State keeper from Redding, Conn. wil vie for playing time at the beginning of the season. Sophomore David Salomons is also in the hunt for the starting slot.

Two freshmen may add additional scoring punch for the Judges in their initial seasons. Dennis DiLeo scored 32 goals for Medford High School, while Andrew Helm fired in 46 goals and is a native of North River, N.Y.

Brandeis will play a 19-game schedule which featurews matchups with Harvard University, ranked number 10 in the nation in Division I, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Union College, arch-rival Babson College and will host Amherst College on Homecoming Weekend, Saturday, Oct. 12.

Newton native named to Providence coaching posts

Jackie Gladu to hold down 3 jobs

PROVIDENCE — The higher up the ladder an athlete goes, the more specialized he or she tends to get. Three-sport stars in high school are relatively common. In college, to play two sports is a somewhat rare achievement.

While at Providence College, Jackie Gladu played, and starred, in no less than three sports. Beginning this fall, the 1984 graduate takes that still another step further as she becomes an assistant coach in all three at her alma mater.

The native of West Newton will have assistant's duties in the three sports in which she excelled as an undergraduate, namely field hockey, ice hockey and softball.

"It's kind of like going home," said the soon-to-be ex-resident of 34 Cherry St. "Providence treated me very well when I was there. I know the system and coaches in all three sports."

Those coaches include Kate Denning (field hockey), John Marchetti (ice hockey) and Marianne Palazzi (softball).

Gladu, who graduated in 1984 with a degree in Business Management, doesn't foresee a problem with trying to coach three different sports at the same school.

"Hopefully it won't be (a problem). I'm familiar with the Providence system and how everything is run. It won't be a hard transition."

The appointment should work out well for all parties concerned. Providence made the initial contact, knowing that by hiring Gladu one person could fill all three jobs.

"I got a nice deal," said Gladu of the full-time position. "It's a nine-month position...They needed the assistants and I was capable of filling all three."

"Lou Lamoriello, our athletic director, and I are are pleased that Jackie has decided to rejoin us at Providence in this capacity," stated the school's associate athletic director, Helen Bert, who continued, "Jackie demonstrated outstanding character traits as an undergraduate, and we're confident that they will carry over in her career as a coach."

Though the new job doesn't precisely fit the Business Management profile, Gladu is excited about the chance.

"This is always something I wanted to try. I'd like to make a career (in sports), maybe get into athletic administration...This is a good opportunity to get some experience."

In addition, her "teacher's" schedule will allow her free time during the summer to continue some of the extra-curricular work she enjoys, such as working at camps. This summer for instance, Gladu spent quite a bit of time as an instructor at a field hockey camp in Vermont.

She began receiving notice for her athletic ability at a tender age. Ironically, it was for the one sport she never played at Newton North High School.

Gladu began playing ice hockey for the Waltham Wings "when I was nine, when they were the Angels. Two others and myself were the youngest on the team."

She stuck with that program for 10 years (until the Lady Friars claimed her skating ability for their own), becoming one of the best players ever to play for the Wings, according to Coach Ed Gaudet. For her last three seasons the right winger was the top scorer on the squad.

Gaudet credited Gladu's success to her "sheer interest in the sport and dedication to the sport. She never missed a practice, never missed a game, and when she came to practice she worked at it...She gave 120 percent at every practice and every game."

The coach added that Gladu was "very smart and cool in the corners. She knew what to do with the puck when she got it...She was a deadly scorer."

As an example, Gaudet cited one season when the Wings played 47 games. Gladu finished with exactly 47 goals and 47 assists.

Along with center Carol Latorre and left winger Kathy Cox, Gladu formed "the best-organized line in women's hockey at the time," according to the coach.

Gladu was considering a return to the team this winter, but this new development will preclude that.

"It's a great loss to the Wings," summed up Gaudet. "Any coach would like to have her on the right wing.

Her old coach had no doubts that she'd be a success in her latest endeavor, however.

"Jackie always gave 110 percent. If I know her, her players had better give 110 percent or she'll let them know about it."

At North, the 1980 graduate played field hockey and softball for three seasons. Played is an understatement, because Gladu not only earned varsity letters for all three of her years at North, she was an All-Star every year in both sports.

One of the finest all-around athletes ever to enroll at Providence College, Jackie had four outstanding seasons for the Lady Friars. In ice hockey, she compiled a career total of 200 points, the third highest in the history of the school. She also set new records during her senior season for most goals in a season (40) and most goals in a career (113).

In addition, Gladu holds the school mark for most points in a season (69), a milestone that she reached during the 1981-82 campaign. Jackie scored the game winning goal at the 12-second mark of sudden death overtime to give the Lady Friars' ice hockey squad its first of two ECAC Championship titles in 1984.

In softball, Gladu holds the record for best freshman batting mark with a .287 average in 1981. She missed her entire junior year due to an injury but returned as a senior to wind up as the squad's second leading hitter with a .279 average.

In field hockey, she was the squad's leading scorer both as a junior and senior. In addition, during her junior campaign, she was one of 80 collegiate field hockey players to be invited to the Olympic Training Center.

Last January, Gladu was named the 1984 Rhode Island male Athlete of the Year. She was picked by Words Unlimited, the association of sports media members.

Another prestigious accolade she received is her distinction as being Providence College's "Female Athlete of the Year" on two different occasions. The 1984 PC graduate received the award as a freshman and shared it with classmate Susan Passander as a senior.

All told, she earned an amazing 12 varsity letters at the school.

When not teaching or playing one of her three specialties, Gladu dabbles in running and golfing. It's just that dabbling to her would be a full-time job to most other people.

She says she's been doing a lot of running recently, for instance, mentioning that she ran the Boston Marathon last spring. Granted, that was as an unofficial entry, but next spring she hopes to have a number on her back.

And as a golfer, Gladu manages to shoot consistently in the low 90's, though admitting she's "never broken 90."

One of two children of Dick and Josette Gladu (the other, Ray, is headed for Bridgton Academy this fall), Jackie still has one minor problem to contend with among the rush to get going:

"I start Wednesday and I'm still looking for an apartment."

Jackie Gladu will coach in three sports

Newton North has many jobs open on boys' soccer team

The cornerstones are there, but it's going to take an awful lot of masonry before the Newton North boys' soccer team is considered a finished structure.

No less than 17 seniors graduated from last year's 13-5-1 club which lost to Xaverian in the tournament. Only four starters return.

That quartet is going to have to work overtime to keep the Tigers afloat while the rest of the team gets some intensive on-the-job training.

Three of the returnees are at midfield, but not all will stay there. The fourth, Peter Bourland, will be back at his striker post, where he led the club in scoring in 1984.

Bourland, an All-Star as a junior, topped the Tigers despite missing some time with injury problems last season. A troublesome ankle haunted him much of the fall, but he still managed to be the top North threat.

"I'm really looking for a super year from him," said Coach Roger Brown of the co-captain, who is already drawing some attention from college scouts.

The other co-captain, Ed O'Brien, is one of the veterans at halfback. Most of his preseason has been spent trying different positions as Brown attempts to rebuild his defense.

"We've tried him at stopper and sweeper," the coach said. "He's very aggressive and has excellent skills."

If O'Brien doesn't wind up on defense, Brian Scales will. One of the steadiest of the North midfielders last fall, the senior "has looked as good as anyone" in the preseason, according to Brown.

Early on, the coach thought he might move O'Brien back and leave Scales in the middle, but based on the play of both in the preseason, that may be reversed.

The only halfback who's certain to stay there is junior Steve Bourland, Peter's younger brother. His progress has been hampered by an ankle injury which has kept him out of the preseason.

The sub-par performances of some of the seniors have opened the door for a few of the younger players. In particular, Brown cited junior Jeff Swett, calling him "the surprise of the preseason. He'll play, but we don't know where. He looks like he can handle whatever we give him."

There's no doubt that Brown's first priority is getting the defense straightened out.

"The question marks involve our defensive ability," admitted the coach.

Stuart Jackson and Peter Schaeffer, two seniors who played junior varsity last year, are among those Brown is counting on. "There will be a position open for either one or both," the coach said. "They're starting to improve. They have the talent."

Jon Greenberg is another senior up from the jayvees who is moving around. Senior James Ellman, who played a little varsity last year, and junior Zafar Kahn are also challenging for jobs.

Brown hopes that he can flesh out his fullback line from that group, because he admits that if both O'Brien and Scales have to move back "it will hurt the midfield."

After the returnees, the midfield features a group that is fairly even in the job search. Seniors Eric Constantino and Sean Ferguson are being pressed by juniors John Fiske, Dan Feingold, Ken Kazarosian (who had a goal in Tuesday's scrimmage with Newton South) and Brian Cronin.

Up front, Peter Bourland may be surrounded by youngsters when all is said and done. Junior Bruce Kraysler is pushing for a job, but sophomores Steve Plotkin, Adam Kinsley and Jeff Dias have all looked very sharp in preseason.

The Tigers will also be helped by the return of Phil Vasiliadis, who has been away for the entire preseason. The junior, who scored four goals last fall, will play either forward or midfield.

Goaltending is another area where North lacks experience, but Brown said he has "been pleased with our keeper play so far."

The Tigers had two experienced netminders for the last couple of years in Dave Vento and Gary Scott. Replacing them won't be an easy job, but there is no lack of candidates willing to try.

Leading the group are seniors Bill Mark and Adam Aronson. They played junior varsity last season and have looked very good this year.

"We might end up rotating the seniors," indicated Brown.

Should one or both falter, junior Greg White and Scott Devore are camped on the doorstep ready to come in.

South girl booters set high goals

Coming off a .500 season is nothing new for the Newton South girls' soccer team. In fact, the Lions have hovered around that mark for three years in a row.

There is one rather large difference this time, however. The same group which accounted for last year's 7-7-1 record is back, almost intact.

"We've been a game below or a game above (.500), but we've never had a team that young," said Coach Chuck Hurwitz of his 1984 squad.

The Lions only graduated four players, and started no fewer than six freshmen and sophomores.

Since the graduates weren't concentrated in one area, South's returning strength is spread throughout the club. The goalie is back, there's an experienced fullback group, and all the forwards are varsity veterans. Some of the halfbacks are new to the position, but not to varsity play.

The Lions built their record last year with a sophomore in the net, so Hurwitz has little worry about this year's goaltending duties. Dede Theodore should be even better as a junior. As a soph, she posted three shutouts, including a 0-0 tie with Lincoln-Sudbury that gave Concord-Carlisle a share of the Dual County League championship.

Should Theodore falter, Hurwitz has a lot of confidence in sophomore Monique Brinson, who has good athletic ability.

The fullbacks feature four varsity veterans, led by DCL All-Star Katrina Antonellis.

Now in her fourth year as a starter, Antonellis is as good as anyone in the league at her stopper position. She brings more to the team than just her defensive skills. The tri-captain led the club in scoring last year, an amazing feat for a fullback.

Antonellis was also the first junior captain Hurwitz has ever had, showing the kind of respect her coach and teammates have for her.

Another tri-captain holds down the sweeper position. Sheila Coleman, a wing fullback last year, moves inside this season to replace the graduated Erica Cushna. Thus far, Coleman appears to be making the transition very well, showing a great deal of aggressiveness.

The wings feature a three-girl rotation. Liesl Jones, Jenny Ketterer and Lucy Ketterer will share time equally in the two spots.

Jones, the only senior in the trio, came on very strong as a starter toward the end of last season. Junior Jenny Ketterer, another veteran, has "great anticipation," according to Hurwitz. Younger sister Lucy, only a sophomore, was the top fullback on the junior varsity, and Hurwitz said, "she has already shown she can do a good job." As a bonus, Lucy has a tremendous throw-in.

There is also a good group of backups who aren't that far behind the starters.

Junior Sarah Fenstemacher has improved her speed over the past year, and had an excellent lacrosse season in the spring. She'll be on the wing. Sophomores Julie Blankstein and Jennifer Roser will also see time. Blankstein is good at taking the ball away from her opponents and then distributing it to her forwards. Roser has great speed, and is still developing in the skill department.

The Lions lost All-Star Colleen Walsh at center half, but they still have three veterans across the middle. Julie Goldenberg was a starter by the time last season ended, and Hurwitz is counting on her to step in an fill the vacancy left by Walsh.

The sophomore has good skills, is fast, and perhaps most importantly, is "a very smart player," according to the coach.

Dockser is dangerous in the open field, and in the preseason she has shown she can play some defense as well. Hurwitz said she's "aggressive" and "will challenge anybody."

Crosby's strongest point is her endurance. Give her an opponent to mark, and by the end of the game, you'll have one tired foe.

"She'll wear anybody down," said the coach.

Pressing that trio for playing time are sophomore Jill Goldberg and junior Cheryl Strauss. Goldberg was outstanding for the freshmen last fall, while Strauss played junior varsity.

The front line is yet another veteran group, consisting of two seniors and a junior.

The only junior of the trio, Cathy McBride, returns at striker. She had four goals and three assists as a sophomore, but Hurwitz reported that she "has increased her speed and endurance phenomenally in one year."

McBride will be flanked by two seniors. On the right is tri-captain Julie Schwartz. She has played every position but keeper in the course of her career at South, but Hurwitz feels she's best suited to the wing.

In fact, the coach said that all his players "are the closest to their natural positions as I've been in three years."

Linda Rottenberg holds down the other side. A converted halfback, her strongest point is getting the ball inside for McBride.

Junior Liz Shields will serve as the number one reliever for McBride. Her skills are very good, and Hurwitz called her "deceptively quick."

A sophomore and freshman serve as the backups on the wing. Tenth-grader Neda Armian has great speed, as does frosh Mara Raider. The only ninth-grader to make the cut, Raider is very aggressive for a freshman. Though small, "she'll run into any pack," said Hurwitz.

This could be the deepest squad the Lions have had in some time.

"There's not anybody of the 21 that I wouldn't be willing to play," said the coach.

Despite everything the Lions have going for them, it's difficult to predict great things for the club, for the simply reason that the DCL is one of the best girls' soccer leagues in the state. That's not to say South can't win, it's just that the Lions are only one of several teams capable of it.

Concord-Carlisle has been the traditional power, with Lincoln-Sudbury not far behind. They tied for the top last fall. The Patriots have almost everyone back, but L-S lost stars Chris Gates and Dale Arpino, and could fall back a notch.

Weston, another tournament team, graduated only a couple of starters, and Wayland returns sharpshooter Shari Krasnoo, who scored a hat trick against South last year.

The Lions will be tested immediately when they open their season at Lincoln-Sudbury on Sept. 13.

Prior to that, however, South will host a Jamboree on Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m. The competition will feature teams from Newton North, Andover and Belmont.

Newton Tigers end registration this week

NEWTON — Final registration and tryouts for the Newton Pop Warner Tigers is continuing this week at Albemarle Field. The sessions are being held every night through Friday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

The teams will be picked on Saturday, when the official league weigh-in will be held. The season opener is slated for Sunday at Watertown's Victory Field.

There are still openings for boys on the four teams in the program. Boys aged 8-13 are eligible, and will be placed on the Midget, Junior Midget, Pee Wee or Junior Pee Wee teams.

All candidates must bring their birth certificate to the registration.

Cheerleaders may also register at the same time.

For further information, call Fred Delicandro at 332-6286.

Newton Midget A's set to open Saturday

NEWTON — The Newton Youth Hockey season will open with a bang on Saturday as the Newton Midget A's open the defense of their state championship at the Watertown Skating Arena.

The opponent for the initial clash, scheduled for an 8 p.m. start, will be Winchester.

Neil Ronchinsky and Greg Taylor will once again be in the nets for Newton.

WESTWOOD

REAL ESTATE INDEX
MARKET VALUE AS A PERCENTAGE OF ASSESSED VALUE

The Real Estate Index can be used to estimate the current Market Value of your home. Multiply your Property Assessment by the Index Factor. (Westwood - September 1985 Index: 165% ± 15%)

Example	Assessment	X	Index	=	Market Value
	$110,000	X	165%	=	$181,500 ± $16,500

The range of values (± 15%) reflects differences in location, condition of property and other qualitative factors. Evaluate your home accordingly.

The Real Estate Index is calculated by charting actual real estate transactions, over time, and by analyzing current properties for sale. (See chart)

Thursday, Sept. 12, 9:00 a.m.-11:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m.
858 Washington Street, Dedham

Walk right in. Take a look around. Talk to BayBank Norfolk representatives about the kind of position you have in mind.

At BayBank Norfolk and our subsidiary BayBanks Credit, we have the kind of opportunities that will appeal to you... whether you're looking for a career opportunity or the opportunity to work part time mornings, evenings, or afternoons.

If you're a student, a mother, or any other individual with basic office skills, we'll train you to be a Proof Encoder, Customer Service Representative, General Clerk, or Loan Collector. You can work full or part-time. Hours are flexible, too. Work us into your schedule.

If you're a professional with two years' Consumer Lending experience, stop by and talk with us about exciting career opportunities.

Tremendous growth at BayBanks Mortgage has also created excellent career opportunities within this aggressive, innovative mortgage lending subsidiary. Openings exist for individuals with 1-2 years' office experience to be Mortgage Loan Processors and Mortgage Loan Closers. Professionals with 1-2 years' mortgage underwriting experience can join BayBanks Mortgage as Underwriters.

Drop by our Open House. Share refreshments. Get all the details. See why BayBank Norfolk is the best place for your skills.

In addition to our convenient suburban locations, we offer on-the-job training, paid holidays and vacation, tuition reimbursement, health and life insurance, profit sharing, free employee checking and much, much more.

Walk right in to our Open House Wednesday or Thursday. And step up to a rewarding position with a leader in the banking industry.

If you are unable to attend our Open House contact Kathryn Gould at 329-7618, or stop by and fill out an application. An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F/V/H

Emily R. (Ranshaw) Barber

Headed Bureau of University Travel

NEWTON — Funeral services will be private for Emily R. (Ranshaw) Barber, 90, of Waban, former president of the Bureau of University Travel in Newton, during the 1950s.

Mrs. Barber died Friday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, after a brief illness.

Born in Cincinnati, she was a graduate of Oberlin College in Ohio. She had lived in Waban for 55 years and had been an administrator of the School for International Relations at Radcliffe College for several years.

She was a past president of the Waban Women's Club, the Newton League of Women Voters and served on the state board of the League of Women Voters.

She leaves a daughter, Emily Barber Schetky of Concord and four grandsons.

Edith (Fisher) Eustis, 93

Chaired hospital finance committee

NEWTON — A funeral service was held at the Newton Cemetery Chapel, Walnut Street, at 2 p.m., Thursday, for Edith (Fisher) Eustis, 93, of Newton, a past chairman of the finance committee of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital Aid Association and a trustee emeritus of the hospital.

Mrs. Eustis died Sunday at her home.

Born and raised in Newton, she was a graduate of Smith College.

During World War I, Mrs. Eustis was secretary to the Newton Red Cross and was active in the Newton Social Science Club and the Night Club of Newton.

She also was a former member of the Florence Crittenton League in Newton and of the Newton Auxiliary of the former Frances E. Willard Homes.

Her husband, Warner Eustis, an executive with the Kendall Company, Walpole, died several years ago.

Joyce Chamberlain, 63

Retired loan officer at Harvard

NEWTON — A funeral service was held Monday morning at the Stanton Funeral Home, Watertown, for Joyce Chamberlain, 63, of Newton, a retired loan officer with the Harvard University Credit Union for 29 years.

Born in East Ryegate, Vt., she graduated from the Lyndon State College in Vermont and worked as a schoolteacher there until moving to Boston in 1949.

She was a member of the Newton Presbyterian Church.

Miss Chamberlain leaves three sisters, Edith Crawford of Waltham, Grace Keenan of East Ryegate, Vt., June Chamberlain of Cambridge; four nephews and two nieces.

Giuseppe D'Angelis, 76

WATERTOWN — A memorial mass will be held Friday, Sept. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Mary's Church, 145 School St., Waltham, for Giuseppe D'Angelis, 76, of Atina, Italy, formerly of Watertown.

Mr. D' Angelis died in Atina, Italy, last Thursday.

Born in Italy, Mr. D'Angelis came to the U.S. 20 years ago and settled in Watertown, where he was employed by the Charles Construction Co. in Watertown until his retirement 10 years ago. After his retirement he returned to Italy.

The husband of the late Angelina (Franchi) D'Angelis and the brother of the late Angelina Marini, he leaves his wife Teresa (Mancini) D'Angelis; his children, Pasqualina Orangio and Alfredo, both of Watertown, Guido of Belgium, Maria Garrity of Holliston; a sister, Giulia DiStefano and a brother, Massimino D'Angelis, both of Watertown; 11 grandchildren.

Celia Jordan, 94

Retired Latin, English teacher

NEWTON — A memorial service will be held Saturday, Sept. 14 at 2 p.m. in the Second Congregational Church, West Newton, for Celia (Marshall) Jordan, 94, of Newton, a retired Latin and English teacher in Newton schools.

Born and raised in Everett, she graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Boston University and was president of the Boston University Women's Council. She also was a member of Gamma Phi Beta.

A resident of Newton for 50 years, she also had been a deaconess in the Second Congregational Church in West Newton and had taught at the Oak Grove School in Vassalboro, Me.

She leaves two daughters, Eleanor Mason of Morris Plains, N. J., Jean Sheild of Madison, Wisconsin; a brother, William B. Marshall of Needham; seven grandchildren, two great grandchildren.

Mildred S. Conroy, 62

Co-owner of Newton funeral home

NEWTON — A funeral mass was celebrated Monday morning by Rev. Richard J. Powers, pastor of St. Luke Parish, Belmont, for Mildred S. Conroy, 62, of Newton, in Our Lady Help of Christians Church, Newton. Burial was in Newton Cemetery.

Mrs. Conroy died Friday at her home after a long illness.

She and her husband Martin E. Conroy owned and operated the Conroy Funeral Home, 439 Washington St., Newton.

Born in Lincoln, Mrs. Conroy graduated from Rosary Academy and attended the Vesper George School of Art in Boston.

She was a graduate of the New England Institute of Embalming and was a licensed funeral director for over 30 years.

Mrs. Conroy was a past president of the Guild of St. Irene at St. Sebastian's Country Day School, Newton, and was the first woman on the board of trustees at St. Sebastian's.

She was a member of the Mother's Guild of the Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart, Our Lady's Catholic Daughters Court No. 1500 and the Infant Savior Guild of Boston.

She also was a charter member of the West Dennis Yacht Club, a member of the South Yarmouth Tennis Club and the Natick Racket Club.

For more than 20 years, she owned and operated Uncle Stephen's Cape Cod Village, a guest house and cottages in West Dennis.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Conroy leaves three sons, Martin E. Jr., J. Eric and Mark S., all of Newton; a daughter, Mary Anne Petersen of Sioux Falls, S. D.; a brother, James E. Sherman of Framingham; a sister, Mary Lou Alla of Sandwich; two grandchildren.

Mortimer L. Goldman, 68

Was president of Welbilt Construction

NEWTON CENTRE — A funeral service for Mortimer Laskar Goldman, 68, of Newton Centre, was held Friday morning at the Levine Chapel, 470 Harvard St., Brookline.

Born in New York City, Mr. Goldman was raised in Atlanta, Ga., where he graduated from Boys High School. He also was graduate of the Georgia Institute of Technology, where he majored in civil engineering and graduated with highest honors.

Mr. Goldman participated in track and cross country teams while he was in high school and college. In college he was a member of numerous honor societies, wrote for the year book and was sports editor for the college paper.

Mr. Goldman had remained very active in running and had recently participated in many local road races until the time of his death. He was a winnner in the Charles River Run and in the Waltham Midnight Moonlight Marathon. He had previously won the over 60 category of the Needham Track Club's 10k race. In addition, he held a private pilot's license and enjoyed flying.

According to his son, David, his father believed in working hard and had given his sons a great deal of support in whatever they did including sporting programs.

David said that he was proud that his father had seen him win The Mr. Massachusetts Body Building Title in 1985 and had hoped that his father would see him competing for the Mr. America Title.

During World War II, Mr. Goldman served in the Southwest Pacific as commanding officer of an engineering construction unit in the Army Corps of Engineers and had prior experience as battery commander of an antiaircraft artillery battery. Mr. Goldman was honorably discharged as a captain in 1946.

He joined his family in Massachusetts at the end of World War II and, from 1952 to 1968, Mr. Goldman was president of Welbilt Construction Co. of Newton, where he was responsible for the completion of many federal government projects througout the New England area and was licensed by the federal government as a nuclear fall out shelter analyst.

From 1968 to 1969, he was employed with Canter Construction Company in Brighton, during which time he built an architectural library and three high-rise dormitories at Boston University.

From 1969 to 1970, he was with Stanmar Construction Co., Sudbury, where he directed construction operations for vacation resorts.

From 1970 to 1976, Mr. Goldman was employed with Franchi Construction, Newton, and managed major construction projects such as high-rise office buildings and residential developments.

From 1976 until 1983, he was with State Properties of New England in Newton and was currently with Engineering Management Consultants of Newton, where he was involved with shopping malls and motels. He had done work for the Arsenal Mall in Watertown.

The husband of the late Leona (Pinansky), he leaves his children, Robert and David Goldman, both of Newton Centre and Stuart A. and Brenda Barney Lavine of Coventry, Ct.; his sister, Etta Louise Goldman of New York City.

ON THE ENVIRONMENT
NOTICE OF INTENT TO REQUEST
RELEASE OF FUNDS

6 September 1985
City of Newton
Community Development Program
City Hall
1000 Commonwealth Avenue
Newton, MA 02159
(617) 552-7135

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

On or about 23 September 1985, the above-named City will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) as amended, for the following project:

Project Title or Name: Housing Development - 89 Grove Street, Newton, MA

Purpose or Nature of Project:

The City of Newton and the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Committee to Establish residences for the Retarded (NWW) are proposing to rehabilitate a two family dwelling, last used as office space, into six (6) units of low-income housing for the mentally handicapped. NWW will be leasing the property from the United Parish of Auburndale for a minimum of ten years. Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds will be used to fund the rehabilitation costs for this project. The total cost and CDBG contribution of this project is $72,000.

An environmental Review Record respecting the above project has been made by the above-named City which documents the environmental review of each project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmentl Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, at the Office of Community Development, between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City to the above address. Such written comments should be received at the address specified on or before 23 September 1985. All such comments so received will be considered and the City will not request the release of federal funds or take any administrative action on the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

The City of Newton will undertake the projects, described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The City of Newton is certifying to HUD that Theodore D. Mann, Mayor, in his official capacity as Mayor, consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the City of Newton may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and other provisions of law.

HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is one of the following bases:

(a) The Certification was not in fact executed by the recipient's Certifying Officer.

(b) The recipient has failed to make one of the two findings pursuant to s58.41 or to make the written determination decision required by s58.47, 58.53 or 58.64 for the project, as applicable.

(c) The recipient has omitted one or more of the steps set forth at Subparts F and G for the preparation and completion of an EA.

(d) The recipient has omitted one or more of the steps set forth at Subparts H and I for the conduct, preparation and completion of an EIS.

(e) No opportunity was given to the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation or its Executive Director to review the effect of the project on a property listed on the National Register of Historic Places, or found to be eligible for such listing by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with 26 CFR Part 800.

(f) With respect to a project for which a recipient has decided that s58.47, 58.53 , or 58.64 apply, the recipient has failed to include in the ERR the written decision required, or its decision is not supported by facts specified by the objecting party.

(g) Another federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality.

The only bases upon which HUD or the State will disapprove the RROF and certification are set forth above.

Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58) and may be addressed to HUD at 15 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA. 02114.

No objection received after 9 October 1985 will be considered by HUD.

TV star Robert Urich has been showing up in the Garden City recently, shooting scenes for new series, "Spenser For Hire."

Spenser's in town

By Kevin C. Kennedy, News Editor

NEWTON — There are two guys named Spenser making their marks on the Garden City these days.

One is a well-buffed, muscular Hollywood type who takes nearly a half an hour to get into his car. The other is a burly, often brutal behemoth who will quote Shakespeare to you through black-and-blue lips before he rips your arm off and beats you to a pulp with the bloody stump.

The former is a guy named Robert Urich, who wowed boob tube buffs during a couple of seasons as the star of "Vegas." He, a crew of dozens of technicians and a caravan of limos and trucks loaded with equipment have been showing up all over the greater Boston area for the past couple of months, harbingers of a new T.V. series. "Spenser For Hire" is slated to go up against the very popular "Miami Vice" this Friday night.

Urich and his entourage invaded the grounds of the Beaver Country Day School, in Chestnut Hill, recently. The trucks pulled in and disgorged tons and tons of sophisticated equipment. Dozens of guys in parachute pants and headsets chain-smoked cigarettes and ordered people around.

Extras, including local college students hired on to play schoolchildren stood around in small clusters waiting to be told when to go to lunch. One group of professional actresses, dressed as "schoolgirls" in plaid-skirted school "uniforms" stood to the side, away from the action, aloof. In the noonday sun, alongside real kids from the school, they looked more like rejects from the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders than schoolgirls; but such are the wonders of television.

In one scene, it took Urich and company more than a half-hour to film him running to a Caddy stretch limo, jumping in, starting the car, and burning rubber in "hot pursuit," only to screech to a halt 20 feet away.

"Remember, you're really tearassing, now," the director reminded Urich just before they began the final run-through. "Cut! Save it!" were his only comments afterward.

Rumors are wrong

No probe of chief

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Widespread rumors about impending federal indictments against Police Chief William F. Quinn and his imminent resignation are just that, rumors with no factual basis, according to Mayor Theodore D. Mann, the attorney conducting an audit of the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC) and a federal source.

The officials indicate that Quinn, chairman of the GBPC for the last 10 years, is being dragged though the local rumor mill because of an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) probe into the personal financial dealings of Timothy C. Coogan, who served a dual role as Quinn's administrative assistant and the GBPC's legal counsel.

"To my knowledge, Billy Quinn is not being investigated. He has done nothing indictable," according to Mann, who said he "would be the first to know" if the IRS investigation had implicated Quinn in any wrongdoing.

> 'To my knowledge, Billy Quinn is not being investigated.'
> Mayor Mann

Thomas Dwyer, the Boston attorney asked a week ago to conduct an internal audit of the GBPC's practices, last week called the rumors "ridiculous."

"Based upon my own conversations with the IRS, there is no allegation of any wrongdoing by William Quinn. In fact, based upon those conversations, there is no allegation of any wrongdoing by anyone in connection with the GPBC," Dwyer said.

"It is not a probe of the council by the federal government," he added.

A highly-placed federal source also said he did not know of "any impending indictments" against either Quinn or Coogan.

The comments confirm earlier reports placing the focus of the IRS probe on the possibility that Coogan may have failed to report $500,000 in personal income.

In June and August, it was reported that the IRS investigation into Coogan's finances included a request for all the GBPC's financial records for the period from 1980 to 1984.

Cops' morale 'falling apart'

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton Police Association (NPA) President Lynda Glenn said last week she thinks the rumors about Police Chief William F. Quinn are being started by police officers and are hurting the department's already dismal morale problem.

For the past week, stories claiming Quinn was about to be indicted on federal charges or would be resigning from his post have spread like wildfire throughout headquarters, city hall and certain segments of the community.

"I personally think the rumors are being put out by a number of individuals at the station" who are bitter about some of Quinn's policies, Glenn said.

Murder rocks the Highlands

By John Ombelets, Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Residents of a quiet cul-de-sac in the Highlands are still reeling from a brutal murder that rocked their neighborhood last Friday.

A 22-year-old Salem man was arraigned in Newton District Court Monday and charged with the brutal stabbing death of his girlfriend's 78-year-old mother in her Newton Highlands home. Tyrone Mark O'Neil, also known as Mark Lupo, was charged with first-degree murder in connection with the death of Emily (Littlefield) Aldrich, of 25 Oak Terrace. The elderly woman was stabbed at least five times in the chest and neck and received a slash wound on the hand, police said.

The victim's daughter, 37-year-old Susan Aldrich, has been charged with being an accessory to murder after the fact. Bail for Miss Aldrich was set at $500,000 and O'Neil was held without bail.

An autopsy performed in WalthamWeston Hospital verified that the death was caused by a stab wound.

The daughter, who works at night, discovered her mother's body lying on the bed in her second floor bedroom at about 10:30 Friday morning, police said. She called her mother's physician, Dr. Charles Thompson, who summoned police.

O'Neil, a caretaker at the Newton Cemetery on Walnut Street, was called to the house by Miss Aldrich after the police arrived. Investigators questioned the couple inside the home for more than three hours, until about 2:30 p.m., when O'Neil was taken

Suspect identified with other assault

By David Weber, Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — The man accused of stabbing a 78-year-old Newton Highlands woman to death has been identified as the assailant in the Labor Day slashing of a woman at Cold Spring Park, according to police.

A plea of not guilty was entered by the court for Tyrone Mark O'Neil, 22, at his arraignment Monday morning in Newton District Court on charges of first degree murder and breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a felony.

A plea of not guilty was also entered for 37-year-old Susan Aldrich, daughter of the slain woman, who was arraigned on a charge of accessory to murder after the fact.

O'Neil was being held without bail in the Middlesex County Jail in Cambridge. Aldrich was taken to MCI Framingham in lieu of $500,000 bond with a $50,000 cash alternative.

A Newton Police spokesperson Monday said the matter of O'Neil's alleged involvement in the Labor Day slashing would be brought to court at a later date.

O'Neil, dressed in blue jeans and Levis jacket, stood silently as he was arraigned, turning away from a television camera and several news photographers in the courtroom.

State of the City address

'Commitment to excellence' renewed

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — Innovative approaches to financial problems and a continuing "commitment to excellence" in all phases of social responsibility will ensure a bright future for the city, according to Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

Mann's annual "State of the City" address Tuesday evening struck a more optimistic chord than usual by de-emphasizing the "slow fiscal strangulation" of Proposition 2½ and concentrating on "a deliberate, well planned approach for the future."

"In the past, we have been able to find solutions when traditional approaches proved inadequate. The challenges which confront us in the future will be no less severe. I believe, however, that our commitment to excellence ... will ensure a future that will serve the needs of our entire community," the mayor told aldermen and about 100 spectators gathered at city hall.

Mann made it clear that he considers a new main library at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets an important part of what lies ahead for the city.

Calling the ambitious $12 million effort "the most substantial capital project before us," the mayor urged aldermen to act on his request for $280,000 to beginning designing the facility and to hire a project manager.

"Further delay and study will serve no useful purpose. The Board of Aldermen must take up the request for preliminary design as soon as possible. The time to act is now," he said.

Mann also plugged the Village Study as a "means of preserving the residential character" that will "protect all of the interests of our community." He said the study will eventually produce city-wide zoning recommendations "tailored to individual village needs."

He called the city's six-year Capital Improvement Program (CIP) "financially attainable, well-balanced and necessary for the quality of life of future generations.

"The $80 million investment represented in the CIP will enable us to respond to our most pressing infrastructure and envirnomental needs; the demands of our multi-million dollar complex of municipal facilities; and the necessary support requirements for our most essential educational and social services," according to Mann.

The mayor touched only briefly on the "attendant problems" looming on the city's horizon.

"While our citizens enjoy the financial benefits of increasing equity in their homes, they must be protected from the impact of the upcoming revaluation ... Pro-

Correction

A story in the Sept. 4 edition of The Newton Graphic about a dating service for atheists contained two errors.

Lauri Simmons of Newton, who runs the service, claims she did not characterize atheists as being uncomfortable with meeting people.

Also, it was erroneously reported that Simmons compiles files on clients based on phone conversations.

Inquiries are made by phone, but the service's confidential files are based on written questionnaires.

The Newton Graphic regrets the errors.

Spenser has roots in Garden City

While it remains to be seen how the American viewing public, the same public that made Joan Collins a "living legend" and Joe Willie Namath a professional sports commentator, will rate the T.V. version of Boston mystery writer Robert Parker's famous creation.

What the "real" Spenser would think of being whittled down to something that would fit into a 21-inch T.V. tube remains open to debate. The six foot, two inch, 200-plus pound, muscle-bound detective, who seems as comfortable bashing thugs as he does making sophisticated small talk at the Ritz Bar, is so unpredictable that his reaction has to remain a question mark.

The "real" Spenser lives in the imagination of his readers. It is testimony to Parker's skill that he has created a "real" person, as Arthur Conan Doyle and a handful of other writers have done with their characters.

Roots in Newton

The Orchard family, alleged to live somewhere up on West Newton hill, became minor celebrities in the Garden City a couple of years ago, when Spenser tore himself away from his somewhat sleazy downtown milieu to save their daughter from a long jail term in "The Godwulf Manuscript."

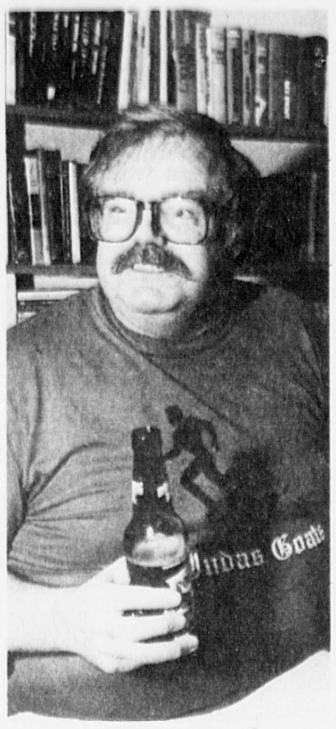

Other than that, though, the charismatic investigator has had little reason to circulate in the western suburbs. He might be surprised to hear that "The Judas Goats," a group of more than 300 Spenser devotees who have an especially hard time distinguishing the fine line between fact and fiction, are using Newton as a home base.

Robert Pollock, a mild-mannered project director with Capitol Engineering by day, spreads the word about Spenser from his Newton Corner home when he is not working. Pollock, a mystery fanatic since he first read "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" as a youth, says he decided in 1979 that Spenser was deserving of the same sort of organized followings that Holmes, Nero Wolfe and other famous detectives had garnered.

"Then I decided, 'Let someone else start it and I'll join.' It didn't work out that way. Five years later, I did it myself," Pollock said. He got together with Kate Mattes, who owns a bookstore in Cambridge that specializes in mysteries, and, on April Fool's Day ("We decided not to take ourselves too seriously," he says of the date.) 1984, "The Judas Goats" was formed. (The name was lifted from the title of one of Spenser's adventures.)

Since then, the group has attracted more than 300 Spenser devotees from 29 states, Canada, England and Japan. A regular newsletter, a slick, well-executed affair, spreads the word and elucidates details of "the canon." Trivia quizzes are very popular with the group.

Head "Judas Goat" Rob Pollock shows off his Spenseriana in his Newton Corner home

some of the focal points of their hero's adventures, including the Ritz Bar, Fenway Park and 28 other points of interest around Boston. At Fenway, Parker threw out the first ball and, according to Pollock, the Sox went on "their longest winning streak of the season" (eight games).

Pollock's Gardner Street home is packed with Spenseriana, much of which only other devotees would recognize. There is a sign promoting Amstel Beer, Spenser's favorite drink until the Dutch stopped exporting it to America. Hoping to surprise Parker at a party his group threw for him recently, Pollock went so far as to call the Dutch Consulate in a vain attempt to secure some Amstel Bier.

Spenser switched to Rolling Rock Extra Pale in the tall bottle, sold only by the case at select outlets. "Malt does more than Milton can," he tells a literary friend in "Valediction," to justify God's ways to man." Likewise, Pollock has also succeeded in making the change from Amstel to Latrobe's finest. In fact, he whipped out a couple of cool ones to share with another Spenser fan during a recent interview.

Other articles in his collection of Spenser paraphenalia include shirts and hats with "The Judas Goats" logo emblazoned on them, every article ever written about his hero and a Japanese brochure promoting a brand of men's cologne on the basis of its fitting in with the Spenser mystique.

Regarding the probable plight of the new series, Pollock said the consensus of his fellow Spenser devotees was that Robert Urich "could grow on you" as a T.V. version of Boston's famous detective. He pointed out that Urich played Pittsburg Steelers running back Rocky Blier in a movie about his life and showed he has a lot of the physical qualities that make Spenser unique among his contemporaries.

The ideal actor to portray the burly detective, according to Pollock, would be "Robert Mitchum twenty years ago, in his early 40s." He seems stoic abou there being no closer approximation, aware of the difficultie: inherent in finding a capable actor who can fill out a size 48 jacket.

Pollock hopes the rapid-fire, wise-guy wit that distinguishes Spenser's dialogue will carry over to the new T.V. series. "A lot of people read Spenser for the wit," he observes. "It's not Noel Coward, but ...."

While it is surely not Noel Coward, what ever dialogue the T.V. Spenser manages to salvage from Parker's works has to outstrip the "Starsky and Hutch" types whose idea of dramatic dialogue amounts to, "Come on. Let's go!"

'A man of character'

Mostly, the president of "The Judas Goats" hopes Spenser's own character and personality, if it manages to filter from the printed page to the T.V. screen, will make the new series a success and possibly set a new, higher standard for the medium

To describe the unique sort of character that Spenser is, Pollock turns to an essay by the dean of American mystery writers, Raymond Chandler. In a piece called "The Simple Art of Murder," Chandler describes the qualifications of the "ideal" detective. "Down these mean streets a man must go who is not himself mean, who is neither tarnished nor afraid. The detective in this kind of story must be such a man ....

"He is a relatively poor man, or he would not be a detective at all. He is a common man or he could not go among common people. He has a sense of character, or he would not know his job. He will take no man's money dishonestly and no man's insolence without a due and dispassionate revenge.

"He is a lonely man and his pride is that you will treat him as a proud man or be very sorry you ever saw him. He talks as the man of his age talks — that is, with rude wit, a lively sense of the grotesque, a disgust for sham and a contempt for pettiness .... If there were enough like him, the world would be a very safe place to live in, without becoming too dull to be worth living in."

Looking forward to the possibility that Spenser, Parker's creation, might not survive being crammed into the compact commercialism of television, Pollock explains, using Parker's own words: "I write books for art. I sell to the movies for money. Don't mix them up. They don't have very much in common."

Racial questions on census

NEWTON — A series of questions aimed at determining the racial makeup of the city will appear on the next, annual citywide census, according to Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Election Commission.

The first proposed question will determine whether the respondent is white, black or negro, Asian or Pacific Islander, American Indian or "other," according to a preliminary proposal.

Licarie, who has some reservations concerning the state-mandated addition to the city's annual census, commented that he will undoubtedly come across hundreds of incorrect responses that will include "Greek," "Italian," "Irish" or whatever in the "other" column.

The second question will determine how many residents are "of Hispanic/Latino origin or descent (including Puerto Rican, Cuban, Dominican, Mexican/Mexican-American/Chicano, Central American, South American, etc.)"

The third is aimed at determining just how many members of the community speak foreign languages, asking, "Does this person speak a language other than English at home?"

Licarie added that certain specific questions designed to determine where people shop in the city will, hopefully, add to the conclusions of the ongoing "Village Stabilization Study." Those questions have yet to be drawn up in final form.

The census will be mailed out to every household in the city in January.

Countryside improvements put 'on hold'

NEWTON — The School Department is waiting for estimates from the Planning Department before it determines a plan of action for renovating the Countryside Elementary School, according to Assistant Superintendent of Building and Operation Vincent Silluzio said.

Suggested renovations at the Dedham Street school are a result of the School Committee's decision to close the Oak Hill School last year.

"With present enrollment, we can accommodate the extra students," Countryside PTA Co-President Dinah Molleur said. "But, as of next year, we'll be full."

The decision to renovate the school is based on a reorganization report compiled by Silluzio and Superintendent John Strand which mandates each receiver school must have enough space to support enrollment over a five-year period with a ratio of 24 students per room.

"There's enough classroom space at the school to handle the projected enrollment," Silluzio said. The year before it became a receiver school, Countryside had an enrollment of 303 students. After Oak Hill closed, enrollment at the school jumped to 379 students.

According to Molleur, the school is currently in need of additional space for its art program and resource rooms. "You can put up with anything if you know that next year, you'll have the space," she said. "If we don't get the added space, next year will be a difficult one."

School Department turns back $11,000

NEWTON — Despite higher heating bills and a new teacher's contract, the school department was able to "turnback" $11,200 to the city's "free cash" fund after fiscal year 1985, according the department's Director of Budgeting and Accounting James E. Egan.

"Percentage-wise it comes to very little," he said. "(But) the key is we didn't have to ask for any more money."

The smallest in recent years, the "turnback" occurred on a school budget of $41,271,595, Egan said. The two biggest expenditures which threatened a monetary "turnback" of the FY85 budget were utilities and teacher salaries.

Over budgeted expenditures allowed the school department to finish the fiscal year "in the black." One of these was the expense of paying tuition for special needs students that have to be care for by agencies other than the school department.

Egan returned $37,000 to the school budget from the special needs account. This account is one of the budget's biggest fiscal outlays. There were two other accounts which figured significantly under the department's estimates. One was worker compensation outlay which was over budget at $12,600 because of a sustained higher experience level, he said.

The other account overage was a result of appropriating $17,000 for payments to legal consel and $11,000 to psychiatric consultants. In all, $27,500 was returned to the budget.

Local colleges add $300,000

NEWTON — While many people are quick to acknowledge the educational, cultural, social and aesthetic values of the 10 area colleges and universities in the western suburbs, few are aware of the $300 million impact of these institutions on the area economy.

The Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce has just completed a study of the institutions' budgets, based on data for the 1984-85 academic year. The study was done by the Chamber's Higher Education Committee, chaired by Trudy Burke of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital School of Nursing.

The 10 institutions in the western suburbs include Andover Newton Theological School, Aquinas Junior College, Babson College, Bentley College, Boston College, Brandeis University, Lasell Junior College, Mount Ida College, Newton-Wellesley School of Nursing and Regis College. The last completed study was done in 1981.

Some of the highlights of the study show that the combined institutional budgets total $303,809,321. The institutions have a total 21,602 full-time students and an additional 10,436 part-time students. The total number of full-time faculty is 1,402 and the institutions employ 4,887 full-time. Their libraries have 2,421,312 volumes and the colleges occupy 1,265 acres of land.

The "average cost" of attendance is $9,248, with a range of $4,000 to $13,000 (including board).

Tom Paulini saved the city $30,000

NEWTON — The city saved $30,000 last week without lifting a finger.

Last Tuesday was supposed to be the day when voters across the city went to the polls to narrow down crowded fields of aldermanic and mayoral candidates.

But the crowded fields never materialized, saving the public $30,000 for the first time since 1971, when the Charter Commission suggested and the voters ratified the creation of the preliminary election system.

In a sense, residents can attribute the 1985 election-year windfall to Newton Centre resident Thomas Paulini's last-minute decision not to enter the race for Ward 6 alderman-at-large.

Had Paulini submitted valid nomination papers, as he had said he would, the Election Commission would have had to stage a city-wide preliminary race — to the tune of $30,000 — just to winnow one contender from one five-way field.

Turnout in that hypothetical contest probably would not have surpassed the total vote during the city's embarassing 1983 preliminary run-off — when less than 6 percent of the eligible voters temporarily terminated the political futures of three aldermanic candidates.

Nominees approved for EDC vacancies

NEWTON — Two residents have received strong backing in their bid to fill vacancies created on the city's Economic Development Commission (EDC).

The aldermanic Administration & Planning Committee last week unanimously approved Mayor Theodore D. Mann's appointment of Nathan A. Nager, of 875 Dedham St., and Mitchell L. Fischman, of 41 Brush Hill Road, to the EDC.

The appointments are needed to fill the posts formerly held by Ward 8 Alderman William Shaevel, who left because of time constraints, and financial planner John Hearn, who received a job offer in Arizona.

NEWTON — An Assessing Department plan to create a state-of-the-art picture inventory of every property in the city is on its way to the aldermanic Finance Committee for review.

The Administration & Planning Committee last week gave its unanimous support to the $98,000 project, which is part of Mayor Theodore D. Mann's plan to spend the city's free cash on capital improvements.

City officials said they hope to have the photo inventory created by early next year, in time to handle the onslaught of abatement petitions expected to arise from the fiscal 1987 city-wide revaluation.

Pictures of every residential and commercial parcel in the city will be taken and then transferred onto laser discs similar to those now cropping up in the home entertainment market, Assessing Board Chairman Robert Palmer said.

The computerized inventory system will allow a picture of any of the city's 26,000 properties to be called up on a television monitor while a nearby terminal displays all pertinent data on the parcel, like elevation, building footprint, square footage, etc.

Each laser disc can hold approximately 30,000 photographs, Palmer said.

The project is expected to significantly reduce the amount of clerical work and field inspections currently needed to evaluate resident's complaints about their property assessments.

New Japanese 'Super Pill' Insures Rapid Weight-Loss
No Dieting — Eat All You Want, Pill Does All The Work

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — An exciting new "all natural" weight-loss "Super" Pill developed by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association) has just been approved for distribution in the United States. Reportedly, it can guarantee that you will lose more than a pound a day without dieting, from the very first day until you reach your ideal weight and figure. News of this "Super Pill" is literally sweeping the country. It's called Amitol and there has never been anything quite like it before.

"Flushes Calories Right Out Of Your Body"

What makes Amitol so thrilling and unique is its reported ability to flush calories right out of your body. Amitol is completely safe, it contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? It has been used in Japan for over 1600 years to produce rapid and natural weight-loss!

Japanese studies verify that Konjac root actually prevents fat producing calories from being absorbed into your system. They say it does this by surrounding much of the fats, proteins and carbohydrates you have eaten with a protective viscous coating which is then gently flushed out of your system. And according to Japanese research this produces absolutely amazing results.

And who can disagree! Amitol (although brand new to this country) is already being called by many people, "the most exciting weight-loss breakthrough of the century." In fact, everywhere there are reports of easy and fast weight-loss from formerly overweight people (in all walks of life) who are now slim, trim, and attractive again.

Company Offers Extraordinary Guarantee

You now can purchase Amitol direct from the North American distributor, and it comes with an extraordinary guarantee.

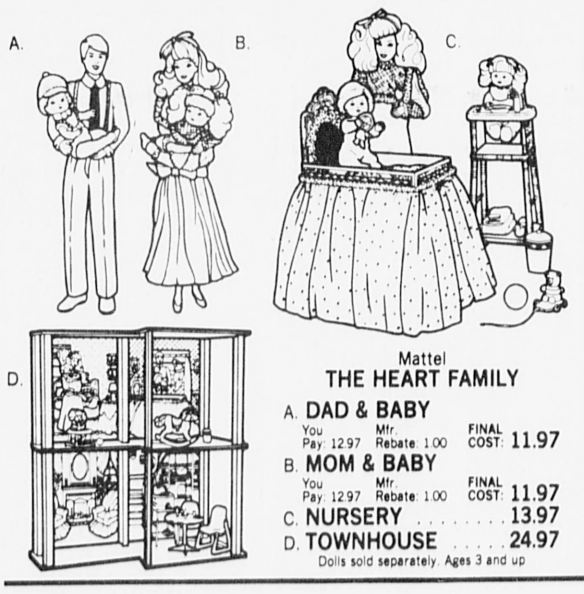

If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic visible results or just return the empty container and Dyna Labs will immediately send back your entire purchase price. This guarantee applies regardless of your age or current weight level. What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. Amitol is available, it's easy and it works without dieting!

Best of all, ordering Amitol is simple, fast, and reliable! Simply call Dyna Labs Toll Free: (1-800-441-5454) Ext. 901, and order with your credit card. If you don't have a credit card Dyna Labs will also accept C.O.D. orders right over the phone! All orders are shipped immediately by UPS, which means no delay and no orders lost in the mail!

$19.95—30 day supply, or $35.95—60 day supply. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Please don't wait to call. You really do deserve to be thin!

Give taxpayers a piece of the pie

George Keverian, whose perspicuity is equal to his girth, looms ever larger in the state Democratic leadership. It is he, not Mike Dukakis or Bill Bulger, who has assumed the role of an effective policy maker.

While the governor was engaged in some broken field running on the tax cut question, and Senate President Bulger was as inscrutable as ever, Keverian could see a clear picture development.

The House speaker gave his blessing to a measure that was passed by an overwhelming margin and sent to the Senate, where it languished over the summer months.

The House bill, advanced to the floor by Ways and Means Chairman Voke of Chelsea, would phase out the 7.5 percent surtax enacted under Dukakis in 1975 as a "temporary" deficit cure. Even after a comeback in the rematch win over Ed King, he steadfastly resisted a surtax repeal.

His position finally changed last week. The governor said the state's economy made it possible for him now to favor a permanent tax cut, which might include taking the surtax off the books. His administration finally got around to releasing figures which show a 1985 fiscal year surplus due by January of $217.9 million. Back in the springtime, the corner office was throwing cold water on high surplus projections.

Even when it had to concede sizable increases were around the corner, the word from the top was that there were several ways to spend it and the surtax should remain.

Public opinion was running strongly against the no-tax cut position, however. Barbara Anderson's initiative petition for repeal was under way. "Give it back" became a hostile slogan the incumbent's team couldn't ignore. Implications for the 1986 election year were obvious.

It is clear the House's reversal of an early lukewarm stand on the surtax opened the way for the shift by Dukakis. As noted by Keverian, it is likely the tax cut question on Beacon Hill will be resolved by a House-Senate conference committee. What the governor has done is to remove himself as an impediment to significant tax relief, something which could have cost him dearly in his next campaign.

A tax cut would seem to be inevitable now. How much and in what form are the elements to be worked out with a doubtful Senate because, in that body, the Ways and Means chairman, Patricia McGovern of Lawrence, has strong ideas of her own which run counter to the House proposition.

When all is said and done, one can expect a Bulger-Keverian consensus to emerge. The good news is that taxpayers are going to get a piece of the surplus pie.

State surplus: $90 million

Jackson eases fiscal pinch

By George B. Merry

Massachusetts government, like many Bay Staters, has an IRA helping salt away money for future needs.

This IRA, however, is not an individual retirement account but a public servant - Ira A. Jackson, the man responsible for seeing that the commonwealth gets every tax dollar it is owed.

The former dean of Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government has, over the past 2½ years, built the Department of Revenue into one of Massachusetts' most successful agencies.

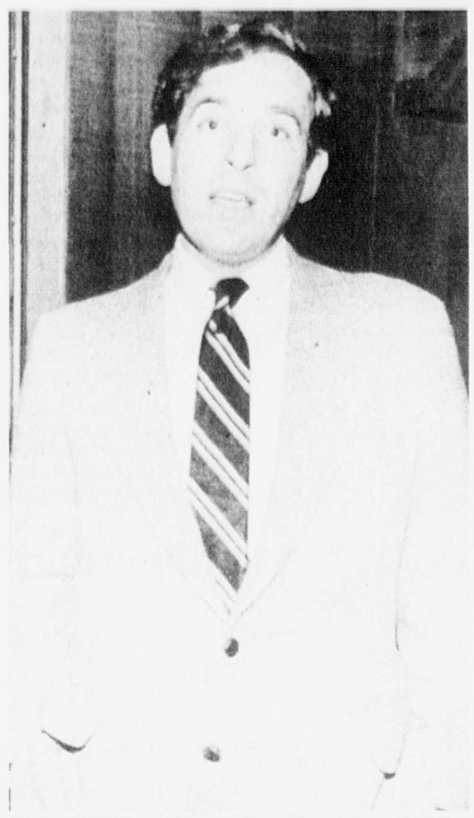

And what greater evidence could there be than the recently announced $89.4 million surplus with which the commonwealth ended fiscal 1985. This uncommitteed pile of money would have been even deeper had state lawmakers not earmarked $128 million of it at the last minute for public employee pension reserves.

Contributing mightily to the size of the surplus were record tax collections totaling $6.4 billion, some 13.4 percent more than in fiscal 1984. This growth in yield was nearly double what had been expected. It was the second year in a row that revenue increases exceeded original projections substantially.

Clearly much of this largess, despite the strong economic climate, would not have existed under a less aggressive tax-collecting operation. While it would be naive to assume that tax-dodging and chiseling are things of the past, there is much to suggest that they are likely to be considerably less plentiful.

Particularly successful among various Jackson-initiated programs to catch tax cheaters was the 90-day amnesty in late 1983. It gave tax scofflaws a special one-time-only opportunity to come forward and ante up without the threat of prosecution. Some $84 million were netted - $6.1 million in fiscal 1984 and the rest in the 12-month cycle that ended last June 30. The most optimistic observers had anticipated only "up to $10 million."

Nobody was more pleasantly surprised than Revenue Commissioner Jackson, unless it was Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who brought the 1970 Harvard College graduate to Beacon Hill from the Kennedy School in January 1983. Having previously served a term as governor and recognizing the importance of putting the Revenue Department in capable hands, Mr. Dukakis made filling that post one of first orders of business, a move he has never regretted.

Ira A. Jackson, responsible for seeing that the commonwealth gets every tax dollar it is owed, is being credited with much of this year's state surplus of almost $90 million. UPI photo

The Jackson assignment was twofold: (1) to come up with ways to ensure that the commonwealth gets every nickel due from its various taxes; and (2) to clean up the image of an agency that had been under a cloud since the indictment of some of its officials during the regime of his predecessor.

While it is doubtful that there was as much corruption within the revenue department during the governorship of Edward J. King as some alleged at the time, public confidence in the agency's integrity was hardly soaring when Governor Dukakis took back the state reins nearly 33 months ago.

Under Commissioner Jackson, a code of conduct for departmental employees has been in place and an internal unit created to guard against wrongdoing.

Thus far, there is no hint of scandal in the department where increased effort has been directed toward not only improving voluntary collections but also cracking down on tax evaders.

In fiscal 1984, the first full year under Jackson's leadership, the agency conducted $147.8 million audits of individual and corporate tax accounts. That is nearly double the number in fiscal 1982, the final full year of the previous state administration.

Increased attention has been focused on going after out-of-state companies that do business in Massachusetts and have avoided paying taxes here. Branch offices have been established or beefed up in Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, New York, and Pittsburgh.

That the current regime and the Dukakis administration mean business is underscored further by its substantially increased pursuit of Bay State tax-dodgers and procrastinators. Property seizures were up 74 percent in fiscal 1985 over the previous 12 months. The 159 takings for non-payment of taxes included restaurants, retail shops, land, motor vehicles, and yachts, worth $7.5 million.

With the increased commitment to strict enforcement of state tax laws, the "pay up or else" message is getting out, resulting in a substantially greater voluntary compliance than in the recent past.

Tax forms have been simplified. This, too, has helped. But it takes dollars to make dollars. The Revenue Department has considerably expanded and modernized its operation with the addition of new computerized equipment.

The work force, which totaled 1,802 two year ago, has increased by about 300 with much of the additional manpower involved in the more speedy processing of tax returns and audits.

From the individual taxpayer's standpoint, greater efficiency has helped bring faster refunds to those entitled to them.

If, as is now indicated, a tax reduction of at least modest proportions is on the way, certainly the better-run, more vigilant, revenue department has helped make it possible.

Tax break gaining on Beacon Hill

By William Poole

Death and taxes? Sure, we all know they're the only things that are certain.

But how many of us can say we know what the cause of our deaths will be or what kind and amount of taxes we have to pay during our lifetime?

In a continuing debate on Beacon Hill, a consensus has developed that some kind of a permanent tax break is nearly certain this year.

But in the shorthand of public debate the catch-all has been the state's decade-old 7 ½ percent surcharge on the income tax.

Even Gov. Michael S. Dukakis was forced to admit reluctantly this month that a tax cut other than his one-time-only $64 million proposal is possible.

But the governor's delay in making that announcement may have destroyed what liberals feel is more important — reform of the tax system to ensure that those with the most wealth will pay a higher proportion of their incomes into the state's tax coffers.

In an attempt to mask its failure to forsee the huge budget surplus for the year that ended this past June 30, the Dukakis administration apparently did some slick bookkeeping. Administration and Finance Secretary Frank Keefe said the fiscal 1985 surplus was $79.8 million, but House Ways and Means Chairman Richard Voke, D-Chelsea, immediately responded the figure was about $300 million.

And last week, the business-oriented Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation supported Voke's contention, but added the surplus-masking process was not limited to the Dukakis administration.

"Our government is using questionable practices that cloud our view of the state's finances," said an MTF statement. "Many of these practices can be traced back several administrations."

Of course, these practices are designed to protect state funds from assault by special interest groups seeking a greater slice of the revenue pie and from groups seeking tax cuts that would be more favorable to their interests.

The important thing that often seems to be overlooked in these debates is that there exists both special interest spending and special interest taxes.

It's easy to see that certain state expenditures are designed to help certain special interests. But what is forgotten is the fact that attempted tax reductions are often advertised as beneficial to all taxpayers, when, in fact, their impact may overwhelmingly protect the interests of only a few.

There is little argument among tax experts that repeal of the 7 ½ percent state income tax surcharge would help higher income individuals more than moderate- or low-income people.

And there is little doubt the liberal Dukakis administration would prefer reforms that would spread the benefits more widely across the taxpayer spectrum, or even design taxes to benefit those people at the lower end of the income scale.

But the state constitution's prohibition against such a graduated income tax is a roadblock to such efforts. And it now looks like the Dukakis administration won't have enough time to side step efforts by conservatives and others to repeal the income tax surcharge.

Following the siren's lure to Atlantic City

By Howard Altman

The casinos at Atlantic City rise out of the surf like the Kubla Kahn's "stately pleasure dome" and the ancient temple to the god Mamnon.

It was Sunday. The bells of the Church of the High Holy Roller call to me.

"Try your luck," a soft voice says. "A winner every time."

All through the chapel, salvation seekers sidle up to the one-armed priests of permutation. Visions of everlasting salvation and totally amazing grace fill my head as the apostle entices me on.

Lights blink, bells clang. Beautiful women with trays of libations strut by. It is not an ambience designed to let you concentrate on what you are doing.

With every spin of the roulette wheel, every roll of the dice, fortunes are made and prayers answered. But, for every prayer answered, there are hundreds more that are not.

Never tell that to a gambler though. A gambler's eyes glaze over at the mere whiff of the green felt covering the blackjack table. A gambler can beat the odds, take home the cash and walk away without blinking.

Fortunately for the Ballys and Golden Nuggets, there are plenty of gamblers, who pour into Frantic City like pilgrims on their way to the holy city of Mecca.

Sitting at the table waiting for my cards, I look around the great cathedral. There are no clocks or windows. Day is night and night is day. The fever takes over as the once mighty stack of chips painfully dwindles.

For the tapped out, there are lounges. Leather seats, soft as a baby's bottom, are filled with the broke and despondent.

The waitress cringes as a table full of losers orders a round of water and peanuts. The house has the last laugh, though. Because when you sit in a lounge, they force you to listen to some would-be Barry Manilow belt out syrupy renditions of such favorites as "Feelings." As if it weren't bad enough that you just lost your entire paycheck, the singer with the open shirt, hairy chest and more gold chains than Mr. T tells you how much he loves you.

The lounge offers a great vantage point. You can watch the ladies in straw hats — who come down in caravans of buses from the Bronx and Poughkepsie — as they furiously shove quarters into the machines and crank the arms, waiting for the big payoff.

Lemon, Lemon, Lime.

More quarters.

Looking out at the floor, you can watch people watching people. The dealer watches the table. The pit boss watches the dealers. Managers watch the pit bosses and somebody watches the managers. All the while, casino owners like Donald Trump sit back and smile, watching all the money roll in.

With all the money that floats around Vegas-by-the-Sea, you'd think the town was paved with gold. A quick stroll around the barrio that is the rest of Atlantic City tells you it just ain't so.

Just around the corner from the casinos, poor people scrape out a living. One can only wonder where the dirty men and women with stringy hair and bed rolls wandering lost among the ruins come from. Were they once powerful executives who lost it all at the table, or are they just a natural byproduct of gold fever?

Blocks of burned out buildings serve as testimony to the fact that money is not penicillin for urban blight. It does not matter though, to the high rollers and gold diggers. There are no slots in ghettos.

It is a strange feeling, walking around the casino with a half-dollar in your pocket, watching men in turbans casually drop $10,000 worth of chips on the baccarat table. You begin to wonder what pleasure winning can bring to someone who can afford to throw that kind of coin around.

You daydream about what it would be like to pull up to the valet parking in a long, black limo with a dozen leggy show girls. Reality, though, has a nasty way of sneaking up on you as you long for a cigarette and find that you have but a pocket filled with lint. There is no pity. You are just one of a million sad stories in the casinos.

The misery does not end there. On your way out of Frantic City, you fight with hundreds of cars and busloads of people at the approach to the toll booth. It is a mad dash to escape.

For some strange reason, there are exact change lanes. After all, how many people leave a casino with any kind of change at all? As you head north up the Garden State Parkway, the traffic is the final grinding knife in the back. It is as if the casino is saying, "We got all your money, now we're gonna torture you some more."

Regardless of the torture, the cost and the dizzy cacophony of money changing hands, I will be back. Like all gamblers, I hear the cry of the Lorelei, "la belle dame sans merci," calling me.

"Try your luck," she says. "A winner every time."

Public works or public safety

Is it possible to explain the logic behind the construction that is going on at Newton Corner, at the eastbound entrance to the Mass Pike? Pedestrian space is being extended and vehicular space is being narrowed!! Traffic is horrendous as it is and, when the new buildings are completely finished and occupied, traffic will increase.

Access to Washington Street, at the eastbound pike entrance, has been cut off. It doesn't make sense that this short section should be closed to two-way traffic, as people living in that particular area must turn from Tremont Street to Hibbard Road, which has cars parked on one side at all times and young children playing close to the street.

Work crews seem to make appearances only sporadically–they work part of one day and then there is no sign of them for weeks. This seems to hold true for the entire city–the corner of Waverly Avenue and Washington Street has been awaiting a seemingly unnecessary extension of the sidewalk for over three months!

Ban support 'overwhelming'

Open letter to Mayor Mann:

I am responding to your statement, as quoted in the local press, that you believe that there is little support in Newton for a commercial building moratorium.

I and every neighbor I know (at least 13) support a building moratorium for commercial development in Newton and will support politicians who are sympathetic to the goals of the moratorium movement.

The reasons are starightforward: what we see is uncontrolled development causing traffic congestion and pollution, noise, store crowding, and, perhaps most importantly, ugliness.

We believe that this lowers the values of our properties. Higher tax revenues from commercial development represent only a short term benefit.

Over the long term, tax revenues from residential property will be higher if commerical building in Newton is absoutely minimal.

The voters in Newton are overwhelmingly the residential property owners of Newton and they want to have more, not less, of a garden city.

Friends of the Library say it is time to move on new library

All of us owe a vote of thanks to the hard working members of the Main Library Facility Committee.

This diverse group of highly qualified people came to a consensus which shows us what kind of main library we need, where it should be, and how to pay for it.

All possible sites were fully and fairly considered including the Warren Junior High School. The clear choice is the corner of Homer and Walnut Streets.

This site is right in the center of the city. It is served by the busiest local bus route, which connects with other transportaation services.

At this location, an extension of city hall park can be created which can be attractively landscaped for pedestrian use. The size of this area, about four acres, provides ample room for parking and landscaping.

The committee also concluded that new construction is a more prudent choice than rehabilitation. The savings in rehab construction costs are wiped out by increased library staffing required by a less flexible design.

The 76,600 square foot building program is adequate but tight. All of this space will be needed for library services.

Municipal bonds are an appropriate way to finance this project without raising taxes, since the cost of these bonds can be offset by specially designated income sources such as lease income, anticipated sale of city buildings, and a tax on hotel rooms.

Since there are additional sources of income (more money from the Hyde School and the sale or lease of Claflin, Bigelow, and the Education Center), it should be possible to get a good return from city property without undermining neighborhood values.

The funding for a new library will include contributions from a fund-raising drive sponsored by the Friends and library board of trustees. We have already chosen a fund-raiser and are ready to devote our resources of money and membership to this effort as soon as possible.

We quote your most recent editorial on this subject: "Let's get on with it."

Open letter to Chief Quinn

I am writing to you today to extend my thanks to you and the fine officers of the Newton Police Department for the extremely fast response and caring services extended to me during my recent illness.

Many people at one time or another seem to take great delight in giving police officers and officials a knock or two when things get out of line to their way of thinking.

My family and I believe that we should publicize the good and humanitarian deeds and services that are performed daily by police and officers that go unnoticed or are taken for granted by many citizens.

My family and I wish to thank you, Lt. John Likley and all the officers that assisted and gave me courage and comfort when I needed it.

Council is probed, not chief

The council, a dues-paying association of almost 50 communities within and around the Route 128 belt, was created 20 years ago in an effort to modernize communication between police departments and regional law enforcement agencies.

Using Newton as its "host community," the GBPC has since grown into a mulit-million dollar purchasing collaborative which allows every city and town in the commonwealth the chance to take advantage of reduced prices for equipment like police cruisers and radios.

Dwyer acknowledged that he is Quinn's personal attorney, but said, "Right now, I am working for the council in an attempt to determine whether or not there has been any questionable management or accounting practices in connection with the administration of the council."

The audit is "predicated on the fact that Coogan, the man who administered everything for the council, has resigned and is under investigation by the IRS," he added.

In an earlier interview, Coogan said he told Quinn in October 1984 he would be leaving his duties in June to go into private business.

Coogan was asked to stay on with GBPC, but refused because of possible conflicts of interest between his new job and the council's activities, according to Quinn.

Subsequent to learning about the IRS probe, it was reported that no local, state or federal agency monitors the council's collective purchase activities.

Dwyer said it is "reasonable to assume" that an effort to provide some type of legal structure and supervision for the GBPC will take place once the audit results are known.

"Many times, you can have 100 percent supervision and still have a problem. It happens every day," he added.

The internal audit, which is trying to "trace all the money involved" in the GBPC's accounts from 1980 to the present, will include interviews with police chiefs and administrators from all the member cities and towns, Dwyer said.

Private contractors from which the council has purchased equipment and communication services will also be interviewed and the GBPC's financial records will be reviewed by a private accounting firm, he added.

Coogan, a Sudbury resident, began working for the city in 1971 as a work-study student from Boston College and eventually served, under contract, as the GBPC's legal counsel, project director, technical advisor and federal grants manager.

The GBPC relied on Coogan, who has written numerous articles for law enforcement and communication publications, to draw up its service contracts, bidding specifications and to apply for radio frequencies from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

On the council's behalf, Coogan travelled throughout the area in the 1970s to convince law enforcement agencies to join the Boston Area Police Emeregency Radio Network (BAPERN). Designed by C.E.S. Telecommunications, of Illinois, BAPERN is the largest mulit-agency police command and control system in North America.

In April, aldermen found that GBPC's bidding specifications for BAPERN, compiled by Coogan, were written so that only Motorola, a world-wide leader in the police radio field, could bid on the system.

Coogan's attorney, Kenneth Pollenz has himself applied to the FCC for radio frequencies on behalf of Acticom Associates Ltd., 751 Main St. in Waltham.

Coogan was last reached for comment a month ago at Ackerman Communications, on High Street in Waltham. Until recently, Ackerman had an exclusive contract with the GBPC, written by Coogan, to service Motorola radios.

Quinn has described the firm's owner, Jerry Ackerman, as "a Motorola trouble-shooter 10 about or 12 years ago," who eventually started his own business.

Coogan holds a bachelors degree in government from BC, a masters degree in business administration and management from Boston University and a law degree from BC.

Volunteers needed to teach disabled

NEWTON — Volunteers are needed to work on a one-to-one basis with physically disabled tots and adults in a swim program sponsored by the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society. Classes will begin on Monday, Sept. 23.

The program is offered at the Newton Marriott Hotel. Classes are adapted to meet the needs of each swimmer. Adult classes will run from 1-2 p.m. and classes for tots will run from 2-3 p.m. Volunteers will, at all times, be supervised by a trained water safety instructor.

A volunteer training program will be conducted on Monday, Sept. 30, at the Eliot Church in Newton at 7:30 p.m.

For more information on becoming a swim volunteer, contact the Easter Seal Society at 482-3370.

Radios stolen out of brand new Volvos

NEWTON — Radios were stolen out of four new Volvos parked in the Volvo Village lot on 371 Washington St., according to police. The crimes occurred between 5:30 p.m. Wednesday and 11:30 a.m. Thursday of last week.

Upper Falls man found guilty of charges

NEWTON — Eugene B. Condon Jr., 24, of Upper Falls, admitted sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding last week in Newton District Court on three counts of breaking and entering in the nighttime with intent to commit a misdemeanor, one count of larceny of property over $100, one count of larceny of property less than $100, and two counts of malicious destruction of property over $100. He was given a six-month suspended sentence in a house of correction and put on probation for two years.

Police morale is near the bottom

The stories are cropping up on the heels of published reports about police misconduct, including an alleged rape by two off-duty officers and the recent case of an officer discharged for allegedly sleeping while on duty.

The rumors about Quinn and his supposed involvement in wrongdoing as chairman of the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC) are being roundly dismissed by top officials at every level of government.

They say Quinn, chairman of the GBPC for the last 10 years, is being dragged though the mud because of an Internal Revenue Service probe into the personal financial dealings of Timothy C. Coogan, who served a dual role as Quinn's administrative assistant and the GBPC's legal counsel.

But the combined effect of all the whispering, coming in the midst of the NPA's attempt to work out a contract with the city, after three years without a new one, is plunging department morale to an all-time low.

"It's really bad. We're just falling apart. It's just one thing after another," Glenn said. "You couldn't find a piece of morale in the department if you tried. Everywhere we turn, we ask, 'Who's next?' It just seems like the roof is caving in all around us.

"It takes a little more to get to work for your shift because you're thinking, 'What's going to happen today?' We already have to put up with a lot of snide comments from members of the public," she added.

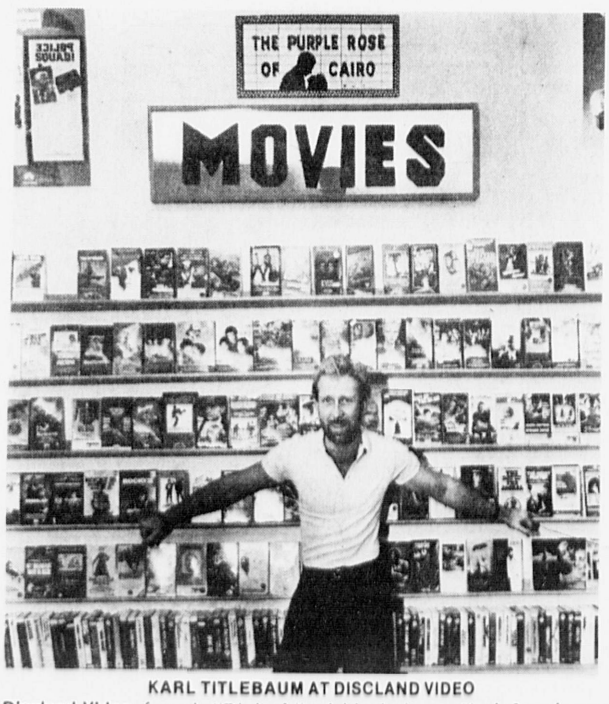

In an effort to quell the problem, Quinn called an impromptu meeting of command and supervisory personnel to tell them the rumors about him and the GBPC were "strictly false."

As far as Glenn is concerned, the stories are "strictly rumors until such time as we hear something definitive from the courts or from someone official."

Murder rocks the Highlands

from the scene in handcuffs to Newton Police headquarters.

Police initially held the suspect on a parole violation warrant from the Billerica House of Correction, where he had served time for auto theft and larceny.

But after further investigation, including a search of the Oak Terrace home, O'Neil was formally charged with the homicide. The search turned up a butcher knife, believed to be the murder weapon, which was found in the kitchen.

Police said they had no motive for the murder. The assailant entered the house through a rear window, and there were signs that Mrs. Aldrich struggled with her attacker, police said, but no clear indications that a robbery was involved.

However, a police source and neighbors said the victim did not get along with O'Neil and disapproved of her daughter's relationship with him.

Police also alleged that the window used by Aldrich's killer was often used by O'Neill to gain entrance to the home to visit Susan Aldrich.

Aldrich, who works as a delivery driver for the Boston Herald, lived with her mother, and neighbors said O'Neil stayed at the house frequently, particularly while the mother was away on a trip earlier this summer. At that time, the daughter introduced O'Neil to neighbors as her husband.

Clusters of neighbors stood outside the house through much of the early afternoon, watching the comings and goings of the half-dozen police cars on a street where the most excitement is normally the sound of children at play.

Emily Aldrich "was a real sweetheart," said Mary Bell. "I saw her out there watering her lawn just last evening. We often saw her puttering around her yard."

Mrs. Aldrich lived in the white, three-story home for as long as anyone on the block could remember.

"I think she might have lived there since she was a little girl," said Frank Lein, another neighbor. "I did some work around the place for her and her daughter. She was a nice, quiet woman."

Widowed for about 15 to 20 years, Mrs. Aldrich worked for many years as assistant to the dean of the Boston Architectural Center. She had been married to Samuel Aldrich, an attorney.

After retiring several years ago, she did volunteer work at the Appalachian Mountain Club in Boston. She was an avid mountain climber in her youth.

LWV rejects Warren site for library

NEWTON — The League of Women Voters has come out against the use of the Warren Junior High School Building as a new main library for the city.

In a statement issued recently, the group's local chapter endorsed the lease of the vacant Washington Street building and preservation of the surrounding recreational land for any use but a commercial one.

"The League does not support the reuse of Warren as our city's main library facility. The building would not provide the flexibility of space and function that a new facility would offer and that loss would not be offset by the $1-$2 million savings in construction costs," the statement said.

The position paper was issued after the League's 275 members studied the various Warren options over the course of the summer and the group's board of directors reached "a general consensus" on the issue, Newton LWV President Anne Hayden said.

The League's stance parallels the positions already taken by the Library Trustees and Friends of the Library, but differs from the recommendation issued by the ad hoc Main Library Facility Committee, which completed an exhaustive study of the issue in July.

The library task force advised the Board of Aldermen and Mayor Theodore D. Mann to sell the Warren for the most profitable reuse scheme possible, rental office space, so the subsequent revenues could be used to help finance the construction of a new library on city land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets.

"The League opposes the reuse of Warren for commercial space. To do so would require spot zoning, which we do not support. It would also set a bad precedent for the entire city."

Aldrich, accompanied by a prison matron, was also silent when she was arraigned immediately afterward on the opposite side of the courtroom.

According to the assistant district attorney prosecuting the case, her mother came into the same court in January with a petition to have her daughter committed to Medfield State Hospital for observation. Susan Aldrich eventually entered the hospital voluntarily and stayed there from January until May. It was there that she met O'Neil, who was also a patient.

O'Neil, who gave his mother's Salem address as his home address, and was unemployed on late last week, recently worked for several weeks as a caretaker at the Newton Cemetery.

'New Winds' are headed our way

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Eleven years ago, Ned Rothenberg emerged from Newton North High School an aspiring young jazz musician.

During the summer after graduation, he played his first gig at "The Backyard," a club, now turned restaurant, located across from the MBTA in Newton Centre.

That was the last time he performed in Newton until 1982, when he returned to play alto saxophone and bass clarinet in a solo concert. On Sunday, Sept. 22, Rothenberg will be appearing again in Newton, but this time with two other musicians — Robert Dick and J.D. Parran — all of whom make up New Winds, a virtuoso woodwind trio from New York City. The group will perform at the Newton Arts Center at 7:30 p.m.

Based on his 1982 appearance and other performances around the Boston area since then, Rothenberg has changed his taste in music since his high school days. Instead of concentrating solely on jazz, New Winds' music draws on classical, ethnic and jazz music styles.

Although the music is "not the stuff they're putting up in the windows at the record stores," New Winds recordings "sell over time." He continues, "there's definitely improvisation."

According to the Arts Center announcement of Sunday's concert, New Winds' members "compose both individually and in collaboration, exploring the levels of integration between both composed and improvised music."

It states that a "common underlying element is the melding of extended instrumental techniques such as multiphonics, altered timbres and circular breathing.

"These techniques are more than 'effects,' they are the vocabulary of a musical language."

Rothenberg has expanded his vocabulary of this language to include styles from various types of music from around the world.

Non-Western music is "based on musical precepts aside from our own," he says. For example, other cultures' music "has different rhythms and tunings than ours," says Rothenberg.

Rothenberg's interest in world music was partly an outgrowth of studying comparative religions as an undergraduate at Oberlin College.

Since then, he has continued to develop an open-minded and worldly view of music through studying various cultures and their music traditions and styles by listening to recordings and concerts in New York City. And, in November, Rothenberg will travel to Japan to study.

"The most interesting, creative musicians are also interested in studying even non-musical things," Rothenberg maintains. "If you just go to the conservatory and just study Western European music, you wouldn't be truly creative, although you may be good at the way you play Brahms or Bach.

"It's important not to be myopic and have blinders on."

A saxophone, clarinet and flute player with New Winds for the past four years, Rothenberg also owns and operates a small record company called Lumina, in addition to writing and performing music for dance performances, and teaching private saxophone and flute students.

The former Otis Street resident fits all these activities in between performances in New York, California and other locations across the United States and Europe.

Comparing his music's popularity in the various locations, he says that, in general, European audiences are "more receptive" to New Winds' music than are Americans. And there are more opportunities to perform that style of music in New York City than in, say, Boston, he explains.

However, the Boston area has recently offered more support for bringing such music groups into town through the Massachusetts Council on Arts.

As a result, Rothenberg says, "a lot of times, people in Boston think they're hearing a new thing." But, actually, the new music came out "a while ago."

He states, "It's only a unique event in the Boston area."

U.N. Day set for Oct. 24

The City of Newton will hold its Third Annual Nation's Day Program on Thursday evening, Oct. 24.

The UN Day Committee and its seven subcommittees have been meeting regularly to plan for this celebration. A number of local organizations are working cooperatively on this committee to make this day a success including: Boston College, Newton Community Schools, The Newton Human Rights Commission, the Newton Historical Society, Newton Parks and Recreation Department, Newton Free Library and others.

Several new events and performers have been scheduled this year including two seminars focusing on cultural/ethnic issues which will be held that week.

UN Day will be highlighted by a sampling of ethnic foods from around the world donated by area restaurants and local residents, displays, and cultural performances of music and dance.

This event is free and open to all who wish to celebrate Newton's ethnic diversity. If anyone is interested in making a donation of an ethnic dish or a financial contribution to this event they may do so by calling the Mayor's office at 552-7100.

UN Day is scheduled to be held at American Legion Post 440 on California Street in Newton. Further details will be announced in the coming weeks.

perty values have increased dramatically, but our property tax burden cannot be allowed to grow proportionately," he said.

The impact of the state-mandated assessing project will hit home across the city by this time next year.

Mann also cautioned against allowing the city's increasingly impressive year-end surpluses to "beguile us into long-term illusions of fiscal certainty.

"We can not forget the potential financial straitjacket which Proposition 2½ presents. With pending federal cutbacks and our continuing low per capita local aid allocation, the state must create greater local fiscal flexibility, such as the recently enacted hotel/motel excise tax," he said.

Mann used the bulk of his address to outline accomplishments he credited as "ample evidence" of the city's current commitment to excellence, including a unique AAA-bond rating, record year-end free cash position and A-2 fire insurance rating.

Describing the city government as "a large corporate entity" and residents' dual role as "the board of directors" and "customers," he said, "The concept of excellence is not a new one for us ... We have long used this benchmark as a measure of our performance."

Mann lauded the city's 50-percent decrease in property loss due to fires, subsidized housing initiatives and said the city's commitment to excellence in education is reflected by "the fact that 80 percent of last year's graduating class matriculated to institutions of higher learning."

He said the newly compiled "General Duties Manual" will enable "the Police Department to be the first of any city in this state to apply for acceptance in a recently established national police accreditation program."

The accreditation program uses more than 1,000 standards to evaluate police excellence and "will entail an on-site examination of the department by a team of nationally recognized assessors so that we will be assured by an independent authority of the Police Department's commitment to provide services at the highest professional level," according to Mann.

Police, court briefs

Auburndale woman accosted on walk

AUBURNDALE — An Auburndale woman told police she was accosted by a man while she was walking last week. She told police she noticed the man as she walked on Webster and Rowe Streets. Near the corner of Wolcott and Rowe Streets, the man came up to her from behind, grabbed her by the shoulder and said, "My you're a beautiful girl." He was described as being a white male, between 40 and 50 years old, with short brown hair and a medium build. He was wearing a tan shirt and brown shoes.

Cassette decks stolen near Fessenden

WEST NEWTON — Three cars parked near the Fessenden School on Waltham Street were broken into last week, according to police. Two cassette decks were stolen from the cars.

Car hit from behind by hit-and-run driver

CHESTNUT HILL — Denise B. Punis, of West Newton, was treated and released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital last week after her car was hit from behind by a hit-and-run driver. The accident occurred while Punis was waiting at a traffic light at the corner of Beacon and Hammond Streets.

Attempted theft of auto at mall reported

CHESTNUT HILL — Someone attempted to steal a 1984 Oldsmobile parked in the lower lot of the Chestnut Hill Mall Monday between 11:45 a.m. and 12:45 p.m., according to police. Damage was done to the door, steering column and dashboard of the car.

Honda Civic sprayed with silver paint

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — A Lake Avenue resident reported to police someone sprayed his 1984 Honda Civic with silver spray paint. Police said the action took place between 6 p.m. Sunday and 5:15 p.m. Monday.

Trio sought in pharmacy theft of $4,000

NEWTON — More than $4,000 in cash and lottery tickets were stolen from the Fox Pharmacy on Watertown Street Saturday. From interviews with the pharmacist, police believe three men worked together in the theft. According to police reports, one of the men asked the pharmacist to show him a wristwatch he was allegedly interested in buying. Another one of the men asked the pharmacist's clerk to help him get some stock off the wall.

The third man apparently then went behind the counter and robbed the safe. Taken were $644 worth of lottery tickets and approximately $3,900 in cash.

Thieves steal Gremlin in Newtonville

NEWTONVILLE — A 1972 AMC Gremlin was reported stolen from Newtonville Avenue, said police. The theft was reported around 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Appeals requested on driving verdicts

NEWTON — James Martin, 63, of Newton Highlands, was found guilty yesterday in Newton District Court on charges of speeding, running a red light and operating a motor vehicle negligently so as to endanger. He was put on probation for one year, ordered to pay $25 to the Victim-Witness Fund and to contribute 100 hours of community service. Martin requested appeals on the findings on each of the charges.

Stafford Road house bedrooms looted

NEWTON CENTRE — A Stafford Road home was burglarized Friday night, according to police. The owner of the home told police that, after being out for the evening, he went upstairs around 12:45 a.m. and found the bedrooms were ransacked.

Missing from the master bedroom was a large amount of gold jewelry, a gold Seiko watch and a 15-inch Sony color television. Taken from a child's bedroom were a class ring and some assorted jewelry. Police said it appeared the thief may have been scared away because large amount of jewelry and stereo equipment was left behind.

Entry to the house was gained by climbing onto the back porch roof and smashing an upstairs window.

Pair steals basket of food from market

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Police received a report Saturday of two men stealing some food from the Purity Supreme on Boylston Street. The two men ran out of the store, each carrying a basket full of assorted items, and headed toward Elliot Street.

Brighton man indicted for robberies at MBTA

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex County Grand Jury has indicted a Brighton man on two counts of armed robbery, two counts of attempted armed robbery and one count of assault with a dangerous weapon in connection with an incident involving four victims at a Newton MBTA station last April 5.

Indicted was David P. Nagle, 37, of 266 Beacon St.

Nagle, who presently is awaiting trial at the Middlesex County Jail where he is being held on $100,000 surety with a $10,000 cash alternative, was arrested sometime after the incident by police in the Cape Cod area, Assistant District Attorney Adrienne Lynch said Friday.

Lynch said Nagle wielded a sawed-off shotgun when he robbed a man of his wallet at a nearby Holiday Inn parking lot at 3 p.m. He then chased the man on foot into an MBTA station where he assaulted two MBTA employees and then robbed a woman of her car after flagging her down claiming there had been an accident.

According to Lynch, Nagle first tried to get onto an MBTA train after unsuccessfully attempting to steal a car at the station. But the boothkeeper, who was told by Nagle he had no change to get on the train, said "sorry no exceptions."

Nagle then fled and robbed the woman, Lynch said.

An arraignment date has not yet been scheduled.

Indicted extortionist pays bail

By Gary Dorion
County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex County Grand Jury has indicted a Northboro man, charging him with the attempted extortion of a Newton family in December 1984.

Charged by the grand jury on the attempted extortion charge and four counts of larceny in connection with the theft of over $100 from the family was Anthony Tidwell.

Assistant Middlesex County District Attorney Adrienne Lynch said Friday Tidwell was a friend of the Newton couple's daughter, and the couple had loaned him money to pay debts.

Lynch said the parents subsequently found out Tidwell did not have the debts he said he did, and they stopped giving him money.

Lynch declined to provide more information on the specifics of the case.

According to the indictment, Tidwell later tried to extort $16,000 from them.

Lynch said Tidwell has posted bail.

He is expected to be arraigned in Middlesex County Superior Court within the next several weeks.

Series will explore past Jewish families

NEWTON — "From Orchard Street to Bloomingdales - A Social History of American Jewry" is the first presentation of a three-part lecture series beginning on Thursday, Oct. 3. It will be held at 7:45 p.m. at Temple Shalom of Newton, 175 Temple St., West Newton. The series, entitled "In Search of a Usable Past", will explore some of the myths and realities of past Jewish families in an effort to redefine through history roles of Jews today in the family, the community, and the workforce. "What can we learn from our past?" and "Are we really so different?" are two of the questions being posed by the series, sponsored by the Sisterhood of Temple Shalom.

In "From Orchard Street to Bloomingdales," Ms. Shelly Tenenbaum, a Ph.D. candidate at Brandeis University in the Departments of Sociology and Judaic Studies, will present a new approach to the understanding of the economic rise of East European Jews in America. She will be using primary source materials including late 19th and early 20th century poetry, personal diaries and the Yiddish "Dear Abby".

On Thursday, Nov. 14, at 7:45 p.m., Ms. Emily Lipof, principal of the High School of Jewish Studies, will present "Shabbat - What a Difference a Day Makes". She will discuss "What frightens me most" about the future of American Jewry as she focuses on the meaning and importance of Shabbat in putting these fears to rest.

The series will conclude with a 1939 Yiddish film with English subtitles, "Mirele Efros" on Thursday, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m.

"In Search of a Usable Past" is open to the public. All programs will include dessert receptions with the lectures. For more information on subscription prices and reservations, please call Temple Shalom of Newton, 332-9550.

Special recognition

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca presents a Special Recognition Award to Herbert A. Abramson, president of Silver Lake Dodge, of Wellesley, in honor of the dealership's 25th anniversary. The award ceremony took place this past week in Detroit during the 1986 Announcement Show.

'Check aHead' for lice

NEWTON — Head lice are in the news once again as children's health organizations, educators, elected officials and parents observe Pediculosis Prevention Month in September.

According to the Newton-based National Pediculosis Association, outbreaks of these parasites do more than cause administrative nightmares for schools and day-care centers. Children suffer a range of negative effects from the discomfort and social stigma of lice infestation to the loss of valuable class time to the repeated exposure to potentially toxic pesticidal shampoos, lotions and sprays.

Among those concerned about these effects are the American Public Health Association, the American Federation of Teachers, the Health Committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides.

Also participating in prevention month activities are the American Academies of Pediatrics, Family Physicians, Osteopathy and the National Association of Pediatric Nurse Associates and Practioners.

This increased attention to an often neglected health problem is applauded by the National Pediculosis Association, coordinator of the September campaign. With so much public attention currently focused on child safety, one goal of the campaign is to demonstrate that no camp, daycare or school health program is complete without addressing pediculosis.

The NPA urges parents to follow the advise of this year's campaign slogan, "Check aHead," and make regular family inspections part of routine home hygiene. Parents can obtain more information on head lice diagnosis, treatment and prevention by writing to NPA, P.O. Box 149, Newton, MA 02161.

Evening classes set to resume Sept. 30

NEWTON — Evening classes in the Continuing Education Program resume on Monday, Sept. 30. Classes are conducted Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, for a 10-week semester.

Courses are offered in many categories, including language arts, the humanities, fine arts, photography, music, science, math, computers, courses in business, finance and real estate, health fitness and dance. Leisure courses are offered as well, including cooking and crafts, automobile repair and skilled trades, personal awareness and social issue courses are also included.

Apprenticeship couses are also offered in bricklaying, carpentry, electricity and plumbing.

Senior citizens residing in Newton are invited to join any of our classes at half price - with the exception of driver education courses.

To find the best adjustable rate mortgage, you have to know what to look for.
Although we're pleased to claim one of the lowest initial rates in the area, there's more to choosing the right adjustable rate mortgage than rate alone.
Origination fees (points), the margin (rate above index), and rate caps are equally important.
At Mutual Bank, our adjustable rate mortgages for primary residences offer the lowest points around (1%), attractive caps (2% annually and 5% over the life of the loan), and a low margin. And, as mentioned above, one of the lowest initial rates.
So now you not only know what to look for, you know where to look. Mutual Bank.

Real estate tax bill exemptions for senior citizens

Well, it's almost that time of year again.

Q. What time of year is that?
A. Property tax bill time.

Q. Oh yeah, you're right. Fall is upon us, and with it comes real estate tax bills. I hope I'll have enough set aside to cover it. I wonder if I qualify for some sort of exemption.

A. Most real estate tax exemptions have an age, marital status, medical condition, or income and assets criteria attached to them. Let me give you some examples of tax exemptions that apply to senior citizens. Clause 17C has two categories that apply to senior citizens: "surviving spouse" and "elder". "Elder" means a person who is 70 years old as of July 1, 1985.

In addition to the widow/widower status and age, there is a limit on assets. There is a formula for determining whether or not you fit the requirements. To that figure you add the amount of money in the bank, stocks, bonds, value of all other real estate, etc. The end result cannot exceed $40,000. The first $60,000 of your home's value is exempted. The only other qualification is the "elderly" person must have owned and lived in the property for which the exemption is being filed for the past 10 years. Clause 17C provides $175 deduction on your annual real estate tax bill.

Clause 41B is for the elderly person who is 70 as of July 1, 1985. The elderly person must have owned property for five years or be the surviving spouse of a person who owned property for five years. The applicant(s) must have been a Massachusetts resident for 10 years. The maximum income allowed is $10,000 for a single person and $12,000 for a married couple.

On the assets side, the criteria is that the whole estate, both real and personal, minus the value of your home (except for any part of your home for which rent is collected) cannot be more than $20,000 for a single elder and $23,000 for a married couple, one of whom must be 70 years old.

Clause 41B provides a $500 annual deduction from your real estate tax bill.

Clause 41A permits eligible elderly persons to deter payment of all or a portion of their tax bill for one or more years. You can defer up to half of the full market value of your property. There is an annual interest rate of 8 percent on these deferred taxes.

To be eligible, a senior citizen taxpayer or spouse must be 65 years old on July 1, 1985, and must have lived in Massachusetts for the last 10 years, and have owned and lived in his property for five years.

Veterans have a number of exemptions available to them, Clause 22A, B, C, D, & E. The tax reduction to those who are eligible varies from $175 for those who fit the requirements of a Clause 22 to a total tax exemption for paraplegics or their surviving spouses.

There is also a Clause 18 tax exemption. In order to be considered for this exemption a qualified taxpayer must first have applied for and been denied a tax deferral (Clause41A).

Finally, there is a tax exemption for the blind. (Clause 37A). In order to qualify for this exemption you must register with the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind. The certification of blindness from them must be attached to the initial application for this exemption.

A blind person who successfully completes the application, is entitled to an annual reduction in real estate taxes of $500.

Q. From what you've told me it sounds as if I would be entitled to both the "surviving spouse" and "elderly person" exemptions. Can I get both?

A. No, you can only receive one tax exemption. If you believe you would be eligible under both categories, see which one provides a greater benefit to you. In this instance, Clause 41B, "elderly person," provides a $500 annual exemption, while the "surviving spouse", Clause 17C, only provides $175.

Q. How can I get the forms?

A. Write to the City Assessors Office at Newton City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave., Newton Centre, MA 02159. Enclose a note indicating which form you want, and you may also enclose a stamped, self-addressed return envelope; or go to City Hall and pick up a form. Forms are available on the counter in the assessor's office.

Q. How much time do I have to return the form?

A. The assessors will not accept exemption forms after Dec. 15, so get it done as soon as possible.

Q. Will this one application be good as long as I own my home?

A. No, you have to re-apply every year, but after your first successful application, the assessing office will mail it to you automatically sometime after July 1. They have already done that for this year's tax bill season. So, next year you will get the form sent to you without a formal request. If you don't receive it or lose it, the assessors will be happy to send one to you.

Q. Can I call them on the phone?

A. Of course, but at the moment the city assessors are starting to do the state-mandated re-evaluation for fiscal year 1987. It's a little busy there.

Q. Is it re-evaluation time already?

A. Yes it is. There will be people coming around as they did in the past. Don't be surprised if someone comes to your door.

Q. I wouldn't let some stranger in my door.

A. I agree. You need to be careful and protect yourself from unscrupulous people, but the re-evaluation people will have an ID and a letter of introduction with them.

If someone comes to your door and tells you he is from the re-evaluation team and cannot produce the ID and the letter, do not let him in; call the police right away, and then call the assessors and report the incident to them. If you think of it, and you can do it safely, try to get the license number of the vehicle the person is driving. It could really help the police to stop any person intending to do harm to another senior citizen.

1985 Election Guide

Choice offered in Ward 6 election

Rodney M. Barker

Zoning revamp role eyed

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Attorney Rodney Barker says his experience and knowledge of the city will help him be elected for a fifth time as Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large.

The 52-year-old Newton Highlands resident is a member of Newton Conservators and Freeport, Inc., which used to run a half-way house for adolescents.

Barker and his wife, Elizabeth have three children; Penelope, 23, Gregory, 22 and Christopher, 20.

Q: Why do you believe you are the best candidate for Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large?

A: Because of my experience, knowledge and understanding of the neighborhoods and the people of the city.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of during your last term?

A: I think assisting and being very instrumental in guiding the Hyde (School) reuse proposal through the Board of Aldermen to a unanimous vote. It is a use that provides financial returns to the city, benefits to the community and benefits to low-income and handicapped persons who are in desperate need of help.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: My goal is to have a significant role in the rewriting of the zoning ordinances of the city to protect the residential quality of our lives. Specific references would be to parking requirements, the height of buildings and the excessive amount of office building going on in the city at this moment.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: Yes. I think the present salary arrangement is quite satisfactory. I voted for it to apply to School Committee members as well. The justification of that is the amount of expense that one is put to in carrying out office and the amount of time any alderman or School Committee person has to take away from work hours to do a good job.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: Yes, I have supported and still support a short moratorium of about nine months. I support it because I think there are some fundamental changes that have to be made and I want to protect the city from unwise development before those changes are made.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: The city certainly needs a new library. The present main library is a disgrace to the city of Newton. I think it should be at Homer and Walnut because it is in the center of the city and there is no other equally suitable site.

School Committee

Sullivan: Lift limit of terms on board

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

Lynne B. Sullivan

NEWTON — Lynne Sullivan — the uncontested candidate for the Ward 6 School Committee seat — has been concerned with education in the city ever since she enrolled her children in the system. Hope, a sophmore, and Will, a freshman, are now students at Newton South High School.

"I've been told I approach things analytically, and maybe that's true," Sullivan said. "But the city's children are always at the center of my focus."

A former president of the Bowen School PTA and former member of the PTA at Brown Junior High School, Sullivan is currently studying for her doctorate in philosophy at Boston College. Part of her studies include teaching BC students. A resident of 487 Boylston St., she is seeking re-election to a second term.

Living in the Garden City for 12 years, Sullivan found time to become a member of the Thompsonville Advisory Committee, the Bowen-Thompsonville Neighborhood Association and a member of the Executive Board of the Norumbega Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

As a member of the team which negotiated for 14 months last year on a teachers' contract, Sullivan feels the major goal of this years committee "is to bring in a contract with the teachers within the next six months.

"It's essential if the work of the school is to go foward," she said. "The work of the teachers must be stable. Without it, nothing can happen." The current teachers' contract expires Aug. 31, 1986 and preliminary negotiations have already started, Sullivan said.

Other goals she has for the coming school year include continued work on the program started last year by Superintendent John M. Strand to evaluate school principals. Another program worth pursuing, she said, is teacher development.

Sullivan believes her record should speak for itself when voters go to the polls in November. During her first year in office, Sullivan headed the transportation subcommittee and worked with the group that established this year's guidelines for after-school programs.

"I've worked hard," she said. "I promised to give the job the time it deserved, and I think I've done that."

For the immediate future, Sullivan — who's initiation into the committee last year was the closing of Hyde and Oak Hill schools — believes the city has closed its last school. "We're finished with it," she said. "Now, it's time to get on with education in the school system."

As far as limiting their terms and paying school committee, Sullivan falls on the same side as a majority of the candidates.

Stipends, she said, might encourage those "who were hesitant about serving on the committee. I'm also in favor of it (stipends) as a matter of equity."

Restrictions on School Committee members, limiting them to serving no more than four consecutive terms, Sullivan said, should be a "matter between the School Committee member and the public."

By lifting that limit, Sullivan said local School Committee members could become involved in state programs like the Massachusetts Association of School Committee Members. "It takes a number of years to become effective on that board," Sullivan said. "By limiting terms it discourages participation by members of our committee."

Revaluation process should be monitored

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — John Amicangioli says he would be a valuable asset to the Board of Aldermen if elected as Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large.

Amicangioli is president of Tri-J Enterprises Ltd. and a member of the Knights of Columbus Council 3973 and the Filipi Corsi Italian Benevolent Society.

The 52-year-old Amicangioli lives in Newton Highlands with his wife Carol and sons John Jr., 27, James, 26, and Anthony, 24, and daughters Angela, 28, and Judy, 22.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I believe that my combination of skills in both the public sector and private sector will make me a valuable asset to the Board of Aldermen. I care deeply about Newton and will represent the city with compassion, understanding and reason as well as using all my experience to be fiscally responsible and be sure Newton remains a special place to live.

Q: What's the one thing your opponent failed to accomplish last term?

A: I would have to say the general overall resolution of all the problems that exist. The Hyde School, parking and zoning were all issues the last campaign and I haven't seen any of the results yet.

Q: If elected, what one goal would you have for the upcoming term?

A: One of my primary goals is to carefully monitor the revaluation of the city to make sure that when new values and taxes are finalized, the citizens and businesses in Newton will be treated as fair and equitably as possible.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: There is justification for payment of a stipend for aldermen and School Committee members. The effort, time and, most importantly, the responsiblity the office carries in today's society, justifies payment. I think the amount being paid to aldermen right now is fine. It should apply to School Committe members as well.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until zoning laws are revised?

A: The Newton zoning laws must be carefully reviewed, then adapted to maintain the village character of the city. The new zoning changes should allow for Newton to develop in a careful, tempered fashion. A short moratorium such as six months really would not hurt this process. I would not be against a non-binding question on this matter.

John C. Amicangioli

Community experience backs Bashman's bid

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

Susan M. Basham

NEWTON — Health Care consultant Susan Basham says her experience in community affairs makes her a good candidate for Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large.

The 38-year-old Newton Highlands resident is a member of the Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council and currently vice president of the Newton Historical Society. She was also appointed to the Joint Advisory Planning Group by Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

Basham is divorced and the mother of two children, Rachel, 13 and Seth, 10.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for the job of Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I think I bring a particular range of experience and skills to the position. In particular, I think the skills I use in work are extremely valuable to the work of the board's group process. I also think my experience working at the community level has given me broad exposure to the workings of city government and I would like to work to improve governmental processes.

Q: What's the one thing your opponent failed to accomplish last term?

A: I would say (incumbent) Rodney (Barker) has been admirable to us as an alderman. I hope he is re-elected. I think adding to Rodney's outstanding job as alderman-at-large, there is a need for more aggressive interest in issues confronting Newton Centre in particular and being elected from Ward 6, I would consider those issues a priority.

Q: If elected, what one goal would you have for the upcoming term?

A: I would see as my highest priority becoming an effective member of the board as a working group of decision makers. That includes working on committees where my skills would be best used and involving community input where it would be effective.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: I think it's appropriate that people who give as much time to such important work as School Committee members and aldermen should be compensated for their time. The range between $3000 and $5000 seems appropriate to me for both.

Q: Do you support a moratorium on commercial construction in the city until zoning laws can be revised?

A: I think zoning laws are extremely antiquated. I have been attending Zoning Review Committee (ZRC) meetings and see the task as a monumental one. A moratorium would give them added incentive to complete their work in a timely fashion by creating a vacuum in which to operate. An effective moratorium, however, should be linked directly to the work of the existing ZRC because I see no reason to stop construction any longer than it takes to revise the ordinances.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: I think the city does need a new library. It appears the location at Homer and Walnut is favored by a majority of the board. I am a supporter of the reuse of existing buildings and have thought that the possible use of Warren Junior High School should be looked at very closely in light of financial considerations of a new library. I could support either (location).

For Karp moratorium means death

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

Laurel G. Karp

NEWTON — Laurel Karp says her communications ability will help her become a good Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large.

The 47-year-old Newton Centre resident is an office manager at E-V Systems Inc. in Newton and is a member of the Newton Centre Neighborhood Association, the Bowen-Thompsonville Neighborhood Association as well as PTA and temple groups.

She lives at 100 Athelstane Rd. with her husband Alan and daughter Pamela, 16, and son Gregory, 13.

Q: Why do you believe you are the best candidate for Ward 6 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I'm very, very much interested in neighborhoods and the communications between city government and neighborhoods. I have a lot of experience as far as PTA and just plain communicating with other people. As a former reference librarian and office manager dealing with people day in and day out, I feel like I can communicate with them.

Q: If elected, what one goal would you have for the upcoming term?

A: My goal is to represent my community to the best of my ablity. When we first moved into the city 19 years ago, we saw a comfortable residential area, good schools, and people living side-by-side with business development. I've noticed that a lot of people are upset with business development, particularly in the city, but I think we can get back to a comfortable balance. There are some areas of the city where neighbors don't want any development and others where residents would be very happy to have something go in. My main goal is to keep communication lines open so people can become comfortable neighbors again.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: No. I really feel in this day and age where we are talking about budgets being so tight, there is no reason for either to be paid, although I do see them getting some kind of restitution for some of their expenses to a certain ceiling. It shouldn't leave the door open for all the additional expenses such as insurance.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: There should be no moratorium, just a major effort to get zoning laws revised as fast as possible. Once you put in a moratorium, what you are saying is this city is stagnant. There are too many worthwhile things that would be kept at standstill. There are certain restrictions that can be laid on certain types of construction to keep them from getting out of control. There should be height and other limitations in a certain area, but to my way of thinking, a moratorium means that this area is dead.

Mansfield set to start second term

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Running unopposed, Ward 6 Alderman George Mansfield will begin his second term in January.

The 43-year-old urban planning consultant lives in Newton Highlands with his wife Meg and daughter Julia, 3.

Mansfield is on the board of the Newton Highlands Community Development Corporation, the Newton Conservators and a member of the Ward 6 Democratic Committee. He is also a member of the Sacred Heart Parish in Newton Centre.

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: I appreciate it as a sign of recognition of the work I've done. Most people say the challenge of a race is better, but in my position being uncontested means I faced a strong challenge two years ago and worked hard since. I don't think it's apathy. I know people who like to run but didn't want to this year.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of during the last term?

A: I really think that my role in getting the Village Study off the ground and funded, defined and going is the most important thing I feel I've done during my first term. It is yet to be seen what it will do and how it will progress, but it's clear that it will have a large opportunity for citizens to participate. It is a big step in the right direction for the future of the city. It gives us a planning tool.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I think my goal would be to find some way, either through revisions of zoning ordinances or other measures, to better manage commercial development and the change in the character of our villages that is happening.

Q: Do you think the city needs a moratorium on commercial development until zoning laws are revised?

A: Yes I do, depending on how long it is. I don't think it should go more than 12 to 18 months. I think it should be limited to commercial developments and certain large scale multi-family residential projects. I think that if we do a major revision of the zoning code, it will be difficult to carry on business as usual in that time period. A limited moratorium will force the Board of Aldermen to set specific goals and dates for accomplishment of the revision of zoning ordinances. Too many properties have had the way cleared for development through filing perimeter plans or getting building permits. It is likely to happen more and more as we make specific suggestions for zoning changes.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: I definitely think that both should be paid. I think that compensation for our expenses, which is what it is, takes public service from a position of being purely volunteer in which people have greater commitment and greater responsibility. I also think that the benefits associated with compensation help attract people who are self-employed professionals like myself who can better adapt their time schedules to the job.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: The city definitely needs a new library or a greatly improved central library. I'm not yet committed to a final decision on where it should be put, although Homer and Walnut is obviously the prime candidate. It's in my ward and I believe that I have to listen to the concerns of neighbors in that area and make sure the library fits well into the neighborhood if it were to go there. I'm more concerned over financing than over location at this point.

Coach Roger Brown cites team's poise

Boys' soccer roundup

Bourland scores 4 in North romp

PEABODY — If Peter Bourland keeps this up, he's going to have one amazing season. He followed up his season-opening hat trick with a four-goal outburst on Friday to lead Newton North to a 7-0 boys' soccer victory over Peabody.

Though the game eventually turned into a rout, it took the Tigers 31 minutes to get on the board as the Tanners tried to hang on by dropping everyone back in front of the net. It would for a while, but the North players "kept their poise," according to Coach Roger Brown. "We figured the goals would come."

Come they did, beginning with Bourland's first score 31 minutes into the game. Phil Vasiliadis intercepted a clear at midfield and dropped it into Jeff Swett. He fed Bourland, who was breaking in on the left side. The senior wing went around the goalkeeper and banged the ball in the open net from 10 yards out.

That was the only goal of the first half, but three minutes after the intermission, Bourland went back to work. Swett again had a hand in it, intercepting a pass and sending it back into striker Josh Albert. He crossed it to Bourland, who sent in a 25-yarder.

Four minutes later Bourland stripped a Peabody fullback clean and put it home, and for number four, he capped a nice passing play from Brian Scales and Albert.

Sophomore Adam Kinsey had a big day as well, figuring in the other three scores. He notched one of his own and assisted Steve Plotkin and Brian Cronin. Jeff Dias and John Fiske also had assists.

Brown was again pleased with Scales, who turned in his second straight solid effort.

What made the coach most happy, however, was the play of the bench. The Tigers were able to use just about everyone "for an extended period of time," said the coach. "Our second group outplayed them more than our first group. It looks like we might have some depth."

Goalies Adam Aronson and Scott Devore shared the shutout, with Aronson going the first 60 minutes and Devore finishing up.

Hawks tie

Al Flores scored a hustle goal for Arlington 11 minutes into the second half to give the host Spy Ponders a 1-1 tie with Waltham.

With the Hawks up, 1-0, on a Fred Romain score, Flores picked up a pass that deflected off the Waltham defense. The Hawks kept at him, but Flores kept hustling, and he finally wound up punching in a goal on a deflection.

Waltham had taken the lead 29 minutes into the game. Dave Power started the play, taking the ball into the middle and chipping it down to Romain. The senior forward beat one fullback to the ball, then had only to beat the goalkeeper, who came out to race him to the ball. Romain won the race by a foot, kicking the ball on a bounce into the open net from 15 feet out.

South in deadlock

A bad bounce cost Newton South a win, and the Lions instead had to settle for a season-opening 1-1 tie with Lincoln-Sudbury at South.

The Lions took the lead about five minutes into the game on an unassisted goal by Loren Mueller. Though they didn't get into the scorebook, several other Lions had a hand in it.

Halfback Phil Leibovitch got things going with an interception and pass up to Pillan Thirumalaisamy on the wing. Thirumalaisamy beat one defender and crossed the ball out front. The keeper deflected it to Mueller, and the junior wasted no time in zinging it home.

About 10 minute later, a Warrior shot hit a rock on the rough field and found its way into the net for a tie ballgame.

New coach Manny Lopes was pleased with the South defense, particularly Gary Rudnick, Alex Olin and Greg Manthei.

Dave Abroms and Bill Trevens came in for praise up front, as did Paolo Sepe, Dave Cohen and Fred Menis at halfback.

The coach pointed out that "It could easily have been a 4-0 game," noting that the Lions hit three posts, while L-S' only shot of the game went in.

Woburn tips Tigers in grid Jamboree

WATERTOWN — For different reasons, Friday's Middlesex League Jamboree was frustrating for both Watertown and Waltham. For the host Red Raiders, it was a matter of pushed the Hawks around without being able to put any points on the board. On the Waltham side, it was tough to take Mark Khozozian's passing blitz which allowed Watertown to dominate play.

But in the end, the teams dueled to a scoreless tie, as neither was able to get across the goalline. Newton North, the area's other club in the Jamboree, didn't score either, losing to Woburn, 6-0.

For Newton North, it was a "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde weekend," according to Coach Peter Capodilupo. The coach was pleased with Friday's effort against Woburn, but not at all happy with a Saturday scrimmaged against Framingham North in which the Tigers were "embarrassed."

Though Newton lost, 6-0, to Woburn, the Tigers drove the ball well and time ran out with the ball on the one-yard line.

The Tanners, a much bigger squad and one of the preseason favorites for the Middlesex League title, scored first. The Tigers got as far as the Woburn 20 on the ensuing possession before being stopped. The Tanners soon punted the ball back and again North went on the march before being stopped by the clock short of paydirt.

Quarterback Nick Mariano looked very sharp, as Capodilupo "wanted to get him some experience."

Saturday, the Tigers played "poorly and uninspired," in the words of the coach. "We played lousy. It was embarrassing to the kids and the coaches. I'm glad it was this Saturday and not next Saturday. Up to then, we felt we had gotten better with every scrimmage."

Fumbles and other mistakes, both mental and physical, led to Newton's downfall.

"I think we learned our lesson," Capodilupo said. "We're not good enough to play without emotion. We have to work hard this week."

Watertown thought it had a TD at one point, on a Mark Khozozian to John Forbes passing connection, but that was called back for holding.

Still, Watertown accomplished its primary goals which were to work on the passing attack and come out healthy. The Raiders threw on every down but one (a quarterback sneak for a first down), with Khozozian looking sharp out of the shotgun formation.

"No one got hurt and that was the main thing," said Watertown coach John Barbati. "We went out with the intention of throwing the ball. ... We wanted to get a lot of practice.

"The kids did a nice job. Waltham put a lot of pressure on us. It was a good practice for both teams."

Another thing that made Barbati happy was the way his club executed the shotgun. There were no offside or illegal procedure calls, and only one bad snap during the scrimmage.

Now the coach turns his attention toward next Saturday's opener with Walpole: "It's going to take a tremendous effort to beat them."

The jamboree was also frustrating experience for the Waltham visitors, to say the least. The Hawks were kept so busy on defense trying to defend against the air strikes of Khozozian that they were able to run off only eight offensive plays.

"Watertown had a shotgun offense and an exceptional quarterback and they just kept throwing the ball," explained Waltham coach Paul McGovern. "We put a lot of pressure on the quarterback and had quite a few sacks, but he completed a number of passes and they kept moving up and down the field."

Waltham's defensive unit was on the field most of the time with the linebackers and secondary getting plenty of work. "I wasn't totally disappointed," McGovern added. "Our kids were up and intense and there was some real good hitting.'

Numbers game worries Kojoyian

NEWTON — Only one thing worse than a large group of inexperienced athletes is a small group of inexperienced athletes.

That seems to be the problem of the Newton South gridders as they get set to kick off the new season. Head Coach Art Kojoyian just does not have the numbers, or the experience for that matter.

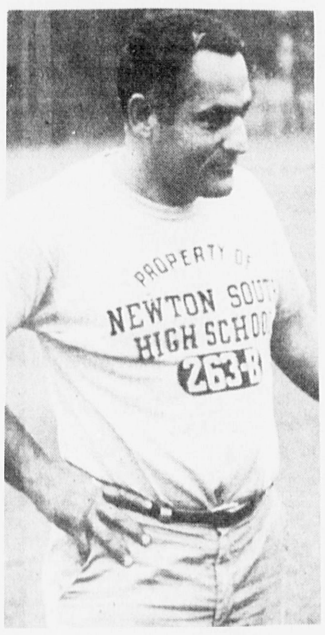

"It's something money can't buy," Kojoyian said. "We don't have the experience and we don't have enough people. It's a big problem."

Kojoyian is looking at 57 ball players, only 14 of which are juniors and seniors. Only three of those 14 have significant varsity experience. In his book, that spells trouble.

"The sophomores and freshman aren't mature enough," he said, "you have to be physically mature. Your asking a sophomore to do a man's job and it's tough on the kid. He's got to step in before his time."

Although Kojoyian's situation sounds harsh, the nine-year veteran head coach does see some sunlight down the road.

"I feel good about what we've done so far," he said. "We've got the young kids working hard and trying to get ready. One good thing about having so many young guys is that they'll all be returning. You have to look to the future, but we'd like to make ourselfs known this year, too."

Coach Art Kojoyian

One player Kojoyian is counting on to grab the attention is tailback Kevin Rollins, but the 190-pound senior's spotlight days have been put on hold.

Rollins joins the already-lost Mike Levine on the injured list with a bruised thigh and Kojoyian said he doesn't know how long the back will be gone for.

While Levine, who broke his wrist in a car accident in August, is most likely lost for the season, Kojoyian said he hopes to have Rollins back for the season opener against Littleton on Saturday.

Last year Rollins gained over 1,000 yards, averaging 4.9 per carry, and is one of the three experienced players on the team.

As if one injured running back was not enough, Kojoyian also lost sophomore Leroy Hollins with a similar injury. Brown has been dubbed "a natural" at the game, according to the coach, and proved himself in a scrimmage against Medfield.

Brown broke away several times for long gains, one in particular being a 60-yard trek that impressed Kojoyian.

"He (Brown) really showed some good stuff," said the coach. "He can move, he's got good speed. He's only a sophomore and he's got a lot of potential."

In the Medfield scrimmage, North scored twice and held the Warriors off the board. The Tigers also took on Cambridge, Rindge & Latin and, according to Kojoyian, "had the upper hand."

While the coach said he was pleased with the team's performance so far, he stressed that there are still a lot of holes to fill, and no bodies to fill them with.

The offensive backfield looks strong with Rollins but the front line is blessed with only one returning vet in tackle Jon Linder.

After Linder, Rollins, and blocking back David Mosby, the experience level hits the floor.

Kojoyian said a pair of sophomore cornerbacks are looking good and linebacker-guard Ribbie Hillis has exhibited some real enthusiasm on defense.

John Morgan and Scott Perrin have been working under the watchful eye of Coach Paul Murphy, who handles the defensive backs, and Kojoyian said the two cornermen have potential.

"John Morgan is looking like one of the better guys on the team," Kojoyian said, "and Perrin has got the talent. They're going to make mistakes but they've both got talent. Paul (Murphy) has been doing an excellent job with them and they're learning how to react to the offensive sets."

Hillis, a 160-pound sophomore, likes to play rough, according to the coach, "He's a tough kid. He's a good hitter, probably one of the best on the team. He really likes to mix it up."

Satter, Yellen shine in girls' soccer win

PEABODY — Amy Satter scored two goals and Laura Yellen posted the shutout as Newton North blanked Peabody, 2-0, for its second win and second shutout in as many tries on Friday.

"We didn't play all that well," said North Coach Fuzzy Howland. "We played good enough to win and that's all."

North started early, scoring on a cross wing pass with just one minute gone in the game. Angie McKenna started the play, laying a nice pass to the right wing to Carolyn Natale, who then crossed the ball to the left to an open Satter.

The Tiger defense came in to play for the remainder of the half and a good portion of the second period. Senior Becka Roth had a strong defensive game for North as well as Carol Ventura at stopper back.

Satter put North up, 2-0, 30 minutes into the second half. McKenna again started the play, passing to Kristen Hughes in the center, who in turn booted the ball over to Satter. She fired a right wing shot to the left corner of the net.

South falls

An injury-plauged Newton South squad held Lincoln-Sudbury at bay for a half before the host Warriors scrambled for three second period scores to drop the Lions, 3-0.

South was using three injured halfbacks in Sheila Coleman (thigh), Kathy McBride (thigh), and Hendi Crosby (leg) but still managed to hold the experienced L-S squad to a scoreless tie in the first half.

Jill Goldberg covered well for South in the first half, coming off the bench earlier than normal to play a strong game.

Lincoln dominated the opening minutes of the game before South got on track to play them even for the remainder of the half.

M.J. Wilson broke the scoreless tie 15 minutes into the second half on a nice play and a long, looping shot from 30 yards out.

Wilson took a pass and beat the defense before getting tyed up with South stopper Cindy Dockser. Wilson, however, turned with ball and blasted the shot to the far side.

Brenda McNamara scored 10 minutes later on a chip shot from five yards out, and Lincoln scored the final goal on a miscue in front.

Freshman Mara Raider and Julie Goldenberg combined with Katrina Antonellis up front to form a new line.

Vaughan paces Hawks

Pam Vaughan was switched to a new position prior to Friday's girls' soccer game at Quincy, and the Waltham tri-captain took to it like a fish to water, scoring three times to lead the Hawks to a 9-0 victory over Quincy.

Coach John Kelly, in his first year at the helm, put Vaughan at center forward and Angela Orlando at center half and the move paid off in spades, giving him his first win as a head coach.

Junior Kim Savage had a day for herself as well, scoring once and adding four assists. Leslie Fernandes, the other member of the front line, added a pair of goals.

Runner-up

Yellow Cab cops 4th straight title

When Ed Charles' jumper clanked off the rim with seconds remaining, it was official. Yellow Cab had won its fourth consecutive Newton Men's Summer Basketball League title.

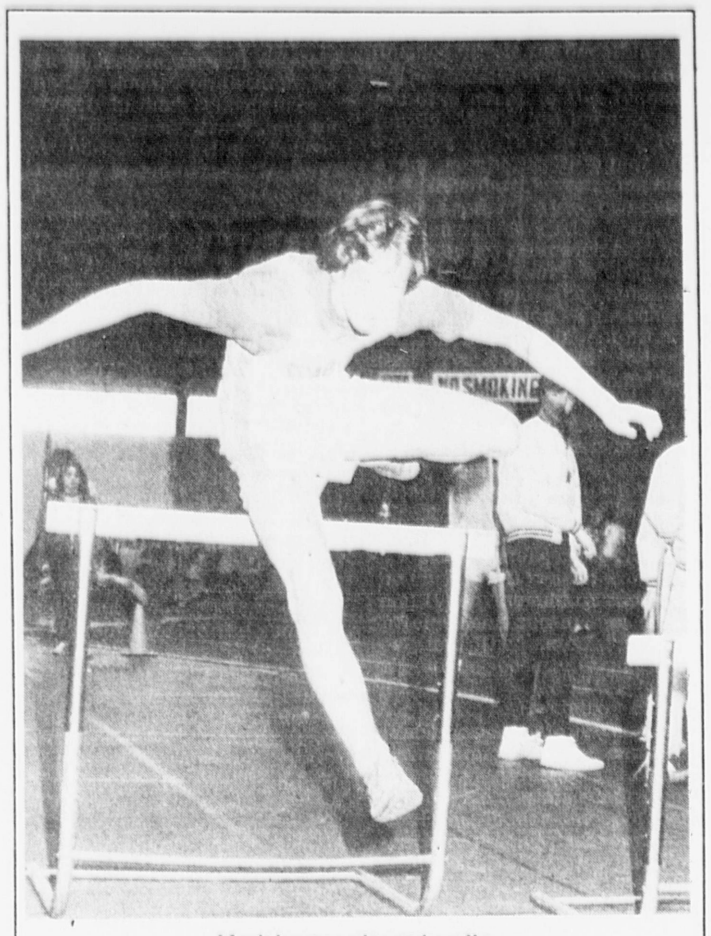

When Charles' shot did not fall, Yellow Cab maintained a one-point edge Thursday, 66-65, over the Blue Devils to win the championship series, two games to one.

For Yellow Cab, Bob Billings and Aubry McCoy paved the way, each with strong performances on the boards. Billings also dished out 12 points while McCoy had 11.

Also for Yellow Cab, Jim Genny dropped in 13, Mike Foye scored eight, and Tom Duffy and Mark Lennon had six each.

For the Devils, Bill Elfort scored a game-high 29 points while Dave Dawes was right behind him with 24. Tommy Page scored 12 and Charles had eight.

Yellow Cab had lost the opener last Tuesday, 58-57, before rebounding with a series-tying 49-40 win on Wednesday.

Mark Ivanov clears hurdle

Acton's Ivanov to aid Bentley track

By David Cuddy
Sports Correspondent

WALTHAM — As a freshman in high school, Mark Ivanov was already making his mark on the track and field circuit. Now, four years later, the 17-year-old Acton native prepares himself for a new season and a new team.

Ivanov will be attending Bentley College this fall.

"We've been recruiting Mark for awhile," said Bentley track coach Barry Harwick. "He showed some interest in Bentley and when someone with his talent shows interest we try to follow up immediately."

Harwick first saw Ivanov compete as a freshman, a short while before the track coach heavily pursued this local track phenomenon.

The attraction? The interest? Ivanov has only excelled in league as well as state and national competition for most of his high school career.

A four-year trackster for Acton-Boxboro High School, Ivanov began to take the sport by its reigns as a senior. In January of '85, after a successful indoor track season, Ivanov placed in both the hurdles and the high jump at the high school indoor championships.

After an equally impressive season in outdoor track, the A-B star finished fourth in the 110-meter high hurdles at the high school New Englands in May.

The end of school for the summer didn't mean a beach house down on the Cape for Ivanov, it meant a three-month workout that would prepare him for college competition.

Ivanov started the summer off in style, winning the State Decathlon Championships held in Lawrence in early June. Then, in late June he finished 10th in the Track Athletic Congress (TAC) Junior Nationals held in Chicago.

From the Windy City, it was off to Long Island to compete in another decathlon at the TAC Youth Nationals in Uniondale. This time out, Ivanov again finished first, but in addition set a national record for his age group with 6,197 points.

That performance gained him national recognition and he was highlighted in the Faces In The Crowd section in the back of Sports Illustrated. It was no cover shot, feature-length story, but it was a start for a man who is already well accustomed to winning.

"It was a real honor to be in Sports Illustrated," said Ivanov. "But that wasn't my best performance. I average about 100 points more."

Ivanov attended the Bay State Games in late July and finished second in the high jump and fourth in both the pole vault and 110-meter hurdles, equaling personal bests in both the hurdles (15.9) and high jump (6-4).

At the AAU's in Taunton, Ivanov's most recent competition, the future Bentley star finished fifth in the decathlon.

The decathlon is not an unfamiliar event to the Ivanov family. Mark first became interested in the two-day, 10-event combo as a junior in high school while watching his older brother, Alex, compete in a decathlon for RIP.

At Bentley, Harwick said he plans to use Ivanov in both the decathlon and the smaller scaled pentahlon. The coach did not hesitate in admitting that Ivanov would indeed make an immediate contribution to the team.

Ivanov was similar in exhibiting his enthusiasm. "I can't wait to start," he said. "Barry has done a lot for me already and I'm really looking forward to running for him."

Harwick and his tracksters begin the fall season Monday and Ivanov should fit right in. After a long summer of competition, the Acton resident should be loose and ready to go.

At Acton-Boxboro High, Ivanov was a three-year letterman in soccer and captained the team during his senior season. He was also captain of both the indoor and outdoor track teams this past year.

The son of Alex and Joy Ivanov, Mark plans to study business management at Bentley, where he will live.

Fairchild Cosgrove golf winner

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

WAYLAND — With some 200,000 college students invading the Boston area this week, the Charles Cosgrove Memorial Golf Tournament decided to have a freshman orientation day of its own on Sunday, Sept. 8.

Not only was Bob Fairchild a first-time winner, with his Callaway score of 66, he was a first-time player. The 50-year old Wellesley resident fired a 74 gross score at Wayland Country Club, giving him the crown at 66 when his 8 handicap was figured in.

Another rookie to the Cosgrove, Larry Kelley, earned the low gross trophy with a score of 74. He, Fairchild, Bob Keefe and Tom O'Rourke all finished with that score.

As the overall winner, Fairchild was eliminated from the low gross consideration, leaving the other three. Keefe and O'Rourke both birdied the first hole, but that wasn't enough when the cards were matched, because Kelley came up with an eagle on number one.

"I just got lucky on the first hole," said Kelley. The Newtonville resident got off "a good drive," used a four-iron to get on the green, and sank an eight-foot putt for the eagle 3.

The 32-year-old's home course is George Wright in Hyde Park.

On the matching of cards, O'Rourke just missed what would have been his sixth gross crown. He won it last year with a 73.

Fairchild's birdie on one was the first of three. The father of 3, who plays regularly at the Wellesley Country Club, didn't have a bad hole. All three of his birdies came on the front nine as he fired a 35, and he then played a consistent back nine to hang on for the crown.

About the only thing that put a damper on Fairchild's day was the fact that he had a plane to catch and couldn't make the dinner at St. Bernard's Hall afterward to pick up his award.

Dave Webb was the runner-up with a score of 67, while no fewer than six players carded 68s.

The 121 players raised enough to award a $1,000 scholarship to Kevin Blake. A former lacrosse and football captain at Newton North, Blake is currently attending Holy Cross.

Though a strong performer in football, lacrosse was the 1984 graduate's sport at North. As a senior, the tall defenseman won every award in sight, capping his year by being named an All-American, one of only three from Massachusetts.

From there he went to the University of New Hampshire for a year before transferring to Holy Cross. He expects to play lacrosse for the Crusaders this spring.

The sophomore indicated that the scholarship would help out quite a bit, as he's already put most of the money he raised working two jobs this summer toward his education. The 19-year-old Blake worked a Albemarle Acres Summer Day Camp and was a life guard at the Harry Gath Pool.

Though no records were set

(Ev Paulin won the affair last year with a 52 for the best score ever), all concerned considered the tournament quite a success. The weather cooperated, with a warm, sunny day, and Golf Chairman called the greens at Wayland "superb. There was a lot of good putting," despite the rains earlier in the week.

This was the 24th annual tournament. It started in 1962 when 16 friends of Charles Cosgrove got together to honor the late alderman and lover of the links. From that small start, the tourney turned into a charitable affair, and by 1965 there was enough left over to present a $200 scholarship to John Rooney of West Newton. He went on to St. Anselm.

That began a long list of scholarship winners, right through last year's presentation of $500 each to Tim Brandon and Mary Reynolds. Brandon attends American International College, where he plays football, while Reynolds, a multi-sport star and the Female Athlete of the Year as a senior at Newton North, went to UNH.

With the $1,000 given to Blake this year, the tournament can now credit $18,750 worth of scholarships handed out during its history. The summary:

Proia hits for Falcons

WALTHAM — Newton North product Jim Proia sliced a pinch-hit, three-run double in his first collegiate at bat to spark Bentley College to a 10-7 victory over Brandeis Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader played Brandeis University.

Brandeis came back in the night-cap to take a 7-2 decision and a split.

Bentley scored five, fourth-inning runs to take the first game, powered by Proia's double, a shot to right-center.

Bentley catcher Ken Kron knocked in three runs, one with a unorthodox solo homer in the second inning. Usually when a home run is hit, it's the ball that leaves the park. Not in this case. Kron's homer fell short of the left field fence, but that didn't stop the outfielder, who went over instead.

Five-hit pitching by Ken Lamoureaux kept Bentley at bay in the second game as Brandeis salvaged the afternoon with a 7-2 victory.

Lamoureaux fanned 10 on the way to the complete-game effort.

Bentley, now 1-1, will play Thursday at home against MIT.

Freedman's double win fuels South swimmers

NEWTON — Amy Freedman picked up a pair of victories to pace the Newton South swim team to a 119-48 victory over an undermanned Quincy squad at Newton North on Friday.

Freedman, a senior, picked up her victories in the 200-yard freestyle (2:29.27) and the 500 free (6:49.43).

Lion coach Scott Pohlman was also happy with a couple of his freshman performances. The coach was able to use just about everyone and test several people in different events because of the disparity in the two teams.

Jane Stolper came through with a second in the 200-yard individual medley, and fellow ninth-grader Stephanie Karp did the same in the 100 breaststroke.

The Lions follow up the big season-opening win with a home meet against Milford on Tuesday. The 5 p.m. meet, at Newton North, will begin the league schedule.

The summary:

Newton forming elementary-age Pop Warner league

The Newton Pop Warner football organization is forming an Elementary School League for boys 8 to 12 years old. The "in-town" league will practice and play its games at Albemarle Field Tuesday and Thursday nights.

Boys interested in participating may register Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 6 to 7 p.m. at Albemarle Field. Any questions, call Fred Dalicandro at 332-6286.

The players will practice Tuesday nights and will play competitively on Thursday nights under floodlights at 6 p.m. Two games will be played simultaneously.

The Newton Tigers already have three traveling teams–Midgets, Junior Midgets and Pee Wees.

Infant furniture can be hazardous

By Patricia McCormack

NEW YORK — Infant furniture can be hazardous to your baby's health — fatally so, in fact.

The toll is on file at the U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC). It continues, despite preachments from that source in Washington, D. C., and the National Safety Council in Chicago.

A major reason furniture continues to kill and hurt babies and toddlers: Many infants born within the last 12 months are bedded in hand-me-down cribs for sentimental or economic reasons. Or they and toddlers use other secondhand baby furniture made before new safety standards for manufacture went into effect in 1974.

Glimpse of trouble

A glimpse of the troubles came in an interview with the CPSC's Joel Freedman, a technical information specialist. Incidents involving accidents requiring hospital emergency room treatment in 1984, for example, included:

Baby changing tables, 1,500; baby carriages, 1,100; baby gates and barriers, 1,200; baby walkers-jumpers, 15,700; baby bottles, 4,500; playpens, 3,900; baby scales, 68; youth chairs, 400; car seats for infants or children, 6,000; baby strollers, 11,000; pacifiers, 200; crib gyms, 300; diaper pails, 90; portable cribs, 150; night lights, 300; baby carriers on bikes, 400; potty chairs, 700; crib extender rails, 4,100; cradles, 600; baby mattresses or pads, 300.

The National Safety Council (NCS) says lack of supervision or misuse of a product contribute to many nursery-equipment accidents. But a large number of recent deaths, says the NCS, can be blamed on unsafe features of older furniture that does not meet the 1974 federal safety standards.

The NCS estimates that in 1982 and 1983, despite safety standards for several products, nursery equipment-related deaths totaled 177.

Examples of tragedies involving older, unsafe furniture:

- A 12-month-old girl dies when her head is caught in the decorative opening between the finial and the top rail of the headboard of her crib. The CPSC is aware of 33 deaths by strangulation on a crib's finial or corner post.
- A 13-month-old boy toddles over to a toy chest and lifts the lid. As he peers in, the lid crashes down on his neck, cutting off air supply and killing him.
- A 4-month-old girl slips between crib slats. They are spaced 3.5 inches apart. She suffocates when her head is caught.

Particularly worrisome to the CPSC and the Safety Council are unsafe nursery products in homes. Hand-me-downs or used baby furniture bought at tag, garage or lawn sales. Maybe even an antique crib that's been in the family for generations is a potential life-threatening hazard.

To inform parents about the dangers, the CPSC last fall began a campaign focusing on the older furniture.

The safe nursery

In a new buyer's guide, "The Safe Nursery," the CPSC provides tips to help avoid injuries from nursery furniture and equipment.

Parents are advised to check out cribs for compliance with federal standards because "more infants die every year in accidents involving cribs than with any other product intended for children."

So if you're buying a new full-size crib, it is advised:

- Buy cribs with corner posts that are less than five-eighths of an inch in height. Corner post extensions can be a catchpoint for children's necklaces or cords around the neck.
- If you buy bumper pads for the crib make sure they fit around the entire crib, tie or snap into place, and have at least six straps. To prevent your baby from chewing on the straps or becoming entangled in them, trim off any excess length. Use the bumpers until the baby can pull up to a standing position, then remove them so that the baby will not use them to try to climb out of the crib.
- Remove and destroy all plastic wrapping materials. Before throwing the plastic away, tie it in knots. Children have suffocated while playing with plastic wrap.

If you already have a crib or buy a secondhand one, the CPSC words to the wise include the following:

- Some older crib head and footboard designs may allow an infant's head to become caught in the openings between the corner post and the robe rail or in other openings in the headboard structure. This may lead to strangulation. Look for a crib design either without the curved openings or corner posts, or one where the opening is too large for the head to become caught in it. Corner posts should be unscrewed or sawed off flush with the headboard or footboard.
- Never use a crib that has missing slats. Be sure that all slats are securely fastened in place and are spaced no more than 2 3/8 inches apart to avoid neck entrapment.
- Use a mattress that fits snugly. If you can fit more than two fingers between the edge of mattress and crib side, the mattress is too small. An infant can suffocate if its head or body becomes wedged between the mattress and the crib sides.
- Buy a crib with as large a distance as possible between the top of the side rail and the mattress support. This will discourage baby from trying to climb out. Most crib accidents occur when infants fall while climbing out of their cribs.
- If you paint or refinish the crib, use only high quality household enamel paint and let it dry thoroughly so there are no residual fumes. Don't use old paints manufactured prior to February, 1978, when the 0.06 percent lead limitation went into effect.

CPSC safety tips

- If you place a crib next to a window, make sure that there are no drapery or venetian blind cords within child's reach. More than 40 children have strangled on such cords.
- Never hang any stringed object, such as a toy on a string or a laundry bag, on the corner post or nearby where a child could become caught in it and strangle.
- Always lock the side rail in its raised position as soon as your child can stand up.
- Check the crib and replace any missing parts such as screws, bolts or mattress support hangers. Make sure all screws or bolts are securely tightened.

Audrey Lezberg and Stephen Lyke

Audrey Lezberg marries Stephen Lyke of New York

Audrey Lezberg, a daugher of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lezberg of Newton Centre, was married in Newton on Aug. 18 to Stephen Erwin Lyke, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Ellis Lyke of Clarence, N.Y. Emily Lipoff, J.P., officiated at the ceremony at the Mill Falls.

Rosalyn Lezberg was her sister's maid of honor and Sherman E. Lyke, Jr., was his brother's best man. Bridesmaids were Ilene Segal of Newton and Lauri Horkitz of Maplewood, N.J. Abby Lyke, the groom's niece, was flower girl. Ushers were Kevin Grady, of Pittsfield and Charles Minnick of Clarence, N.Y. Ben Carson, the groom's nephew, was ring bearer.

The bride, a graduate of Newton South High School and Williams College, is employed as an economist at the Battelle Memorial Institute in Richland, Wash. where the groom, a graduate of Northeastern University and the University of California at Berkeley, is employed as a chemical engineer.

After a wedding trip through the Canadian Rockies, the couple will live in Richland, Wash.

Cynthia J. McIntyre is married to Jeffrey Prescott

A honeymoon trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, followed the marriage of Cynthia Joan McIntyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce M. McIntyre of 3 Kilburn Road, West Newton. The bridegroom is Jeff Prescott, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Prescott of Bellingham, Mass.

The couple were married at a Nuptial Chass Ceremony in St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, before an alter decorated with assorted rainbow-colored carnations. Father Stephen Jasoma performed the ceremony.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk taffeta organza, the bodice and high neckline trimmed with beaded pearl alencon lace and a chapel train. A triple-tiered, finger-length veil was attached to a seek pearl cap. She carried a cascade mixture of white carnations, stephanotis, orchard and starr flowers.

The bride chose a rainbow-colored theme for her attendants of silk taffeta hooped-line gowns. They carried contrasting bouquets of carnations and wore a mini-band of carnations and mums for their head pieces.

Miss Heather McIntyre, sister of the bride, was honor attendant.

Bridesmaids were Chiss Kimberly Bourgeois of Waltham, cousin of the bride; Marybeth Whitaker of West Newton, friend of the bride; Cheryl Prescott of Blackstone, sister-in-law of the groom.

The best man was Michael Robinson of Bellingham. Ushers were Jon McIntyre and Jeffrey McIntyre of West Newton, brothers of the bride. Michael Prescott and Bruce Prescott of Bellingham and Blackstone, brothers of the bridegroom.

Jeff and Cynthia Prescott

The bride's mother chose a lavender gown trimmed with sequins and silver accessories. A yellow gown with matching cape trimmed with rhinestones were worn by the bridegroom's mother.

The reception was held at the Grand Ballroom at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Framingham.

The bride received her associate of science degree from Aquinas Junior College, Newton. She is a graduate of Newton North High School. She is currently employed at Adams-Russell Company, Inc. in Waltham as a secretary.

The bridegroom attended Berkeley College of Music and graduated from Bellingham High School. He is currently employed at C & K Components, Inc. in Newton as a senior foreman.

The couple will reside in Bellingham.

Karen L. Hough to wed David Gasdia of Newton

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Hough of Waltham announce the engagement of their daughter, Karen Lynn, to David Rand Gasdia, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Gasdia of Newton.

Miss Hough is a 1978 graduate of Waltham High School and a 1980 graduate of Mount Ida College. She is employed as a paralegal with Harrison & Maguire Attorneys-at-Law in Framingham.

Mr. Gasdia is a 1978 graduate of Newton North High School and a 1982 graduate of Boston State College. He is employed as a Dealer Account Administrator at MicroSPARC, Inc. in Concord.

The wedding is planned for November.

Rosenthal, Doherty marry

The Great Hall of Newton Country Day School, Newton, Mass., was the setting Aug. 31 of the wedding of Leslie Ayn Rosenthal, daughter of Mr. Sidney Rosenthal of Newton and Mrs. Gertrude Fraser of Ottowa, Canada, to Brian Michael Doherty, son of Mr. and Mr. James Russell Doherty of Arlington, Mass., formerly of Bedford. The Rev. John P. Boles, chaplain of Harvard University, officiated at the ceremony, assisted by the father of the bride and the father of the groom. Sisters of the bride were attendants, Susan Rosenthal Hardy and Pamela Rosenthal. Christopher Peter Doherty was the best man and James Russell Doherty, Jr. was an usher, both brothers of the groom.

The bride, a registered occupational therapist with the Home Health Care Agency in Anchorage, Alaska, was graduated with honors from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and received her Master's Degree in Occupational Therapy from Tufts University.

Mr. Doherty, a graduate of Saint Sebastian's Country Day School in Newton, was graduated with honors from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst after studying in England at Trinity College, Oxford University. He received his Juris Doctor degree from Northeastern University Law School in Boston and worked as law clerk for the Honorable Mark C. Rowland of the Anchorage Alaska Superior Court. He is presently practicing law as a member of the Alaska Public Defender Agency in Anchorage.

The father of the bride is retired from the Air Force Geophysics Laboratory in Bedford. The groom's father was president of the James R. Doherty Real Estate Company in Bedford from which he is retired.

Joseph and Josephine Defina

Definas mark 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Defina, formerly of Waltham and now residing in Wareham, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. The couple were married at the Sacred Heart Church in Waltham on Sept. 2, 1935.

Over 100 friends and relatives attended a surprise dinner party held on August 11 at the Village Club in Needham. The party was hosted by their five daughters: Elaine Holland of North Chelmsford; Geraldine Skillin of Newton; Lorraine Defina of Newton; Josephine FitzGerald of Billerica and Sarina Papetti of Needham.

Members of the bridal party in attendance were Mary Picone, maid of honor; bridesmaids Connie Ferla, Katherine Cincotta, Katherine Tortola, Angie Pompie, Jenny Russo and Teresa Cannistaro on behalf of her late sister, and bridesmaid Sarina Santamaria. Louise Cannistaro was at the head table on behalf of her late husband and best man Vincent Cannistaro.

Special guest of honor was the bride's mother, Mrs. Angelo Mobilia of Waltham, who celebrated her own 75th wedding anniversary less than a year ago.

Out of town guests included Mrs. Patricia Mobilia and son Robert of California and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rispoli and Helen Defina of Brooklyn.

Mr. Defina is a retired landscape contractor. He and his wife will retire to Florida this fall.

In addition to their five daughters, the couple have five grandchildren — Christine, Deana, Kathleen, Jean and Scott.

Marjorie A. Spector plans to wed Kenneth I. Goldberg of Waban

Marjorie A. Spector, daughter of Samuel and Dorothy Spector of Marblehead, is engaged to Kenneth I. Goldberg, son of Howard and Audrey Goldberg of Waban.

Miss Spector graduated from Westbrook College in 1984. She is employed by Aurthur D. Little, Inc.

Mr. Goldberg graduated from Newton South High School in 1976 and received a BBA and MBA at the College of William and Mary in Virginia. He is employed by Calico Corners, Inc., in Woburn.

An April wedding is planned.

Births for Newton families

A daughter, Lauren, was born Aug. 20 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital to Stephen A. and Deborah A. (St. Cyr) Caggiano of Newton.

A son, Brad, was born Aug. 22 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital to Nicholas and Leigh (Roche) Butera of Auburndale.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hartin, Jr. (Diane DiCicco) of 271 North Main St., Natick, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, Melissa Ann, on Aug. 28 at Newton-Wellesley Hospital in Newton.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis DiCicco of Newton Upper Falls and paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hartin of Brighton.

Nurses Quit Smoking in One Visit

Pat Ganly, left, registered nurse at the Waltham Hospital and Janice Guerriero, right, a registered nurse in Boston both quit smoking at Michelle Dyan studio on Route 1 in Norwood.

As nurses both Pat and Janice realized the importance of not smoking and quit after only one visit using the amazing new technique developed by Michelle Dyan of Braintree.

"Since we opened our business in Norwood, this past June, we are so pleased with the exceptance by people who have used our system," said Judy Walch, owner of the Norwood Studio. WEIGHT LOSS Program Also Available. Presently in the Norwood Studio 138 smokers have used the Audio Conscious Hypnosis method and 112 have quit. There have been 114 weight clients with only three having difficulty in achieving their goals.

Other programs offered through Michelle Dyan Studio are: stress management, insomnia, nail biting, hair twirling, memory retention, sales motivation, and sports concentration.

New Rep Project in good standing with 'Bus Stop'

By Candy Kosow
Correspondent

The New Repertory Project has kicked off their 1985-86 season with a fine production of William Inge's "Bus Stop." It is often hard to view a production of this nature that is so identified with the movie version of the same name, starring the incomparable Marilyn Monroe, but the Project has done well by this classic.

The story centers on a stormy night in an out-of-the-way town near Kansas City. The streets have been closed because of the bad weather, so the travelers in a bus are forced to spend the night in a mid-west diner. We learn the reasons these people are on the bus, and we discover how human nature often allows people of totally different backgrounds to gravitate towards each other even if it is just for a short time.

The most engaging of these relationships takes place between a bright high schooler, working in the diner and a former college professor, who is aimlessly travelling on the bus. His British accent and his grandiose demeanor captivate the imagination and spirit of this shy and inquisitive young lady. They recite Shakespeare together and he regails her with tales about his adventures. He, too, seems genuinely taken with the girl, and when he has his chance to see her alone, he reneges, displaying that even the most unsavory of characters can offer us optimistic insights into human nature. Their interaction is charming, in large part, thanks to director Larry Lane, and performers Lynn Oprie and Jay Davis.

Flashes of comedy come in the form of a lose relationship between the bus driver and the owner of the diner. This is the first time the two have been able to spend more than a 20-minute stop-over together, and they make the most of the situation. Nancy Doyle is glib and sassy as Grace. You just know that after this night, Carl the bus driver will find any excuse he can to drive through this town in the future. Ms. Doyle had such a non-chalant attitude towards her role, that her character came across as being totally believable. She was so good that I would have like to have seen her in the lead role.

Cherie, a singer from Chicago, is making the trip west with a cowboy named Bo, who wants to marry her. But Cherie can't make up her mind if she wants to marry Bo, or abandon him. Kathryn Lubar's protrayal of Cherie is horribly over-acted. Lubar is a good actress but every time I see her in a production, she is terribly miscast. "Bus Stop" is no exception. Lane may see Lubar as a 19-year-old ingenue, but realistically, Lubars' abilities should be cultivated for character parts and comedies. This production would have fared better if Doyle had played Cherie and Lubar had played the owner of the diner.

The cast is rounded out by Ed Peed as Bo's friend, Virgil and Hugh D'Autremont as Will, the town sheriff.

Director Lane presents strong first and third acts, but the second act drags, mainly because of a tedious talent show segment.

As always, Richard Fairbanks has done a wonderful job creating the set, which is dreary, yet realistic and homey.

The project deserves a lot of credit for tackling such a variety of different and difficult plays through the years. They will be producing three more plays this season.

The New Rep is housed at the Newton Arts Center on Washington Park.

A finely-tuned chorus marks 10th year

By Lauren McFalls
Assistant News Editor

Although the Newton Choral Society started out 10 years ago as "a grassroots sort of thing," now it has "taken off" and grown in size and wealth, encompassing 80 members who perform three major concerts a year, says Leni Bloomenthal, a chorus member since its inception.

The chorus was founded in 1978/79 by "well-schooled musician" Marjorie Toledo because "although Newton had a fine symphony, professionally- and culturally-oriented Newton also needed a fine chorus," says Bloomenthal.

However, the group got off to a rough start. During its first years, it had several different conductors, and funding was always a major problem, according to Bloomenthal.

In fact, the group had to resort to bake sales, which involved "pushing toll house cookies 'till they were coming out of our ears.

"That is how desperate we were in the early years," she says, adding, however, that they "never went so far as to give blood."

Now the chorus receives $6,000 yearly from the Fund for the Arts in Newton, an umbrella organization for Newton-based art groups.

In addition, the chorus is given a $3,000 grant from the Massachusetts Council on Arts and Humanities, says Bloomenthal.

Although the grants contribute financial backing, David Carrier, who has conducted the group since 1979, has been a major contributor to the chorus's success.

According to Bloomenthal, Carriers' arrival marked the point at which the chorus "really began to take off."

In recent years the group has doubled in size, with a majority of Newton residents serving as members, she says.

Carrier, who has earned masters degrees from the New England Conservatory in organ performance and choral conducting, "makes an effort to choose more music that is less-performed by other choruses," notes Bloomenthal.

"We've done things nobody's heard," she states.

This year, all three concert events will be held at the Second Church, 60 Highland St., West Newton. The chorus will perform Bach Magnificat and his Mass in A on Nov. 24 at 4 p.m. On March 16, the group will sing a Haydn program, and on May 11, Faure Requiem will be featured.

The Newton Choral Society performs during a recent concert.

'Wishcraft' stirs up success

NEWTON — Nationally famous author and career counselor, Barbara Sher, will visit Newton on Oct. 3 to lead one of her popular seminars on achieving success. Called "Wishcraft," also the title of a book by Sher and co-author A. Gottlieb, her program was reviewed in newspapers and magazines across the country. The Oct. 3 seminar, sponsored by Women of Boston, a network for professionals, will be held at the Marriott in Newton from 7:30 to 11 a.m. The cost is $60, which includes breakfast, and reservations must be made by Sept. 25 by calling 332-8848.

Many of the success stories inspired by Barbara Sher's "Wishcraft" program read like fairy tales come true. There is the former waitress who became a pilot, the one-time secretary who opened her own publishing house, and the grandmother who loved show biz and, so, got her own radio show.

While not all Wishcraft participants achieve dramatic career transformations like those described above, all are taught the skills necessary to uncover ambitious and fulfilling goals and to make day-by-day plans to attain those goals. Most important, participants are instructed in how to set up success teams, groups of strivers who meet regularly for mutual support.

Meeting regularly for mutual support comes naturally to Women of Boston, the seminar sponsor. Founded in 1978, it consists of three separate groups, each of which assembles monthly at locations north or west of Boston. Meetings feature guest speakers, include luncheon or dinner, and provide ample time for networking.

A mall salute to Renoir

NEWTON — The magnificence of Renoir, one of the most popular of all the French impressionists, will be celebrated at the Mall at Chestnut Hill from September through mid-October, as the shopping center salutes the Museum of Fine Arts and its upcoming Renoir spectacular.

Renoir exhibition posters will adorn the mall's interiors. The famed indoor gardens will be planted with flowers of the artist's beloved vermillion red, Mediterranean blue, and golden yellows. The gardens are set against a background of lush greenery, vibrantly recreating the imagery which Renoir immortalized through his landscape and still lifes.

The festive spirit of the "happy painter" will also be evoked by a vendor dressed in French period costume of the 1850's. She will stroll through the Mall, bearing museum posters and fragrant nosegays.

These typically Gallic bouquets were first used by women travelling in open coaches to protect their delicate noses from street smells. The mall's nosegays, containing dried flowers and sweet herbs, are similar to the floral elements so often depicted in Renoir's pictures.

Attempting to copy Renoir masterpieces, four local artists at work in the mall will give patrons the opportunity to observe paintings in progress.

Stores in the mall will contribute to the promotion via window displays, which celebrate Renoir themes. The museum's exhibition–the only American showing following immensely popular viewings in London and Paris–will be on view from Oct. 9 through Jan. 5, 1986. Advance ticket sales for the exhibit are already booming. It is expected that the show will be one of the most popular in the museum's history. Nearly 100 canvas trace Renoir's career from impressionist still lifes and landscapes to the more classical themes which follow later in this great master's productive life.

The Mall at Chestnut Hill is located on Route 9 in Chestnut Hill, at the junction of Hammond Pond Parkway.

REAL ESTATE INDEX
NEEDHAM

The Real Estate Index can be used to estimate the current Market Value of your home. Multiply your Property Assessment by the Index Factor. (Needham - September 1985 Index: 170% ± 15%)

Example	Assessment	X	Index	=	Market Value
	$120,000	X	170%	=	$204,000 + $18,000

The range of values (± 15%) reflects differences in location, condition of property and other qualitative factors. Evaluate your home accordingly.

The Real Estate Index is calculated by charting actual real estate transactions, over time, and by analyzing current properties for sale. (See chart)

Thinking about going back to work?

Consider "Back to Work":
A re-entry program for Secretaries

Brigham and Women's Hospital and the Brookline Adult and Community Education Program offer a unique opportunity to brush up on rusty office skills, learn new ones, and put them all to use in an exciting medical teaching environment—Brigham and Women's Hospital.

"Back to Work", a 10-week Scholarship Program (with tuition fully paid by Brigham and Women's Hospital) is designed for people who would like to return to work but don't think their present level of skills will qualify them for challenging positions in today's business world.

For more information: Call Barbara Simkowski at 734-1111, Ext. 234.

Call soon—space is limited.

Classes begin OCTOBER 7!

This program is consistent with equal opportunity and affirmative action requirements, and is open to qualified candidates in all communities. E

Renaissance in the Arts

By Lauren McFalls, Assistant News Editor

Over the past decade, and especially within the past two or three years, Newton has been experiencing a renaissance in the arts.

According to their respective arts organization directors, the number of students who take courses at the Newton Arts Center has swelled from a mere 70 seven years ago to 500 today. During the same period, the student population at the All Newton Music School — which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year — has tripled in size. And the Newton Parks and Recreation Department's Arts-in-the-Parks program has grown from 5,000 to an estimated 22,000 participating in sponsored events and programs.

Yet another successful Newton arts organization is the Newton Symphony Orchestra, which according to NSO President Constance Kantar, is considered "one of the most outstanding orchestras in New England." Celebrating its 20th anniversary this season, the symphony has attracted Seiji Ozawa, conductor for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will guest conduct the Newton orchestra in January.

Ozawa, who lives in Newton, "just wouldn't go to any old orchestra," comments Kantar.

Further, the NSO has already come close to selling out of subscriptions for this season's concerts even though the performances have been moved to a much larger hall at Aquinas Junior College, says Kantar. In addition, she says, the number of auditions for opening positions this year on the orchestra have doubled last years numbers even though the number of available positions has remained the same.

This "sense of general growth" in the arts was also evident last year when the Massachusetts Council on Arts and the Humanities chose the Newton Arts Center as one of four galleries in the state to exhibit the winning entries of their annual art contest.

The Arts Center "has gone from being very local to something now recognized in Massachusetts," says Jo Simon, the Center's director.

And the list of Newton art organization success stories goes on.

In 1984, the New England Regional Council of National Parks and Recreation Association awarded Newton's Arts in the Parks with the distinction of "Best Arts Program in a New England recreation department," says Linda Plaut, director of Arts in the Parks.

Says Plaut, "It's unusual for a recreation department to house such an expansive arts program."

Library plan gains ground

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — It was almost too easy.

Let the record show that the final committee debate over a proposed $250,000 appropriation to begin designing a new main library at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets took approximately 20 minutes.

After decades of concern, years of study and one referendum, the aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night put the most controversial issue in the city's history into the Board of Aldermen's collective hands by a quiet 4-0 vote.

The full board will consider Mayor Theodore D. Mann's funding request at its Oct. 7 session.

FinCom's brief discussion climaxed five days of meetings that saw nine aldermen go on record in support of the spending item, which is designed to produce architectural renderings, floor plans and preliminary site plans for the proposed 76,600 square foot, three-story facility.

Alderman Wendell R. Bauckman, who wants a new library but not on the four-acre Homer/Walnut site, abstained from the final vote in FinCom, remaining consistent with the position he took last week.

The Public Facilities and Human Services committees have already recommended approval of the mayor's request.

Assuming all 24 of the city's aldermen are in attendance on Oct. 7, the $250,000 appropriation from the surplus property account will need 13 votes for passage.

At the same board meeting, a proposed resolution seeking the full board's support of the Homer/Walnut site will be up for debate. Passage of the resolution would also require a simple majority vote.

Chief Administrative Assistant Richard Kelliher began the FinCom meeting by explaining how the mayor arrived at the $250,000 figure needed to begin designing the structure.

He called the $12 million price tag for a new library facility "our best estimate of the upper limit" and said the preliminary design phase will generate "much more specific figures."

NEWTON — It is a time to remember and a time to forgive. It is a time for ritual and a time for action. It is Yom Kippur — a celebration that goes back to the time of ancient Jeruselem.

Translated literally as meaning "Day of Atonement," the holiest of Jewish holidays has not changed spiritually over the long and often meandering course of Jewish history. It was then, and still is now, a time for men and women to take account of and act on what transpired the previous year. It is a time to recall that which was bad and change that which one can.

Church addresses sexism

By John Moroney, Staff Writer

NEWTON CORNER — A group of about 350 Catholic women — meeting at Aquinas Junior College last week — urged a Bishop's Drafting Committee to reconsider the focus of their upcoming Pastoral Letter on Women in Society and the Church.

"With this pastoral letter," Dr. Alice Blake Stalker said. "The church is telling women that they're the problem ... when the actually problem is sexism."

The group's recommendation came during the second of four "listening sessions" being sponsored by the Boston Archdiocese. These sessions are designed to give women an opportunity to address the sensitive issue before six bishops draft the final letter.

Most of the comments following the session reflected poorly on the church's ability to address the role of its women.

"The Catholic Church is responsible for all the sexism throughout the ages," Josephine K. Lombardo said.

'If we're good enough to be mothers, we're good enough to be priests.'

Ann O'Callaghan

"We're not even allowed to light the candles of the altar because we wear skirts. All we want is for women to be recognized as individuals in the eyes of the church," Ann O'Callaghan of Medfield said.

"Almost every women who still is the Roman Catholic Church is angry — both young and old," Stalker said.

By associating the pastoral letter with women, Stalker continued, the church is comparing their role to the subject matter of previous pastoral letters which dealt with problems such as war and peace, and economics.

Building ban on ballot

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — After more than a year of debate, supporters of a city-wide moratorium on construction apparently have cleared the final legislative hurdle in their effort to get a non-binding question on the November ballot.

In a somewhat surprising move, the Board of Aldermen last week voted 17 to 5 — on first call — to allow the question to appear on the ballot. Because of previously prolonged debates on the issue, some supporters expected more discussion during the meeting.

"I didn't think (the question) would go through that easy," moratorium supporter Jim Hennelly of Maple Avenue said. "We are very relieved."

The question now goes to Mayor Theodore D. Mann for his approval. According to City Clerk Edward English, Mann has 10 days from the time he receives the official board order to act on the matter.

"The mayor can't act on the bill for at least 24 hours and up to 96 hours," English said. "That is the time I have to present it to him. After that, he has 10 days to sign it, veto it, or let it pass without his signature."

Thomas Paulini, who led lobbying efforts to get the question on the ballot, said his next step would be getting the mayor's approval.

"This is a big step," Paulini said of the full board's vote. "Now it goes across the street to the mayor's office. This is where I want to be, because it will be his head in the chopping block now."

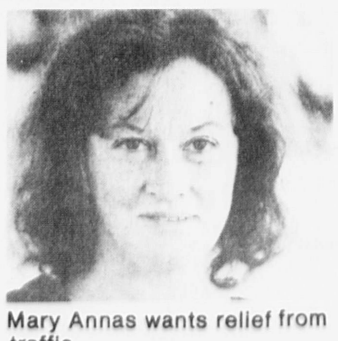

Paulini said he was not surprised by the margin of victory.

"Remember," Paulini said, "this was not a vote on the moratorium, it was just a vote to let the people have the right to choose. If the board had voted against it, it would have been like South Africa because the people in South Africa don't have the right to make their own decisions."

Paulini added he "has no idea what the mayor will do, I just hope he acts quickly."

Mann said it was too early for him to make a decision on the issue, bringing up the possiblity that the motion can still be stalled by parlimentary manuevers. A deadline has been set by Election Commission Executive Secretary Alan Licarie to get the November ballots pro-

Residents favor ban

By Howard Altman, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The question of whether or not there should be a city-wide moratorium on commercial construction has kicked around city government for more than a year. Last week, the Board of Aldermen voted to include a non-binding referendum question about the issue on the November ballot.

Mayor Theodore Mann, who will make the final decision on the ballot question, has in the past questioned how many people in the city would be interested in a moratorium.

Thomas Paulini, who is leading the push for a short-term ban on new commercial construction, says a large number of Newton residents would like to see that happen.

Last week, The Newton Graphic conducted an informal survey in Newton Centre, Newton Corner and West Newton Square. Though by no means a scientific sampling, the survey results seem to indicate Newtonites favor imposing some limitations on construction until zoning laws are revised.

Out of 15 persons responding to the question, nine said they were in favor of a moratorium.

Q: Do you think there should be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

Hotel/motel tax goes to full board

By Edward Cafasso, Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night threw its support behind the imposition of an excise tax on the city's four hotels, sending the issue to the Board of Aldermen for consideration on Oct. 7.

FinCom voted 4-1 in favor of implementing the highest allowable surcharge — 4 percent, which officials estimate will bring the city more than $70,000 a month in new revenue.

A local version of the two-month-old law would become effective on Nov. 1 if the full board approves, making the Garden City the third community in the state to take maximum advantage of the new funding source.

Boston was the first to enact the 4-percent tax on rooms to help avoid a projected budget shortfall and the Waltham City Council unanimously passed a similar measure Monday night.

Lawmakers in Haverhill and Marlborough have adopted less strigent versions, while those in Natick, Cambridge and Andover are considering adding their communities to the roster.

For the short term, the city intends to use the new revenue to help pay for the construction of a main library. Over the long run, the money will help offset the scheduled elimination of federal revenue sharing.

Local business leaders and officials from the Holiday Inn on Grove Street and the Marriot Hotel on Commonwealth Avenue opposed the idea, arguing the new surcharge, compounded on an existing 5.7 percent state tax, would put their businesses at a competitive disadvantage with hotels in area communities without the measure.

The excise tax will increase the price of one night's stay in a Garden City hotel anywhere from $1.59 to $4.80, according to city officials.

However, a majority of FinCom felt confident the major cities in and around the Route 128 belt would move to impose the new tax soon to help ease the fiscal constraints of Proposition 2½.

Alderman Wendell Bauckman, who favored phasing in the tax first at 2 percent, represented the lone vote against the item.

Mike Shulman, public relations director for the Marriot, offered only a mild objection to a hotel/motel excise tax here.

"The Newton Marriot Hotel, like any community citizen, is opposed to all tax increases. We are opposed to the increase in the room tax because it will impact our guest room business to some degree. However, since we are vitally interested in supporting the city, we find it most difficult to actively oppose this tax," he said.

Recognizing the financial windfall to the city, Shulman added, "If this tax is enacted, it will mean that the community/hotel relationship will be even more meaningful and that there will be even better understanding and cooperation."

Jan Marshall, sales manager for the Holiday Inn, said she expects the move to cause "a great deal of occupancy change" to the benefit of hotels in cities without the new surcharge.

"For $2 less a night, people will commute farther," she said, adding that room prices are playing an increasingly important role in where both pleasure and business travellers take their business.

Officials from the Howard Johnsons in Gateway Center and the Susse Chalet on Route 9 did not attend the meeting.

Lewis B. Songer, executive vice president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, asked FinCom to hold the item for further consideration, calling it "a very attractive thing to do, but highly questionable."

Noting that the tax was created to "assist Boston in building and maintaining international convention facilities," Songer said, "Simply because a tax is allowed does not necessarily make it appropriate."

"Many visitors to the city already complain to the Chamber about the high cost of food and lodging because of existing taxes. Another tax on a tax simply magnifies those costs," he said.

Songer also raised the issue of the city's record surplus and relatively secure financial position, saying that, if the city is imposing a new tax under those circumstances, businessmen can only wonder what will happen when the good times end.

Joseph Alexander, director of the Newton Taxpayers Association, called the idea "discriminatory and unfair" and expressed his opposition by recalling the rallying cry of the American Revolution — "No taxation without representation."

He said the new tax will be imposed on nonresidents who have no voice in the matter and warned they will "vote with their dollars by staying away."

The possibility of a successful legal challenge overturning the new law could leave the city "holding the bag," Alexander added.

Asked what effect the tax might have on the value of hotel properties, Assessing Board Chairman Robert Palmer said a significant decline in hotel revenues could cause a decline in the hotel's assessed value, meaning less property tax revenue for the city.

In a memo responding to questions raised by FinCom at a previous session, City Solicitor Dan Funk said the city has no protection against any move by the state to rescind the hotel/motel law.

Funk also said the city could revoke the tax three years after the date it becomes effective.

THE CARTIER SANTOS

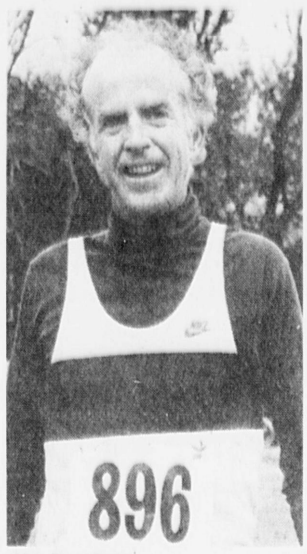

The house of Cartier, founded in 1847, has sold jewels and watches to kings and czars. Its most famous items, however, have been its wristwatches. As the now legendary story goes, in the early 1900's, Brazilian aviator Alberto Santo-Dumont happened to say to his friend Louis Cartier, "it isn't easy to pull one's watch from one's waistcoat pocket while holding the controls of a dirigible." From this chance remark, history was made. In 1904, Cartier created the first modern wristwatch and named it for the aviator. If older wristwatches were thick and heavy, with emphasis on the weighted jeweled bracelet, the Santos was the exact opposite. The watch was slender and lightweight. Its leather strap was a statement of modesty. Its focus was on the watch as a timekeeper.
Watches come in many shapes and styles. You can wear them on your wrist, your finger, around your neck and even in your pocket. The most important feature is how well it keeps time. Running races on a Daley basis

By Kevin C. Kennedy
News Editor

Ald. Paul Daley

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — While his colleagues on the Board of Aldermen are concerning themselves with the race that will end with the November 5 citywide election, Upper Falls Alderman-at-Large Paul K. Daley has some other races on his mind.

Daley, who has spent most his waking life running since a mild heart attack put him on the sidewalk several years ago, is getting himself ready for his third Ironman competition. He'll fly to Hawaii in late October to compete in the best known of all the triathalon endurance competitions.

Triathalons, designed to push competitors to the end of their endurance and beyond, consist of a long swim, a very long bike ride and, to finish it all off, a marathon run. Daley has run the Ironman competition in the past and suffered through a host of unplanned for setbacks. He tore a muscle once. Another time, jagged lava rock on the road ate up his bike's tires.

This year, he has been competing in a series of triathalons in order to get ready for the big one in Hawaii. Last weekend, he boosted himself to the rank of fifth in the national "Masters" class with an unexpectedly good showing in the American National Championship Endurance Trathalon, held at the Cape.

Daley was still surprised at his showing when he talked of it later in the week. "I wound up doing it in 11 hours and 58 minutes ... over an hour less than I had planned. I can honestly say I didn't work very hard at it, because I had to get up at 5 a.m. the next day to walk 18 holes in the Cosgrove Memorial (Golf Tournament)," he said.

The race on the Cape began at 7 a.m. on Sunday morning as 297 contestants from all over the country entered the water at Craigville Beach for a 2.4 mile rough ocean swim. It was very foggy, according to Daley, and the water was "laden with jellyfish."

When he found himself back on the beach ten minutes earlier than planned, Daley said he began to relax. For the first half of the five hour and four minute bike ride that followed, he hooked up with a total stranger, Jay Petucci, 22, of Needham. "We shared some figs and some peanut butter sandwiches and water and just cruised along at 18 or 19 miles per hour," he said, adding that he set off on his own after the turnaround point at Provincetown.

Daley felt so confident after the bike race, he even stopped to take a shower before he began the marathon leg. "Everyone said, 'You're flying!'" he said.

The master marathoner attributed much of his newly acquired bicycling prowess to his "Mystery Lotus," a highly specialized racing machine concocted for him by a "master technician" named Joe at International Cycles in Newton Centre. The bike itself has been overhauled and soft rubber tires have been added that look like they were made from gum erasers.

But Daley's own biking regimen suggests he could go the 100 miles in a wheelbarrow. His regular training runs on the "Mystery Lotus" take him to Woonsocket, Rhode Island, and back. "It's a scenic, comfortable ride on the bike," he commented.

Daley added that, because he was "tied up," he was not afforded the usual luxury of running to the race on the Cape, something he does regularly. He usually runs down to the annual Falmouth Road Race, runs the race, then runs back to his Cottage Street home.

Asked if his asphalt athletics are cutting into his campaigning at all, Daley responded that he had already covered most of the wards in the city and that he will be hurrying back from Hawaii to cover the rest. "I'll be back on the 30th to campaign," he said, stressing that "door-to-door" canvassing is still his main method.

"Knockin', walkin' and talkin' — the old fashioned way — that's the way I meet the people," he said. "Give them some skin and let tham know what you're all about."

Local builder alleged in bribe

A Boston public works employee was indicted for allegedly bribing a Boston official to push through a building permit application for a Newton construction firm.

Robert Colantonio of East Boston is accused of paying $300 in cash on March 26 to Paul Folkins to secure a building permit for Wexler Construction Company. Folkins, a city engineer, has been cooperating with federal agents in the probe.

Colantonio was also charged with two counts of perjury in a three-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury probing Boston's Inspectional Services Dept.

Wexler Construction Company was overseeing $294,000 worth of renovations at 53 State St. but the project had been halted because the necessary permits were lacking according to Asst. U.S. Attorney Robert Cordy.

Colantonio is also charged with twice lying to a grand jury on July 18 when he allegedly denied receiving money from contractors and passing it along to city employees. He was scheduled to be arraigned today.

SAT scores 34 points over U.S. average

NEWTON — The city's senior class this year averaged 34 points higher on their Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SATs) than the rest of the national senior class, Assistant Superintendent for Planning and Operations Vincent Silluzio told the School Committee Monday night.

"We should always expect Newton to be above the national average," School Committee member Nancy Mann said.

As compared to last year's class, this year's class — on the average — scored 18 points higher on the verbal section and 22 points higher on the mathematical section.

"This is very good," Superintendent John M. Strand said. "Although, we're not very sure how or why it happens." One of the reasons, he speculated, might be the increased awareness by administration and faculty as to the importance of these tests for college-bound seniors. If that is the case, according to Strand, faculty members "deserve a major portion of the credit," the superintendent said.

Comparing the scores of both high schools in the city, Silluzio said North witnessed the biggest jump in SAT scores when the verbal section jumped 20 points. The increase in the mathematical section was even greater — going from 500 to 526.

At South, verbal scores jumped from 464 to 476 while mathematics scores increased from 522 to 534 — an increase of 12 points in both cases.

Looking at both sections of the test nationally, Garden City seniors scored 465 in the verbal section as compared to the average across the country of 431. In the mathematical portion of the test, seniors at North and South scored a whopping 530 while their national counterparts finished with a score of 475.

Aldermen hold up 'pooper scooper' bill

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen last week held a motion to adopt a "pooper scooper" ordinance requiring dog owners to clean up after their animals the Police Department "expressed serious reservations" about being able to enforce the ordinance.

Chairman Elaine Gentile added there should be another public hearing, "because only one person showed up" at the last meeting of the Public Safety Committee, where the issue was discussed.

Citing leash laws and similar ordinances in Boston and Cambridge, Alderman Rodney Barker said the police would be responsible for enforcing the "pooper scooper" ordinance.

Barker, who introduced the measure, said he was "disappointed" it was held and took issue with the Police Department's involvement in the decision.

"It's too bad about the police," Barker said. "The police don't dictate policy in the city. If we wish to do something, we do it. We don't take our orders from the police. We're here to pass an ordinance."

The public hearing will take place Oct. 29 at City Hall.

Special squad gets protection from flak

NEWTON — The Newton Police Department's Civil Disorder Unit (CDU) will have new "flak jackets" if Chief William Quinn gets his way.

Quinn Monday night won unanimous approval from the aldermanic Public Safety & Transportation and Finance committees for an allocation of $6,750 from surplus to buy 15 "Command Jac" assault vests.

Citing incidents of violence and threats against police officers, Quinn argued the vests were necessary for the unit to carry out its duties.

"Last winter, a deaf-mute with a gun threatened his own life and the lives of the officers responding," Quinn said. "The Brookline Police Department had a problem when Meir Kahane came to that town. Earlier this year, a Boston police officer almost lost his hands and his head when a bomb exploded. This is the time and place to talk about getting this equipment for my department."

"We owe it to the men," he added.

The requested vests, Quinn said, would be an improvement over body armor currently used by the department.

Auburndale Yard sold, plans completed

AUBURNDALE — The city has sold the former Auburndale Public Works Yard to a Dedham developer who will build 20 single-family homes and 30 units of subsidized elderly housing on the site.

The city reached agreement last week with S. Robert Wolf, principal in the Wolf Corporation on Providence Highway, to develop the 7.2 acre Auburndale Avenue parcel declared surplus slightly more than three years ago.

Wolf, acting on behalf of "Auburndale Development Associates (ADA)," has also agreed to remove two "hotspots" of soil contaminated by leaking fuel tanks left underground by the city when the yard was abandoned.

The purchase price for the entire site was set at $750,000, only $15,000 more than the minimum price set by the Board of Aldermen in 1983.

The city will also receive a $5,000 donation to the elderly transporation fund once the elderly housing is fully occupied.

Two of the homes, with at least three bedrooms each, will be designated for low-to-moderate income use and will be deeded to the city under the "10 percent ordinance."

Planning Department estimates show the 20 homes will generate a population of approximately 60 people, of whom 23 will be school-age children.

Drowning death suit coming to court

NEWTON — The case of a Newtonville man suing the city and the state for $100,000 on behalf of his son, who drowned in 1978 while on swimming trip sponsored by the Recreation Department, will come to trial on Dec. 16 in Middlesex Superior Court.

Gabriel Lightman, of 117 Norwood Ave., is claiming the city and the state were negligent in the death of his 35-year-old son, Kenneth, a man with special needs who drowned seven years ago last month at Lake Cochituate in Natick.

In a unique move considered crucial to the city's defense, Assistant City Solicitor G. Michael Peirce will travel to Los Angeles on the weekend of Oct. 20 to take a deposition from the key witness in the case.

The aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night approved a $1,200 appropriation from surplus to pay for the trip, which Peirce described as the first time a city lawyer has had to travel out of state to build a case.

Nurses Quit Smoking in One Visit

Pat Ganly, left, registered nurse at the Waltham Hospital and Janice Guerniero, right, a registered nurse in Boston both quit smoking at Michelle Dyan studio on Route 1 in Norwood.

As nurses both Pat and Janice realized the importance of not smoking and quit after only one visit using the amazing new technique developed by Michelle Dyan of Braintree.

Since we opened our business in Norwood, this past June, we are so pleased with the exceptance by people who have used our system," said Judy Walch, owner of the Norwood Studio. WEIGHT LOSS Program Also Available. Presently in the Norwood Studio 138 smokers have used the Audio Conscious Hypnosis method and 112 have quit. There have been 114 weight clients with only three having difficulty in achieving thier goals.

Other programs offered through Michelle Dyan Studio are: stress management, insomnia, nail biting, hair twirling, memory retention, sales motivation, and sports concentration.

AIDS victims still have rights

It is difficult to imagine a sadder situation than a child infected by Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS). This killer, for which there is no known cure, has infected scores of young victims, many of them already suffering from hemophilia or another condition requiring blood transfusions, a common source of AIDS infection.

These children need no added burdens, yet they have now become the victims of irrational fear. That fear has led to great pressures to prevent AIDS-infected children from attending school, depriving them of social contacts and friendship which they desparately need. There is no reason to stigmatize young AIDS victims. By all the available evidence, they are not dangerous to others except under unusual circumstances.

Last month, a federal judge in Indiana upheld the right of a local school board to keep a child afflicted with AIDS from attending classes. More recently, in New York City, 12,000 children were kept home from schools by parents who were protesting the Board of Education's decision to let a young AIDS victim go to school.

Closer to home, the case of an infected child in Swansea has attracted wide attention. Massachusetts policy permits attendance by many AIDS victims. We believe it is a wise policy. Research has consistently showed that only direct sexual contact, or blood-to-blood contact, can spread AIDS. That is not occuring in our schools. Despite the facts, many Swansea parents panicked, and it took assertive leadership by school and health officials to defuse emotions.

The public meeting held in Swansea did not satisfy everyone. Doctors and researchers cannot provide guarantees about AIDS, or about any other health threat. Parents' impulse to protectionism is natural, but they should also take time to listen to the facts. After the Swansea meeting, one parent commented, "A lot of us had so much misinformation. The doctors alleviated most of our fears."

Clearly, AIDS research must proceed at maximum speed. Meanwhile, education of the public is the only effective route to humane treatment of AIDS children. And local school boards must take the initative to educate themselves, not wait passively and hope their town is fortunate enough to avoid the problem. These children are victims of a terrible disease, but they need not be victims of fear, ignorance and discrimination.

Constant quest for surplus

Long, long ago in a kingdom far, far away (or maybe closer than you think) lived a king who ruled over the Kingdom of Garden City.

As you enter the kingdom you face the Town Castle where you can usually find the king.

Today the king is in his Royal Money Room: "Surplus, Surplus! Bring me more surplus."

"Did you call sire?"

"You see all this money, fool. This is surplus and I love surplus."

"Begging your pardon, sire, what is surplus?"

"It's money, fool. Lots and lots of extra money that we saved the past couple of years, the taxpayers money."

"Well, sire, why not give the money back to the already overburdened taxpayer?"

"No wonder they call you fool. OFF WITH HIS HEAD!!! Imagine, asking me to give back surplus. I need the surplus. Who knows, it might snow every day of winter and we would need the surplus to pay for plowing, all eight million dollars of it.

'Besides, I love looking at this surplus. It provides security for almost any contingency.

But I need more surplus. Who knows what the future has in store.

Summon my royal advisors!"

"You called for us. sire?"

"You are my most trusted advisers and the most knowledgeable people in the kingdom. Tell me how to increase my surplus."

"Well sire, we're already charging high property taxes and we have another revalation coming next year.

"We charge for water, building permits, licenses, ambulances, recreation permits, smoke detector inspections, copying, maps, zone changes, sewers, and a lot more. We're running out of things to charge far."

The recently approved hotel/motel tax has been heralded as another weapon in the war against the dragon, Prop 2½.

"Yes, I know the people have been taxed greatly, but it was all due to Royal Order 2½ passed by the High Priest Council at the Hill of Beacon."

"Agreed sire, but now we have eight million dollars extra. Maybe it's time we reduced some of these charges."

"Never, never!"

"Hold it! I've got it! I've got it!"

"What is it?"

"You know that library that some of the people have been clamoring for. Why not pay for the library out of surplus?"

"Give up my precious surplus, never!!"

"No sire, you don't understand. We devise a new tax to pay for the library and we keep the eight million for now.

But, after the library is paid for, the tax is still in effect and guess where the money goes...into surplus.

That way we keep our surplus, build the library, and add extra money in future years."

"It's brilliant, Sir Conjob, simply brilliant!"

"Thank you sire, I might suggest that we place a tax on lodging houses and inns. They have no choice but to pay it and, besides, they'll just pass it on to the weary travelers from distant lands with whom you need not concern yourself.

The peasants won't care, because it doesn't add anything to their tax burden."

"Ah, Sir Conjob, I am in your debt. Tell me what you want and it is yours."

"I want to be King of the Garden City just like you, sire, and maybe eventually even King of the Commonwealth."

Tax plan to hinder local finances

By Robert Walters

As millions of members of the "baby boom" generation proceed through the process of family formation, public school systems throughout the country are preparing for a massive new surge in enrollment.

Even in more normal times, education claims the largest single share (about 35 percent) of state and local government budgets — and coping with the "baby boomlet" will be even more expensive. In California alone, 110,000 new teachers must be hired by the end of this decade.

President Reagan's plan for drastically revising the federal tax code will make that task even more difficult because of his proposal to eliminate individuals' state and local tax payments as a deduction on their federal income tax forms.

That loss of deductibility almost certainly will increase popular resistance to state and local taxes, thus constraining the ability of the governments that rely upon those levies to maintain an adequate level of public services.

In recent weeks, the president has traveled to Independence, Mo.; Raleigh, N.C.; and Tampa, Fla., to denigrate as "balderdash" the arguments of critics who insist that his proposal will precipitate a fiscal crisis of extraordinary proportions among many state and local governments.

But various analyses of Reagan's plan have projected revenue losses to those governments of $10 billion to $12 billion annually — severely limiting their capability to finance not only education but scores of other functions as well.

Moreover, the president's initiative comes in the wake of his administration's drastic reductions of the federal transfer payments that long have been an important revenue source for state and local governments. During Reagan's first term, those payments were slashed by $59 billion.

Every federal tax statute enacted since the Civil War has preserved the principle that individual income devoted to involuntary payments of state and local taxes should not properly be regarded as income susceptible to federal taxation.

At the same time that Reagan is calling for a radical departure from more than a century of accepted policy affecting individuals' taxes, he is proposing the perpetuation of the credit corporations can claim on their federal tax returns for the levies they pay to foreign governments.

In addition, he has sought to generate popular support for his plan through the cynical tactic of pitting residents of low-tax areas against those who live in high-tax jurisdictions.

It's true that people who live in many of the nation's most populous states and cities pay higher state and local taxes — and thus are eligible for larger federal income tax deductions under the current system.

But that's because those areas have a high concentration of disadvantaged people — the elderly, the impoverished, the unemployed, recent immigrants and those in failing health — most in need of governmental services.

When the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations conducted a 1981 survey of the nation's 85 largest metropolitan areas, it found that per capita spending on essential services (excluding education) was 69 percent higher and taxes were 37 percent higher in the central cities than in the surrounding suburbs.

Thus, Reagan's plan could inspire a new round of middle-class flight from cities to suburbs just when some cities are experiencing a stabilized population for the first time in decades.

Finally, state and local governments everywhere face new responsibilities — improving the quality of public education, cleaning up toxic waste dumps, replacing overcrowded prisons and caring for a growing elderly population. Eliminating the deductibility of state and local taxes would increase voter reluctance to finance those programs at the time when they are needed most.

Keverian's 'Trust me' gets good reaction

By George B. Merry

Whatever faint hopes former House Speaker Thomas W. McGee may have had of wielding the gavel again must be fast fading.

George Keverian, the Everett Democrat who toppled him from the rostrum last January in one of the fiercest leadership battles ever on Beacon Hill, has been earning plaudits for his overall performance thus far. Obviously, the first eight or nine months do not a full term make, but the often wisecracking, Harvard-educated new speaker is proving to be an effective force for change and accord.

While, quite understandably, few McGee loyalists have received choice House committee assignments, Mr. Keverian appears to have banished no one, not even his predecessor, to the legislative dog house. And to their credit, most of those who stuck with the former speaker, even when it was all but certain he did not have the votes to keep this power seat, have refrained from foot-dragging.

Mr. McGee, too, as disappointed as he surely was over losing the gavel he had held for nearly a decade - longer than anyone in Massachusetts history - has graciously accepted his colleagues' decision.

This freedom from obstructionism from within his own party in the House clearly has made it easier for Mr. Keverian to call signals, and his own tune.

For the first time in some two decades the House has what amounts to a work schedule, under which members pretty much know in advance when key matters are coming up for floor action. This is not to suggest that there are not some surprises - indeed there are, much to the displeasure of the Republican opposition - but there has been a marked improvement. This presumably has helped supporters and opponents alike to prepare for debate better.

Things in the Senate, as they have been in years past, move considerably slower. Measures are often brought out with little advance notice, with the exception of certain of the more controversial items to make sure it has the support it needs to prevail.

Although hardly a rubber stamp for the programs and priorities of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, the Keverian House leadership, on the surface at least, has been more responsive than the Senate's to various key gubernatorial proposals.

Among the strengths of the Keverian regime have been some of his new committee chairmen, who, unlike their predecessors, have been able to bring a fresh look to various proposals, such as school reform and the overhaul of the criminal sentencing structure.

In many instances, instead of bumping former chairmen off their committees, the speaker has simply moved them aside. That, if nothing else, has given their successors the advantage of their knowledge and experience.

Unlike former Speaker McGee, who, until the waning months of his leadership resisted most attempts to change House rules, Mr. Keverian, at the outset, proposed and pushed a fairly broad range of amendments, including a few that at least slightly lessened the speaker's control.

The portly speaker, if push comes to shove, has all the clout he needs to run the House the way he thinks it ought to be run. Yet there is little doubt that he prefers to rely on the art of gentle persuasion and his familiar two-word plea for support: "Trust me."

One of the Keverian-sponsored changes restricts to eight years the time he, or any future House presiding officer, can be speaker. It was Mr. McGee's unwillingness to voluntarily relinquish the gavel after 12 years that led to his split with Mr. Keverian and the latter's successful ascendancy to the rostrum.

Perhaps the biggest challenge of the current Keverian term will come next year and will involve legislative redistricting based on the now all-but-complete mid-decade state census.

The speaker will not be doing the job himself, on paper at least, but because of his experience in such activities over the years and the political sensitivity of the project, he seems almost sure to have a finger or two in crafting the final blueprint.

Because of population shifts, there is no way all 159 of his fellow state representatives can retain the districts they now have or gain the new elective turf they might want.

Tough decisions will have to be made - ones that defy both geographical and mathematical decisions. Keeping disappointed, if not embittered, colleagues, especially those in his party, to a minimum could be both a tough and support-threatening challenge for the genial and sometimes voluble speaker.

(George B. Merry covers the Statehouse for The Christian Science Monitor News Service.)

Quotes of note

Just when you thought it was safe to build a library ... Police Chief William F. Quinn nearly brought a gaggle of proponents for the land at the corner of Homer and Walnut streets to their knees recently.

Quinn, whose funding requests always seem to breeze through two aldermanic committees in one night, finished off a recent visit to FinCom with his record intact as aldermen unanimously approved two items worth $16,000 from surplus for bullet-proof vests and accreditation.

"Now all I have to do is get you guys to give me a new building to put all this equipment in," he said.

When the question of where to put the new HQ came up, Quinn's eyes twinkled.

"My site has been at Homer and Walnut for 25 years and the mayor knows that," he said, prompting a minute of sustained laughter from the half-dozen library folks in the room.

They can stop anything but innuendo ... Just before that discussion, Chief Quinn gave aldermen a chance to see the new "flak" jackets he wants for the Civil Disorders Unit.

Alderman Paul Coletti was impressed, but somewhat disappointed.

"I was really hoping that you would try it on and give us a chance to take a shot at you," Coletti joked to the chief.

Quinn, who has been embattled lately because of an IRS probe into the Greater Boston Police Council's only employee (and his former aide) and reports of declining morale among officers, didn't miss a beat in responding.

"Don't you know that they've been doing that anyway lately," he replied, adding, "We all have to be able to laugh once in a while."

Newton Taxpayers Association Director Joe Alexander got a little carried away with 18th-century rhetoric during a recent debate over the proposed hotel/motel excise tax.

Noting that travellers who stay in hotels have no choice but to pay the new surcharge, he conjured up the rallying cry of the American Revolution: "No taxation without representation."

Alexander then outlined the choices disgruntled guests to the Garden City could use to retaliate, one of which was, "They could go into the hotel kitchen and dump the tea in Cheesecake Brook."

Historical references aside, Alderman Louis Irwin sympathized with Alexander's argument.

"I do not feel good about taxing nonresidents, but most people in Newton don't vote anyway," he quipped.

Talk about suicidal tendencies .... Alderman Wendell Bauckman could not be convinced about the necessity of Assessing Board Chairman Robert Palmer's request for $98,000 from surplus to start a state-of-the-art, laser disc photo collection of every property in the city.

"I get the feeling that if we didn't have a good surplus, this would have never come before us. It's a nice thing to have, but it's not necessarily essential," he said.

Coletti countered, "Some people say the same thing about 24 aldermen."

An undaunted Bauckman continued, "The sooner we get rid of that surplus the better off we'll be."

This time, it was Irwin who chimed in.

"Some people say that about the Board of Aldermen too," he said.

Setting the record straight on John Eliot's 'divine mission'

In her article, "John Eliot's 'divine mission," in the Sept. 11 Graphic, Lauren McFalls misinterpreted and misquoted some of our research on the Praying Indians. It must be understood from the outset that all "information" about the 16th and much of the 17th century native American comes from Europeans since the Indians had no written language. Therefore it is difficult to determine with absolute certainty the number of Indians who were here to greet the English; their reaction to the newcomers; or even much of their practical and philosophical view of life.

We know that native tribes were skilled farmers who cleared a wilderness; hunted and fished solely to fulfill their needs; and did not believe in personal ownership of land. From their earliest contact with Europeans, long before the Pilgrims (1620) and the Puritans (1630) it was clear that these strong, healthy native people were fatally susceptible to white man's illnesses. By the time the English came to stay in the 17th century many tribes - including the local Nipmuc and Massachusetts - had been decimated dramatically.

For their part, the Puritans came to escape domination by the established Anglican Church as well as to broaden their social and economic opportunities. Toleration of other religions and philosophies was antithetical to their own stringently held views, however. In fact, Conversion of the Indians was a provision of the Massachusetts Bay Company Charter which the Puritans brought from England. Moreover, the Puritans did not regard the Indians as people, but rather as instruments of God or the devil, either to punish them for their sins or lure them to sin.

The inevitable conflict between these two disparate cultures is the theme of our book. While the English were technologically superior, the Indians were better adapted to nature and achieved a higher level of social harmony. Nonetheless, they were more adroit at warfare. Had the Indians not been drastically diminished by disease it is questionable whether English technology or religion would have prevailed.

At all events, in 1646, John Eliot, the Puritan minister, who settled in Roxbury, not Newton, met the Nipmuc or Massachusetts Indians Waban, living, in what is now Newton Corner with several other tribesmen. Although Indian Christianization was a professed Puritan goal, few concerned themselves with the effort. Rev. Eliot, later known as the Apostle to the Indians, was deeply committed to their conversion. In the company of several other ministers, he came to Newton four times to preach to the Indians, ultimately petitioning the General Court and receiving land in Nonantum to establish the first Christian Indian village.

Rev. Eliot hoped to achieve an Old Testament community of native Christians who would be guided wholly by the Bible. Newton's English Puritan's, not sharing the minister's religious predilections, sabotaged his efforts. Finally, Eliot petitioned the General Court once again, to relocate the Nonantum Indians far from the harmful effects of white influence, thereby establishing the most successful of the Praying (Indian) Villages in Natick.

Their tragic struggle to reacculturate themselves, to serve the English and their final devastation in King Philip's War (1675-1677) comprises the historical bulk of our book.

According to Temple Emanuel Rabbi Samuel Chiel, while some changes are being made in Judaism to keep pace with the changing times, the message of Yom Kippur has remained constant.

"The message of Yom Kippur is eternal," the 58-year-old Rabbi said. "The themes never change."

Chiel explained that, unlike other services that he has helped modify "to try to speak to everybody coming from different vantage points," the message of Yom Kippur is the backbone on which the Jewish religion is based.

"It is more than atonement," Chiel said. "It is at-one-ment — at one with God, at one with self and at one with other human beings."

There are, according to Chiel, three major themes of Yom Kippur.

"Sin is a big thing," the Rabbi said. "Humans are very sinful. We deal with Al Cheyts — ethical sins of human beings."

Chiel said that, aside from sins listed in the Ten Commandments, Judaism is concerned about "the refinement of sin.

"On Yom Kippur, our tradition says you have to take account of yourself, sit down and think about the things that you have done during the past year that harmed others or yourself."

Sitting down to take account leads to what Chiel called the second major theme of Yom Kippur — change.

"Change is possible," he said. "One can imagine a tradition where you talk of sin a lot and become pessimistic. You are so full of sin that there is no hope left. Yom Kippur is the opposite of that. The possibility is everywhere for repentance and change. It is a time to determine how we are going to make this year better than last."

To make this year better than last, Chiel said Jews must remember to forgive.

"Forgiveness," the Rabbi said, "is an optimistic and wonderful theme. He is not a harsh God. He wants to forgive us, accept us and get close to us. On Yom Kippur, He extends his 'heart,' metaphorically speaking. He comes to us and asks us to return to him.

In Judaism, according to Chiel, there is no "magic solution. We don't emphasize punishment," Chiel said. "The Talmud says the greatest reward in performing a mitzvah is performing the mitzvah. Likewise, the worst punishment for committing a sin is committing the sin, because the sinner gets the feeling that 'I have diminished myself' by committing the sin. If Yom Kippur has a real effect, it would be to go to the person you sinned against and ask their forgiveness."

Chiel said forgiving means to make restitution, ask another to accept an apology and remember never to commit the sin again.

"There is no such thing as an irrevocable break," he said, "or wars between humans that cannot be healed."

On a practical level, Chiel said talking about forgiveness often provides people with the inspiration to take action.

"After hearing me talk about it, I've had people tell me that they called a brother or sister they haven't talked to for a long time and made up. It has a profound effect on Jews."

Another tradition of Yom Kippur that does not change is fasting. More than just a form of self-denial and cleansing of the soul, fasting is designed to remind the congregation of those less fortunate.

"The real meaning of fasting," Chiel said, "is to think about those who fast because they have no food. The Jewish way is through mitzvot. We help those who are in trouble."

Chiel said that there is more to the spirit of Yom Kippur than just showing up for temple. The real spirit of Yom Kippur, he said, lies in the sincerity an individual has toward the themes of the Day of Atonement.

During the year, Chiel said he is trying to accomodate the many different backgrounds that make up the Jewish community in Newton. Yom Kippur, however, is a tradition that will always remain the same.

"When I first came to this congregation 18 years ago," Chiel recalled, "I stressed participation on the part of the congregation. I didn't want them to just sit passively by. I wanted them to take part and become an essential part of the service."

Chiel pointed to the days of the printing press as a time when ritual became more uniform.

"Before the printing press," Chiel said, "people often added their own prayers. With the printing press, the cost of making the books made that a less prevalent practice. The Talmudic fathers wanted to keep the traditions uniform, but they also wanted us to remember that change is inevitable and we have to adjust. With Yom Kippur, things have remained pretty much the way they always have because the message is the same as it was then."

Church's sexism irks women

During the three-hour "listening session," archdiocese women "tried to address" problems faced by "non-traditional members of the church," Stalker said. Broken into groups of eight women, the "listening session" included debate on the role of lesbians, divorced women and women who use birth control in the church.

"I think the message is loud and clear," Estelle Shanley said. "American women are practicing birth control (and the church needs to address the issue.)"

As far as ordaining women as priests, several women nodded their heads in agreement when O'Callaghan — the mother of two — said: "If we're good enough to be mothers, we're good enough to be priests."

Their reaction was mixed as whether these listening sessions would help change the role of women in the church.

"No. I don't think they'll use them (the recommendations) in the pastoral letter," Mary Young said. "I think a lot of the suggestions that were made are contrary to church doctorine." For example, she added, the recognition by the church of lesbian women. According to Young, it would be impossible for the church to recognize such a group because there is no foundation for it the Bible.

Despite their disagreements with the church, all the women believed the "listening sessions" were "an important first step" in a long arduous process.

"It's like getting your foot in the door ... but, I don't hold out any hope at all," Shanley said

Several members of her smaller group are so upset with the church, Shanley said, "they've been discouraging their sons from going into the seminary."

Many of the women in attendance, Shanley continued, are disturbed by the "passive and submissive" role the church has defined for then under the guise of the Virgin Mary. "We tried to tell them (the bishops) that she is not the only female role model in the church."

We're very angry at the church's male hierarchy," Shanley said. "How can they begin to write a (pastoral letter) on women unless they know women."

Story group starts

NEWTON — "There are only two or three human stories, and they go on repeating themselves as fiercely as if they had never happened before," wrote Willa Cather. By popular demand, the Newton Free Library's Short Story Discussion Group will resume its meetings with discussion leader Ethel Goldhaber on Monday, Oct. 7 at 7:15 p.m. at the Main Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Participants will read work by Shirley Jackson, Willa Cather, James Joyce, Somerset Maugham, D.H. Lawrence, Edgar Alan Poe, and several other authors.

The first two meetings are scheduled for Oct. 7 and Oct. 21 at 7:15 p.m. Group size will be limited. To register and for more information call 552-7145.

Library plan gaining support

Planning Director Barry Canner said an architectural firm chosen by the city's Designer Selection/Review process will translate the building program created by the library trustees into drawings showing what the library would look like, where it would situated on the lot and how each floor would be arranged.

The designs, although not actual working drawings, would also show the best parking scheme for the facility.

The preliminary design work would include extensive geological tests at the Homer/Walnut site to determine the role groundwater levels might play in construction, he added.

Discussions are underway with City Engineer Paul W. Giunta to determine how much of the necessary geological work can be done by in-house staff.

Kelliher capped off the relatively short discussion by saying the administration is approaching the entire library matter with caution because the ambitious project represents the first time in recent memory that the city will be involved with new construction.

When no further comments or questions surfaced, Alderman Sondra Shick said she would "be glad to move the item."

Shick joined Alderman Paul Coletti, Verne Vance and Louis Irwin in supporting the item.

Ban favored in poll

moratorium. The city is changing character. There are too many commercial establishments and we are loosing the residential flavor. I'm not even sure we can call this the Garden City anymore.

John Nagy, Newton: I'm against it. I feel like zoning control in general is archaic. The atrocity in Newton Corner (One Newton Place) would have been more attractive, except for the inordinate amount of grief the developer got on what could and couldn't be done. After seeing petty things in regards to real estate, I'd have to say I'd be against a moratorium.

Edith Reed, Newton Corner: I think there should be a moratorium. I'd support anything that would keep the area as cute as it is. It's just now beginning to be over-built.

Marvin Goldberg, Newton Centre: I think it's pretty shortsighted. I generally read moratorium as meaning, 'We don't want any more.' From what I gather, that's more the sentiment than, 'Let's do something constructive.'

Tony Rufo, Newton Corner: As a resident, I think they should put it in and keep it in. One of the biggest problems in the city is open space. If you put too much commercial property all at one time, what will happen to the open space? Also, I don't know how much need there is for more commercial development.

Craig Elliott, Newton Corner: I don't favor the moratorium. I don't mind more construction as long as there's parking included in with that.

Diane Carlson, Newtonville: Yes. Some of the stuff that's been done in the last couple of years is pretty creepy. Some of it is nice too. Newton Centre is good, but I guess basically that they are doing better with converting old buildings than with new buildings. Some of the buildings that have gone up lately have not been so hot visually.

Benjamin Gill, Newton Centre: I'm against a moratorium. I think we need to expand the tax base. The expansion has to be done with consideration of open space, overcrowding and parking.

Leslie Davis, Newton Centre: I would certainly go with it. We have too much now. I would like to see more open areas, otherwise, you feel closed in.

Judy Davis, Chestnut Hill: No. What we need is more creative thinking. I think it's like being caught between a rock and a hard place. From a business point of view, we need development, and from a living and environmental point of view, development is not particularly pleasant.

Eileen Denniston, Chestnut Hill: I think there is too much going on right now. We spend a half-hour trying to find a parking space now. I'd definitely say yes, because there's no where to move right now.

Building ban goes on November ballot

cessed in time for absentee voters to return them by election day.

As it stands right now, the question asks: "Shall the Newton Board of Aldermen pass a zoning amendment which in summary would impose a temporary suspension of the issuance of construction permits for commercial, industrial and multi-family residentail buildings until such time as a new zoning ordinance is adopted by the Board of Aldermen?"

Those aldermen voting in favor of placing the question on this year's ballot were: Rodney Barker, Wendell Bauckman, Richard Bullwinkle, Bruce Carmichael, Cynthia Creem, Paul Coletti, Elaine Gentile, Louis Irwin, Michael Malec, George Mansfield, Ron Marini, Richard McGrath, W. Arthur Reilly, William Shaevel, Carol Ann Shea, Dominic Taglienti and Verne Vance.

Aldermen voting in opposition were: Paul Daley, Matthew Jefferson, Carol Robinson, Sondra Shick and Robert Tennant.

Aldermen James Regan and Edward Richmond were absent.

Moratorium movement roots go deep

By Edward Cafasso
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Way back in the summer of 1983, more than a year before the "moratorium movement" began, Planning Director Barry Canner began refining the details of a state grant application.

The city was looking for $75,000 in state money to conduct a planning study in the two villages hardest hit by development pressure — Newton Centre and Newton Corner.

The grant application, rejected by state officials in January 1984, reeked of foresight.

"There is concern that the existing zoning ordinances may no longer be able to adequately address either the demands imposed upon the commercial areas or the physical capacity of each village center to accomodate these demands," the document read.

Because the city's zoning ordinances are not adapted to the distinctive nature of each village center, the application continued, "there is a major void as development pressures on the city's commercial areas intensify, available capacity diminshes, and the threat of direct or indirect commercial encroachment into residential areas increases."

The application evolved into the Village Study, an approach to the city's zoning problems Canner sees as much more worthwhile than a nonbinding ballot question asking residents if they favor a moratorium on new commercial construction.

"People are going to be asked to respond to a complex question in a very simple way. I'm not sure there is enough time for the real issues involved in a moratorium to be understood. In essence, the vote will be taking place almost in a vacuum," he said yesterday.

Canner believes the moratorium movement has spawned both good and bad reactions.

"It has pushed some developments — one or two fairly substantial projects — to take place faster," he said, citing as examples the proposed office complex at the former Valles Restaurant on Route 9 and the Iodice office building looming over Crafts Street.

"The proposal for a moratorium is creating a very naive, superficial reaction among residents. It is not going to give people the protection they think they're going to get," he added.

But, he acknowledged, there have been positive offshoots to the public outcry, including the Zoning Review Committee (ZRC) working to close longstanding loopholes, recent attempts by aldermen to erase pockets of commercial spot zoning in residential neighborhoods and, of course, the Village Study itself.

Ironically, Canner believes three developers have done more to bolster the momentum for a building ban than the citizens' group leading the charge.

First and foremost on the list is Jack Antaramian, whose brick office building perched on the edge of the sidewalk in Four Corners spurred the Board of Aldermen in early 1984 to unanimously support the Village Study concept.

At about the same time, the former Mayflower Furinture Building in West Newton Square was turned into an office building with an attached parking garage, stimulating more debate about "appropriate development."

Developer Michael Iodice, Jr., pushed the moratorium movement over the top earlier this year with a whirlwind of construction.

In one fell swoop, his six-story office and its almost nonexistent setback managed to highlight the problems created by spot zoning, teach residents a hard-to-swallow lesson about "perimeter plans" and gall aldermen into creating the ZRC.

The shock of Iodice's project — combined with the lingering after-effects of Ronald Druker's "One Newton Place" development and Peter Turchon's plans for an expanded office building in Newton Corner — helped add thousands of signatures to the petition calling for the ballot question.

Canner admits "it probably took too long" for his department to turn the concept of the Village Study into reality.

"The issues are too complicated and the study itself is complex and expensive. It took a lot of time to draw up the Request for Proposals," he said.

The Board of Aldermen did not help the problem any by throwing an occasional parlimentary monkey wrench into the effort, although Canner is hesitant to say so.

"It's a significant proposition, one they couldn't be rushed into accepting. The whole thing was frustrating — for the aldermen and for me. Working to prepare the Village Study literally consumed this department for quite a while," he said.

That water has long passed under the bridge, however.

Canner is not convinced the results of the moratorium ballot question, which he described as "a simplistic panacea," will truly reflect residents' feelings on the issue of future development.

It will, he believes, produce a kneejerk reaction to the thought of skyscrapers blotting out the sun and traffic consuming quiet residential streets.

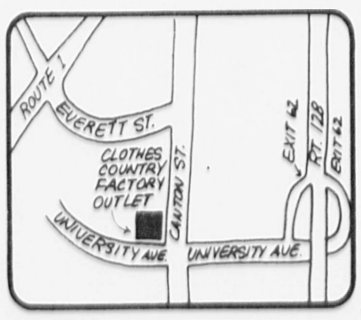

Instead, Canner thinks residents can take more productive steps to protect the city's residential character by taking advantage of the numerous opportunities for public participation in the Village Study.

"I think we did a good job on it. Hopefully, the end product will be as good. I hope it will be," he said.

1985 Election Guide

Ward 7

Against new library

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Domenic Taglienti says his knowldege of the Garden City will help him to a sixth term as Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large.

The 68-year-old retired real estate developer is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Thompsonville Improvement Association and the Phillipo Corsi Society.

Taglienti lives in Thompsonville with his wife Louise. They have two children, James, 36 and Pamela, 32.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I was born in Newton. I know all about the city. I've lived here all my life and I know just what the city needs and I know what it wants.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of during the last term?

A: I'm most proud of my accomplishments on land use. I think we did a good job and made some good decisions on buildings to broaden our tax base.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: To try to keep the city the way it is with no major changes and watch the tax rate so it doesn't get out of hand and vote for only the items that only mean something for everybody in the city.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: They should both definitely be paid. I think what they are getting is the right amount.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: I don't think so. I think we should wait for the Zoning Review Committee to come up with something as soon as possible. I think that, at this point, the city is coming right down to the end of land for large buildings.

Domenic Talienti

No matter what happens in the next six or eight months, it won't hurt the city of Newton.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: I voted against it. I think that we should look at school buildings which are surplus and I'm sure that one or two buildings would save the taxpayer a lot of money for a library. The reason I'm afraid of voting for a new library is what happened to Newton North High School with the cost. The cost started at $6 million and ended at $35 million. It doesn't make sense to me that we should spend that kind of money on any building. If they came in with a firm price, I might listen. I would vote against the Homer Street site.

Kyriakos intends to 'go along with' library decisions

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Nicholas Kyriakos says "being in tune with the 80s" makes him a good candidate for Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large.

Kyriakos works for AT&T and is a member of the Newton Republican Club, the Friends of Newton Free Library, Fund for the Arts in Newton, Ahepa — a Greek fraternal organization, and various Republican organizations on the state and federal level.

The 50-year-old Kyriakos is single and lives in Newton proper.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I believe at this time a new face and a new point of view is essential. A man of vigor is needed for the 80s who is in tune with the people. I believe, in me, the people will see a receptive individual responding to their needs.

Q: What do you think your opponents failed to accomplish during the last term?

A: I'm not going to mention names, but I think one thing one of my opponents has failed to accomplish in full is his presence at aldermanic meetings. This one opponent has missed over 100 voting sessions, an accomplishment of no merit. This shall not happen if I am elected. Constant representation is needed.

Q: If elected, what one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: Zoning is a goal of paramount importance, to revise some ordinances, if needed, and to keep commercial developments out of residential areas. I also believe some commercial tax relieve should be in the offering.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: A definite, capital yes for both. In these times and this day and age, I think it's a must and necessary for a person who puts in a lot of constructive effort and uses exorbitant amounts of energy. More money would not be totally out of the question for me. I disagree with a couple of gentlemen like Bullwinkle and Mandell who are against paying School Committee members and aldermen.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction in the city until zoning laws are revised?

A: Let's revise zoning laws now so no thought of a moratorium is to prevail. Coexistence is a factor here. You have to remember that commercial development creates jobs and generates taxes for communities. It's like a shot of adrenalin. We need it, but not in residential areas.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: I think at this time that we do need a new library. I'm a little prejudiced to this, because I would have liked it to remain in Newton Corner, but that is not to be. It would have been good to have the existing site next to the library, but that is not to be either. My second choice is the Warren School, but that is not to be either. It seems that the selective committee has chosen the site at Homer and Walnut Streets opposite City Hall in Newton Centre. I may not agree with its entirety, but I will go along with it. We are finally revved up for a library charge. Onward and forward I say. The mayor has presented it and it is now up to aldermen to approve the site. It is in their ballpark and now they should go to the plate and hit a homerun.

School Committee race

Aims to 'heal' division

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

Sydra Schnipper

NEWTON — Sydra Schnipper — one of two candidates running for the Ward 7 School Committee seat — believes the city's "schools should become known as a resource for the entire community and not just the 30 percent who have children in them."

A resident of Ward Street, Schnipper said her multi-faceted personality and background as a teacher, parent and member of the community would give the committee important experience and perspective.

"I want to make sure that both our teachers and children are provided with the resources to ensure their futures," Schnipper said. "My feeling is that the School Committee must be an advocate for our children by working with the mayor and the Board of Aldermen to heal painful divisions." These "painful divisions," she added, are last year's contract negotiations and school consolidations.

Schnipper — who graduated from Queen's College in New York with a bachelor's degree in math — has been teaching arithmetic at Brookline High School since she moved here 12 years ago. Her post-graduate work includes a grant from the National Science Foundation for mathematical research at the Courant Institute of Math and Science and studies in school administration and guidance.

Her professional accomplishments "outside the classroom" included the establishment of a program entitled "Women in Math Anxiety" which reaches out to kids — especially females — to try and find out why they are afraid of the math learning process. While she was living in New York, Schnipper worked as a volunteer at a drug and alcohol abuse center where she instituted a high school equivalency program for clients.

The mother of three students enrolled in city schools — Merritt, a sophmore at Newton North; Deborah, an eighth grader at Bigelow Junior High School; and Claudia, a sixth grader at the Ward School — Schnipper feels the consolidation of schools is necessary. "When a system moves from a student population of 18,000 to 10,000, (it becomes appropriate to consolidate schools) so as to maintain the different programs for students."

Because of her children's enrollment in city schools, Schnipper has been a member of PTAs at each of the schools they have attend, as well as, as coach in the Newton Girls Soccer League.

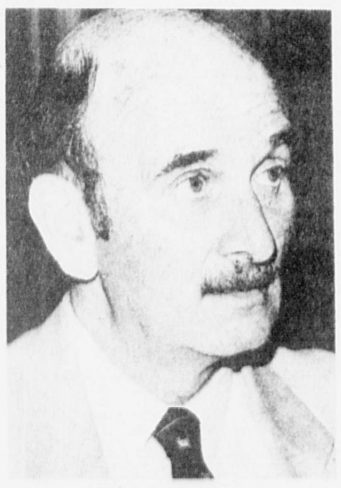

Goal to enact resident parking sticker laws

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — W. Arthur Reilly, running uncontested will begin his second term as Ward 7 Alderman in January.

Reilly, 51, is a Senior Project Coordinator for the Boston Redevelopment Authority. He is a member of the Chestnut Hill Association, the Ward 7 Democratic Committee, and the Newton Conservators.

Reilly and his wife, Mimi, live in Chestnut Hill. They have two children, Chip, 19, and Alexandra, 17.

W. Arthur Reilly

Q: How do you feel about your uncontested status?

A: I guess although I thoroughly enjoy campaigning and meeting new constituents, I was pleased at the free time I was afforded to stay with my family as well as continuing to represent the neighborhood as a member of the citizen's Zoning Review Committee which met during the summer and also continuing with other aldermen to draft a resident parking ordinance now being reviewed.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of last term?

A: I guess most importantly was my early and continued involvement with the neighborhood in checking and monitoring proposed institutional expansion in the Chestnut Hill and Farlow Hill neighborhoods. In Farlow Hill, a proposed institutional use of the former St. Sebastian's School was discouraged and a residential reuse of the site resulted in a proposed development being submitted by a Newton Developer for housing.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: There are two quick ones. My immediate goal is to see the enactment of a city-wide resident parking sticker ordinance. I am going to continue to strive to aid the city in establishing a balanced development program that will create rational development as well as provide a vehicle for the creation of affordable housing both for moderate-income families as well as first-time home buyers.

Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: There's no doubt in my mind that elected public officials should be reimbursed for their efforts in representing a wide, diversified constituency on such significant issues as are brought to their attention. I find a more appropriate salary would be $5,000 per year, given the professional, sustained efforts required to perform responsibly.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: No, a moratorium is not the solution to rational development. A more professional solution is the revision of the zoning ordinance which will curtail developers from utilizing legal loopholes to satisfy their development requirements. The village study and appropriate zoning revisions will provide the guidelines necessary to preserve the residential integrity of the city.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: Yes, because you can't effectively put a new foot in an old shoe no matter how hard you try. A new state-of-the-art library belongs in an unencumbered site since it provides, among other things, design and development flexiblity. One only has to visit the O'Neil library on the BC campus to see a first-class example of this.

A central location for a central library is the next most important ingredient for success, which brings us to Homer and Walnut. Finally, various methods of financing should be continued to be explored to ensure that other means of financing are applied for.

Verne Vance, Jr.

Vance favors less pay

By Howard Altman
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Attorney Verne Vance Jr. says his government experience is a good reason he should serve his third term as Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large.

Vance, 53, is a director of the Newton Conservators. He is also a member of the League of Women Voters and the Jewish Community Campus.

Vance and his wife Anita live in Chestnut Hill with daughters Lisa, 13, and Virginia, 3, and son Chip, 11.

Q: Why do you think you are the best candidate for Ward 7 Alderman-at-Large?

A: I think I'm the only candidate who has experience as an official at all levels of government — federal, state and local — which gives me the broadest understanding of how all levels of government work. I also think my legal training can help me translate that experience into effective action on behalf of Newton's residents.

Q: What accomplishment were you most proud of last term?

A: The revision of the ordinance on reuse of surplus buildings, which I think produced a more effective and rational process for considering all aspects of proposals for reuse of surplus city property.

Q: What one goal do you have for the upcoming term?

A: I would say probably in my view, my principal goal would be to work effectively to complete the comprehensive review of the city's zoning ordinance in order to bring it into line with present-day land use needs of the city. I think that the zoning ordinance as it currently exists doesn't really divide the city into gradations between residential areas and commercial areas. I think we have to limit what can be done in commercial areas and also try to limit the effects of what's done in commercial areas on what's done in residential areas.

Q: Should aldermen and School Committee members be paid, and if so, how much?

A: Yes, I do think both should be paid. I think both should be paid on the same basis. I'm not wedded to the current $3,000 level of compensation for both. In 1983, I voted against a proposal to increase aldermanic compensation to $3,000. I think something like $2,400 would be more appropriate for both aldermen and School Committee members.

Q: Should there be a moratorium on commercial construction until zoning laws are revised?

A: I don't think it's neccessary at this point. I think there is an effective process underway that should produce a comprehensive revision of zoning ordinances within the next 12 months. I don't think that within that period there will be development that is likely to materially change the character of the city before new zoning revisions can become effective.

Q: Does the city need a new library, and if so, where should it be located?

A: Unquestionably, the city needs a new library, and in my view it should be a newly constructed building. I think it should be a newly constructed building in order to provide us with maximum flexiblity to meet library needs, not just for today, but for the next 50 to 100 years. As for the matter of the site, at the present time I support construction at the Homer and Walnut site, unless the preliminary studies that should be underway soon show serious site problems that cannot be corrected without increasing the cost of the library to an unacceptable level.

Computer ed is goal

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Patience Berkman — one of two candidates running for the Ward 7 School Committee seat — believes the committee needs to improve its contact and communication with the community.

"I think the committee needs to take a more active role in the community as advocates for public education," Berkman said. "It needs to broaden its constituency."

A resident of Billings Park, Berkman served for three years as chairperson for the PTA's citywide Round Table on Education which provides a "forum for outside input" to established school curriculum and policy.

Patience Berkman

Berkman graduate from Oberlin College with a bachelor's degree in history and completed one year of graduate work at the University of Wisconsin. She later received her master's in education from Lesley College's Graduate School. Her professional background is devoted to teaching. Working from 1967-79, she was a private school teacher, a junior high school teacher and a special needs teacher for the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health.

A former president of the Underwood School PTA, who is currently on a leave of absence from the citywide PTA council, Berkman's interest in city education is more than professional. She has three children who attend public schools in Newton. Jethro is a seventh grader at Day Junior High School while Julia, a fourth grader, and Toby, a kindergartener, attend the Underwood School.

Besides chairing the round table committee and her PTA involvement, Berkman is a member of the League of Women Voters and a "strong" supporter of the Newton Arts Center. "The message of my involvement has been broad and deep," Berkman said.

Her involvement in the community and experience are at the heart of her decision to run. "With four incumbents retiring, the School Committee needs sombody with my demonstrated commitment to listening to community concerns," Berkman said. "I have the time and experience necessary to do the job."

If elected, Berkman has four goals for the School Committee with regards to curriculum. She believes the school system — through a stronger commitment from the committee — should emphasize computer education, writing and science skills, and drug and alcohol education.

With regards to school closings, Berkman cites declining enrollment figures — a drop of 8,000 students in 10 years — as the basis for her opinion. "It was clear that closings were a necessary, but painful reaction to these declining numbers and fiscal restraints," Berkman said. "Now that the elementary school population is beginning to rise, we can look foward to a more stable period."

Correction

The Newton Graphic wishes to apologize for misquoting Angela Nielsen in a School Committe candidate's profile which appeared in the Sept. 11 edition. The article said that Nielsen believes the purpose of education is to "delight and entertain." What Nielsen actually said is that the purpose of education is to "delight and instruct." The Graphic regrets this error.

To find the best adjustable rate mortgage, you have to know what to look for.

Although we're pleased to claim one of the lowest initial rates in the area, there's more to choosing the right adjustable rate mortgage than rate alone.

Origination fees (points), the margin (rate above index), and rate caps are equally important.

At Mutual Bank, our adjustable rate mortgages for primary residences offer the lowest points around (1%), attractive caps (2% annually and 5% over the life of the loan), and a low margin. And, as mentioned above, one of the lowest initial rates.

So now you not only know what to look for, you know where to look. Mutual Bank.

Kevin Rollins had a career-high 224 yards

Rollins, Lions off to fast start

By Mike Stoller
Sports Correspondent

NEWTON — Young? Inexperienced? It didn't seem to matter. You could not have asked for a more explosive offense than the one Newton South displayed Saturday afternoon, as the football Lions rushed for 333 yards and overpowered the Littleton Tigers to the tune of a 28-20 opening-day victory.

Newton star tailback Kevin Rollins (remember him?) and sophomore quarterback Ben Burlingame directed a "new look" Lion offense that has within its roots a very effective triple option play. But never could it have worked better than midway through the third quarter of what was a considerably close game.

With Newton leading, 14-12, Burlingame, on the option, pitched out to Rollins, who scampered 55 yards down the right sideline to give the Lions a 20-12 advantage. On the day, Rollins carried the ball 25 times for a remarkable 224 yards (a personal high), including two touchdowns. Dave Mosby expanded South's lead to 10 when he added the conversion.

"We just didn't stop the option," Tiger coach John Corbett said. "We couldn't stop Kevin Rollins. I didn't think they (the Lions) were that powerful, but obviously Kevin Rollins is one helluva ballplayer, and he's proven that throughout my tenure here."

As for Burlingame, South coach Art Kojoyian simply was overjoyed with the young quarterback's outstanding performance.

"Burlingame has to make the decision," the skipper said, explaining that the signal caller, on the option, will either run the ball himself, give it to the fullback or pitch out to one of the tailbacks "all depending on what the tackle (on defense) does.... To run that offense, you have to have a helluva smart quarterback. That's incredible for a sophomore."

Indeed, both Burlingame, in his first season at the helm, and Rollins would baffle the Tigers all afternoon. The duo got the show started late in the first quarter after a Littleton touchdown was called back because of offensive interference. On second down, from the Newton 40, Burlingame started to move forward before he wisely flipped to Rollins, who sprinted down the right sideline much like he did in his third quarter run. The senior finally was brought down at the three, but there was no need to worry. After the Tigers threw Rollins for a one-yard loss, fellow back Leroy Browne (37 yards on 10 carries) promptly scored on a four-yard breakthrough to give the Lions a 6-0 edge. The conversion failed.

Littleton would even the tally late in the second frame, using over six minutes to put the leather into the end zone. After calling two timeouts and then no less being called for a delay of game penalty, the Tigers eventually maneuvered their way deep into Lion territory. Finally, quarterback Rich Crory (12 of 22 for 131 yards, including two TDs) connected with Robbie Hunt for a six-yard touchdown pass to cap a 60-yard drive and tie the game. The visitors also missed the conversion.

Newton then got a bit careless, as Rollins coughed up the ball on the ensuing kickoff. The Tigers took care of business rather nicely, scoring on the first play of their next drive. Crory hooked up with split end Dan Jenczyk for a 23-yard TD toss, and Littleton suddenly had the lead for the first time, 12-6.

But the home club did not panic. In fact, it regrouped very quickly. On their next possession, the Lions marched from their own 38 to the Tiger 40 before Burlingame strutted his stuff once again. Working off the option, the Lion signal caller faked a pitchout, found a hole around leftend and ran the rest of the way down the sideline for six points. Befittingly, he also added the conversion to give South a slim 14-12 halftime lead.

"It's unbelievable ," Kojoyian said later, referring to Burlingame's ability to run South's fashionable wishbone offense. "He's mastered it (the option) in two weeks."

The Lion mentor explained that if the defensive tackle comes charging in, Burlingame will either run or pitchout, but if the tackle stays back, he will give the ball to the fullback.

"He's got to keep watching (during the play)," Kojoyian said, emphasizing how difficult it is. "I wouldn't want to do it, would you?"

Corbett echoed Kojoyian on Burlingame's fabulous outing as the Lions' starting quarterback.

"Their QB did a great job. He ran super reads," the Tiger coach said. "They (the Lions) ran that play very well." Corbett also noted that South's option play was effective from both the left and right sides, as indicated in the first half.

And things went just as well for the Lions in the second half. Rollins' 55-yard dash and the conversion made it 22-12.

Then, after Newton's John Morgan picked off a Tiger pass late in the third quarter, Burlingame, again, introduced Rollins to the Littleton defense on the first play of the final frame. Rollins ran the distance, bouncing off one tackler, escaping another and racing down the sideline for a 50-yard TD run. That capped a 63-yard drive and all but sealed the win for the Lions, who were in command, 28-12.

Littleton added one last thud, as fullback Charlie White plowed over from the two and then ran for the conversion to make the score 28-20 with 6:08 left in the contest. The drive featured a 38-yard bomb from Crory to Hunt that put the Tigers at first and goal from the Newton five.

The Lion offense controlled the ball for just about the rest of the game. Littleton finally had one last shot, but South's Jeff Brewington foiled it, intercepting a Crory pass to ice the win for Newton.

Asked whether he thought his team's wishbone offense would run as smoothly as it did, Kojoyian replied, "I thought so, because in the scrimmages it worked quite well..."

So, as the Lions prepare for next Saturday's away game against Keefe Technical, they will continue to practice what the South coach called "a very exciting and explosive offense."

Burke nets 4 as Tiger girls romp

NORTH QUINCY — Newton North girls' soccer coach Fuzzy Howland thought his club might have a little stiffer test than it had been getting going into Friday's outing at North Quincy. Not so, as his Tigers turned in another routine, 7-0, rout for their fourth win without a defeat.

Janet Burke, a stopper-turned-striker for the game, took to her new task with gusto, scoring four times and assisting on another.

The first of those scores started the Tigers on their way to a 5-0 halftime lead. She headed in a corner kick from Angie McKenna only three minutes into the game.

Carol Ventura, playing stopper in Burke's place, still managed to come up with a score about seven minutes later. Again McKenna set it up.

At the 15-minute mark Amy Drew picked up a through pass and made it 3-0, assisted by Ann Meng and Sharon Salter.

Amy Satter (from Burke) and Burke (off a McKenna corner kick) upped the bulge to five before the intermission.

Burke finished off the scoring with two scores (from Ventura and Carolyn Natale) in the second half.

Goalie Liz Speliotis, who hasn't allowed a goal yet, had another easy afternoon, facing only four shots. The Tigers managed to get off 26 at the other end.

Quincy blanked

The Quincy Presidents must have felt on Tuesday like the Grenada defenders did when the U.S. Marines hit the beach. You make a token resistance, but the outcome is determined well in advance.

The Presidents tiptoed into Newton North for a girls' soccer game, and tiptoed back out again glad to be in one piece after an 8-0 loss.

While Coach Howland tried every conceivable combination he had in an attempt to keep the game reasonable, Quincy goalie Donna McLoughlin did her impersonation of a bullseye. Believe it not, she actually played a very good game, make a couple of outstanding stops during the 80 minutes.

Eight goals did get by her, but after all, the Tigers let fly with 59 shots.

The biggest topic of conversation on the sideline prior to gametime was how long it would be before North scored. And that was on the Quincy side.

The Presidents surprised even themselves by holding the fort for nine minutes, but Angie McKenna finally broke through McLoughlin's wall on a second-chance effort.

McKenna misfired on a cross before the ball rolled to Tiffany Heanne on the right. She let go a blistering drive, but McLoughlin stopped it. The rebound went to Marilyn Schultz, who fed McKenna, and this time the sophomore didn't miss.

That was the first of McKenna's two goals on the afternoon, the second coming four minutes later after a nice move by Kendra Daley. Daley sent McKenna away in the left slot and the soph had nothing but net to shoot at.

By the time the half was at its midpoint, the Presidents began self-destructing around McLoughlin. The third goal came as a result of an intercepted goal-kick, a problem that plagued the visitors all afternoon. Heather Hughes finally cashed it in on a curving shot past the goalie, with Schultz and Kristen Hughes assisting.

Amy Drew and Kristen Hughes added scores before the half ended, both as the result of good ball movement on offense.

By the time the half was over, the Tigers were pitching shutouts on the scoreboard (5-0), in shots (30-0) and in corner kicks (4-0). One of those whitewashes went by the boards late in the game when Quincy did manage to get a corner kick. That particular stat wound up 12-1 in North's favor. The Presidents never did get a shot, which made it a rather relaxing afternoon for Tiger goalkeepers Liz Speliotis (first half) and Marie Farrar.

In the second half, with the fullbacks getting a lot of playing time up front, North added scores by Kristin Hughes, Becky Howland and Daley.

All told, McKenna and Kristen Hughes each had two goals and one assist. Schultz assisted four times.

Coach Howland expects his team to have a little bit tougher time on Friday at North Quincy (3:30 p.m.), but figures Monday's game against Brockton (at Newton North, 3:30) could go a long way toward determining who the boss is in this year's league race.

Newton North golfers edge Waltham, 6-3, in tough match

WESTON — Newton North had its toughest golf match of the season, but it was still a 6-3 win over Waltham on Friday at the Weston Country Club.

Rick DeSimone led the Tiger scorers with a 39, combining with Brian Clancy for a win in the 2-5 positions. Jim Campbell at one and Tim Weaver at four also won their match. Waltham took the three points at the 3-6 positions.

Thursday, Campbell and DeSimone each fired 32s as Newton North won its third straight match with an 8-1 decision over Brookline at Brae Burn Country Club. The two tied for medalist honors.

Other winners for the Tigers included B.J. Travers, who pulled out a somewhat narrow decision, Weaver and Clancy. The latter two were both four holes up with three to go.

Italian-American group fetes DeNucci

State Representative A. Joseph DeNucci, a former New England Middleweight Champion boxer, will be named Man of the Year in October by the Boston Chapter of the National Italian-American Sports Hall of Fame, Chairman Al Aruda announced today.

DeNucci, once ranked the number-five middleweight nationally, will accept the award at the first-ever Boston Chapter Scholarship Dinner-Dance to be held at Lantana's in Randolph on Oct. 4.

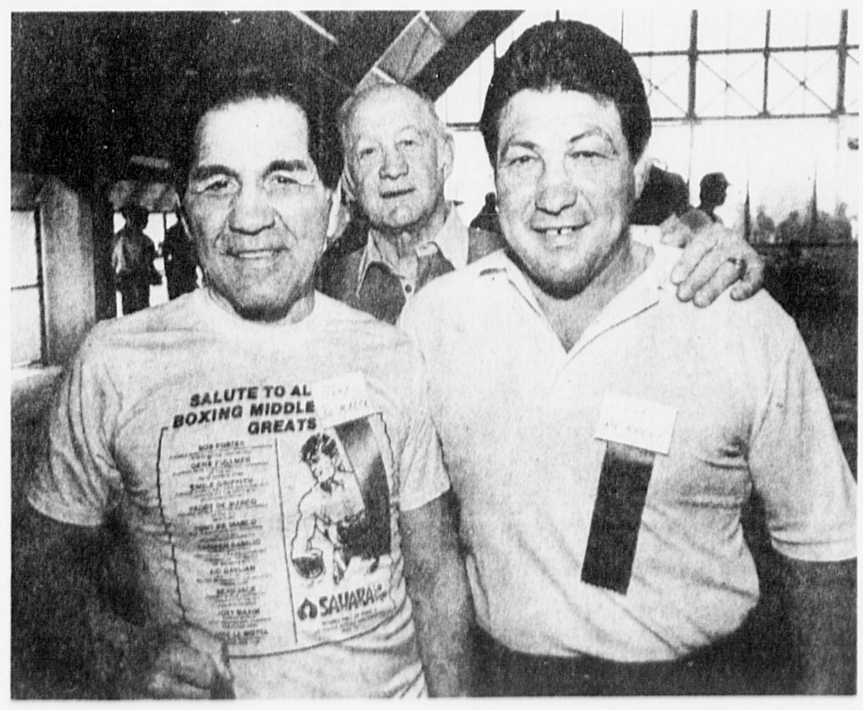

"It is certainly a humbling kind of honor," said DeNucci, a Massachusetts State Representative since 1976. "I've been around sports and politics and received many awards and this certainly has to rank among the most important. Sports is my first love and the award is very meaningful to me."

Aruda, chairperson for the occasion, said "He (DeNucci) was chosen because he is the embodiment of our philosophy: that participation in sports contributes to the development of discipline, the setting of goals, the building of character and confidence - all hallmarks of a leader."

DeNucci's pro boxing career spanded over 16 years in which time the middleweight posted a 65-12-4 record. His impressive start in the sport came when the Newton resident was barely 16 years old. That year, 1956, DeNucci won both the New England and National Golden Glove titles, and after winning 29 of 30 amateur fights, embarked on his pro career.

On March 25, 1957, in his debut fight, DeNucci started fast and finished almost as quickly, knocking out Johnny Candino in the first round.

Over the next decade, DeNucci would ride a rocky road to both success and disappointment. He would quit boxing in 1964, claiming that he had wasted 10 years in the sport. Gambling was what did him in he said, but after a 17-month layoff, DeNucci was ready to give it one more shot.

"I didn't retire, not officially at least," he said after deciding to give the sport another try. "I just wanted time to think things over and square myself away. For a long time I wasn't sure what I wanted to do."

The comeback was short, and not always sweet. DeNucci left boxing again, this time in 1967, because he had become bitter and unmotivated. In 1971, he was back.

"I always knew I'd snap out of it," he said in '71. "I quit because it wasn't me. When motivation's gone, everything's gone. But I always felt I'd try again."

And so he did. DeNucci won eight straight fights in Waltham, then scored a big victory in the Boston Garden. His career would last a couple of more years before his final retirement was announced in 1973.

"I've had extended layoffs, but this is it," said the then 34-year old DeNucci. "I've decided to step out of the ring. I'll never box again."

The most appealing aspect of DeNucci's career was not his record or the money he made, but the fact that time after time, he had the will to bounce back and spit in the face of adversity.

And that's why Joe DeNucci is being honored next month.

The National Italian-American Sports Hall of Fame was established seven years ago in Chicago, both to honor sports heroes as well as to provide encouragement and support to high school athletes.

Pat Piscitelli formed the Boston Chapter two years ago, and since that time, two $1,000 scholarships have been raised through golf tournaments for deserving graduating high school seniors. The scholarships, presented to Dale Arpino of Lincoln-Sudbury High and Paul DeMarzo of Brockton High, were presented in memory of John Yanni and Sully DeMarco who contributed significantly to local youth efforts.

DeNucci himself is no stranger to youth groups. For the past decade, he has personally directed a boxing program at St. Bernard's Church in West Newton, and has been involved in countless youth groups throughout the years.

"It's sort of unique for a boxer to go into politics," DeNucci said. "Sometimes you wonder if people know what you've done...it just makes me feel real good."

Schwam to direct Liberty Run

BOSTON — Race operations management for the Saturday, Oct. 12 Stroh's Run for Liberty in Boston has been assumed by March Schwam, it was announced by the Advisory Board.

Schwam, a resident of Newtonville, was recently selected by the board to manage and direct the five-mile run sponsored by Stroh Brewery Co. and the Plymouth division of Chrysler Corporation. Directors are responsible for determing course, organizing volunteers to man rest stations, registration and gaining the support of local police and fire departments.

In Boston, the race will begin at 10 a.m. at Soldiers Field Road.

Established in 1984 by Stroh, the Stroh's Run for Liberty benefits the restoration project of the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island. In its inaugural year, the run gained more than 140,000 participants. In additon to the local run, the race will be held in 127 cities and seven military installations across the United States.

Interested persons can pick up entry forms for the runat participating Chrysler Plymouth dealers, or by calling Schwam at 964-3035.

Natick grid machine rumbles over North

By Roy LeBlanc
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If your name is Tom Lamb, you immediately make 20 copies of the game films and send them to all your friends and relatives. If your name is Pete Capodilupo, you use them for a marshmallow roast as soon as possible.

Newton North coach Capodilupo might want to save one copy of Saturday's 42-2 massacre at the hands of Natick, just to show his players a few hundred times so they never forget it. Then again, anyone who was in a Tiger jersey isn't likely to forget quickly, even without being reminded by the films.

When pressed, after a lot of thought, Natick mentor Lamb finally came up with one thing he didn't like about his team's 34th consecutive victory: "The snap on the first punt."

That resulted in North's only points of the game, as the Redmen sent the ball out of the end zone on their first attempt of the game. It made the score 21-2 with 5:36 to go in the first half, so it hardly qualified as a major disaster.

It still stands out, however, as the only thing that went wrong for Natick all afternoon. The Redmen came into Dickinson Stadium and simply did anything they wanted to do. They ran to the tune of 242 yards and three touchdowns (all by Greg Forte), using no less than eight backs. Two quarterbacks passed for 94 yards and three touchdowns. They were even perfect on their extra points, hitting seven for seven using two kickers.

And that's only the offense.

Defensively, the domination was just as complete. Newton crossed into Natick territory three times in seven possessions. Two of those ended at the Natick 47 and 49. Once, the Tigers got the ball down to the Redman 16, but that came at the end of the first half when Natick was willing to give up the short yardage gains to stay away from the big play.

"We just made too many mistakes," said Capodilupo. "Against a great team you can't do those things. Offensively they were just excellent. ... They owned the trenches."

The drive at the end of the first half was the only sustained effort of the day for Newton. Getting the ball with 2:08 to go (down 21-2) on their own 25, the Tigers began to pique the crowd's interest with a couple of solid gains in a row.

Sophomore Mark Adams provided most of the impetus, with gains of 12, 14 and 12 yards on the nine-play drive. That accounted for most of his team-leading 47-yard total.

A 17-yard pass from Mike Ryan to Britt Ryan (an excellent fingertip catch) provided another reason for the North crowd to cheer, but the Redmen were just waiting for the clock to run down.

A 12-yard Adams scamper got the ball down to the 16, and suddenly the Tigers were in striking range. When Mike Ryan lofted one to Steve Bliss in the end zone, it looked as though the fans might be in for a respectable game after all. A little yellow flag back on the line of scrimmage (illegal procedure) dashed those thoughts, and two plays later Dave Reynolds' interception in the end zone ended the half. He was on the receiving end of three of the four Newton North turnovers on the day.

Capodilupo called the nullified TD "a turning point. That took the steam out of us."

The rest of the game belonged to the visitors from start to finish. They scored the first two times they had the ball, on drives of 69 and 25 yards, while North accumulated -9 yards in two possessions.

Forte, who took over the workhorse role for injured fullback Bob Giargiari (twisted ankle in the first quarter), capped both drives with TDs of three and one yards. The senior finished with 96 yards on 18 carries to lead both clubs.

North turned the ball over on its third possession and within two plays it was 21-0, as quarterback Chris Forte found Andy Wilde for a nine-yard scoring strike.

In that first half, the Tigers had four first downs: three came on the last drive, and the other ended in a fumble that turned the ball over.

The North diehards who still had hope at halftime were quickly delivered from their fantasy. Quarter number three was almost a carbon-copy of the first. The Redmen scored on an 80-yard, six-play drive, stopped the Tigers on four downs, then punched another TD in after a 67-yard march.

Even the weapons were familiar. Chris Forte and Wilde hooked up on a 43-yard connection to make it 28-2, and Greg Forte banged in from the nine for the other score.

The reserves came on early in the fourth quarter for Natick, but it really didn't make much difference. The Tigers fumbled the ball away at their own 48 and seven plays later it was 42-2. Backup quarterback Dennis Green hit backup running back Mike McTague for a 15-yard toss on his only attempt to close out the scoring.

About the only bright spot of the day, except for the safety, was Dimitri Diatchenko's 69-yard punt in the second quarter. From his own 20, he sailed it over the deep man and got a great roll before the ball was finally downed on the Natick 11.

Trying to recover from this isn't going to be easy for the Tigers. Going from Natick to Brockton (at Brockton on Saturday at 1:30), is like a survivor of the Titanic choosing the Lusitania for their next sea voyage.

"We can't get any lower than we are now," said Capodilupo.

North overtakes Latin in volleyball

Newton North erased a two-point deficit in the first game and came on to score a 15-13, 15-11 triumph over Boston Latin in a girls' volleyball game at the Newton North Gym Friday.

With the Tigers down, 13-11, Latin's Vivian Woo sent a hard spike over the net. Tiger senior Margie Proia picked it up and got it to setter Tesse Forbes, who fed Joanna Giddon. A power dink threw the Wolfpack off and got in, turning the game around.

Nancy Sullivan and Wendy Rogers both served very well, while the Tigers got good jobs from freshman setter Christine Sullivan and junior middle blocker Niki Cradle.

Lancers hang on

Though Sacred Heart was "a little tougher than we expected," according to Coach Rose Bertucci, her Newton Catholic girls still managed a three-game victory on Thursday, 15-3, 15-17, 15-7.

Cheryl Chagnon's passing and spiking helped spark the third-game decision, along with a couple of good spikes by captain Joanne Abruzzi. Ann Kling also played well, as did Dawn Foley off the bench.

The first game was somewhat easy, as Linda Leary started by serving seven winners in a row. Abruzzi followed with three more, and the Lancers were at 15th before their sixth girl got to serve.

Sacred Heart fought back in the second game, though Angela Canty kept it close with nine points for Newton.

Tigers top South

Newton North got a boost from freshman Jody Rodgers, who nailed five consecutive points for the Tigers, and answered with two-game sweep of host Newton South, 15-6, 15-7.

Senior Joanna Giddon also played well for North with her placement of shots and junior Nancy Sullivan contributed with some excellent serves and strong defensive play.

For South, Jenny Spinelli came off the bench to play consistant ball and Ellen Hackel also played well. Junior Hien Lavare had a strong game.

South swim team handed first setback

BOSTON — Boston Latin built a 20-point lead by the end of the freestyle and that's the way it stayed, as the Wolfpack took an 88-68 swim decision over Newton South at Latin on Thursday.

"They were stronger than I thought they'd be," said Lion coach Scott Pohlman, whose club suffered its first loss of the season. "Our times are still coming down though."

Amy Freedman came through with a first in the butterfly in 1:16.49, then went right back into the pool for second in the backstroke.

Wendy Meltzer brought her time down in the breaststroke, finishing second, and also was the runnerup in the individual medley.

The summary:

Feeney's penalty shot saves Tigers

NEWTON — Tara Feeney drilled home a penalty stroke midway through the second half to lift Newton North to a 2-1 field hockey victory over Wayland on Thursday at North. Given the chance to break a 1-1 tie, Feeney flicked the shot into the lower left corner from seven yards out.

The Warriors came right back to put the pressure on, but the Tiger defense held, led by senior sweeper Kiera Lymperis.

The Tigers had taken a 1-0 lead at 4:15 of the first half when Marcie Plotkin ended a scramble in front of the net with a goal.

Wayland answered at 5:20, but that would be the last time the Warriors would beat North goalie Felicia Moschella. The junior made 10 saves and "played great," according to Coach Andrea Muccini.

Also playing well were Beth Lewinger and Noelle Borelli.

South blanked

Newton South lost its second straight shutout, as host Lincoln-Sudbury pushed across a pair of second-half goals for a 2-0 triumph. Earlier, the Lions lost to Bedford, 4-0.

South coach Patti Mosca was impressed with her club's defensive effort, holding the potent Warriors scoreless until midway through the second half. She credited L-S' superior depth with being the difference on a warm afternoon.

"They subbed in four girls at a time, while we had only two people on the bench."

Junior center halfback Kristann Wilmore led the South effort on defense.

Despite the early troubles, Mosca thinks her club "looks stronger than last year. There's a lot of spirit."

Lion harriers shade Wolfpack, 27-28

NEWTON — They don't come any closer than Newton South's cross country meet against Boston Latin on Wednesday at South. It all came down to who finished seventh and who finished eighth, with Lion sophomore Mark Haley beating Rob McDonough of the Wolfpack across the line by 11 seconds for a 27-28 victory.

Another 10th-grader, Mike Silverstein, won the meet for the home team. He covered the 2.7 miles in 14:45, only 30 seconds off the course record.

Silverstein had to hold off a challenge from Bill Lohan of Latin, who finished six seconds back. That was a reversal of last year's outcome, when Lohan edged Silverstein. Both runners improved this year, but South's runner gained a little more.

The same circumstances surrounded the 3-4 runners. Again South's Len Nyberg and Latin's Jay Willis both improved, and again Nyberg had the better of things.

Benson Chu took fifth for the visitors, but Matt Pickett grabbed sixth for South and when Haley came in next, the meet was in hand.

Lion coach Paul McCarthy was most pleased with Pickett's performance, saying, "he really surprised me. He's always had the potential, and really came through.

"We had to come in in those middle places between four and nine. That's what made the difference."

The summary:

Newton's Bograd club champion

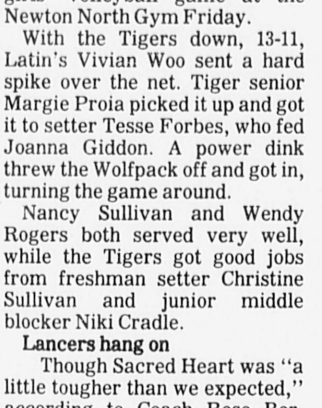

NORWOOD — Phil Bograd saved his best for last, and it payed off Thursday as the Newton Highland's resident captured the Men's Club Championship at the Lost Brook G.C., dropping Milton's Warren McLaughlin in match play.

Bograd had won his first three matches by rather close scores, but in the finals, the 74-year-old retired music instructor just did not miss, winning six strokes up with five holes to play.

"I had him two up on the front nine," said Bogard, a Newton Highland resident for 40 years. "Then I won the 10th, 11th, and 12th before he put the ball in the water on the 13th. And that was it."

Bograd is a retired from the Bedford, N.H. public school system where he taught music. He also played '40 and '50's music with bands at both the Frolic and the Wonderland Ball Room in Revere.

He has been golfing only seven years, but Bograd said it helps his game now that he golfs "five days a week."

Renaissance in art

Given these success stories, what has caused such an upswing in Newton's art world over the past decade?

According to Simon, the answer is "strong, committed and working boards," consisting of long-time Newton residents "who had a vision."

The Arts Center board of directors consists of businessmen, such as Houghton Chemicals owner Proctor Houghton, high school teachers, housewives and artists. One noted artist on the board is Daisy Brand, a master craftsperson whose pottery was chosen by the League of Arts and Crafts on Newbury Street as a gift to An Wang for funding the construction of the Wang Center for the Performing Arts.

But strong boards are not the only factors contributing to Newton's art boom.

Another organization playing a key role in supporting the arts is an umbrella fund-raising group called Fund for the Arts in Newton (FAN).

According to Plaut, who was instrumental in forming the organization three years ago, the group this year alone has raised $142,000 for seven affiliated arts organizations, which includes the NSO, the All Newton Music School, the Newton Arts Center, the Newton Art Association, Newton Cultural Affairs, the Newton Country Players, the Newton Choral Society, and the Newton Cable Television Foundation.

Plaut launched FAN with a festival that lasted 15 days and included 22 events. During the first year, she held a "Big Ball" fundraiser for FAN in Bloomingdales' furnishings department. The party, which is now repeated annually, took place amidst the store's expensive furniture. These affairs have never resulted in damaging the furnishings, and the department floor has always been cleaned up by opening time the next day.

This year FAN added another event to raise money for Newton arts — the Celebrity Golf Tournament, which was held Sept. 23 at the Woodland Country Club.

With this extra financial help, FAN affiliates are sponsoring over 100 special events this year, says Plaut, which "shows you what happens when groups cooperate."

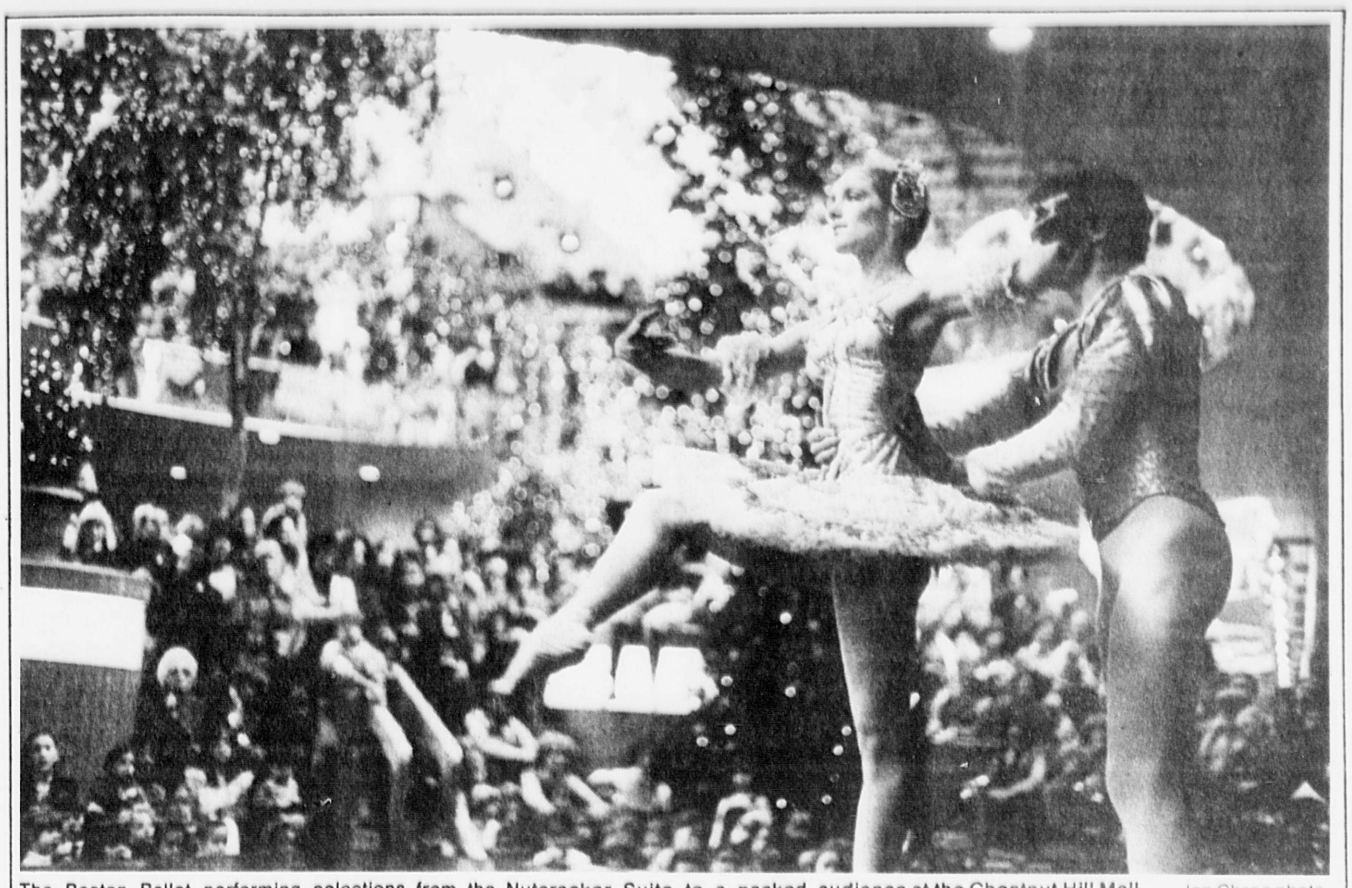

In addition, the groups offer numerous courses in painting, dance, photography, crafts and other art forms.

However, says Plaut, "none of this would have been possible" without backing from Parks and Recreation Department Commissioner Russ Halloran and Major Theodore D. Mann, who initially requested that Plaut devote 20 percent of her time to organizing FAN.

The concept for an umbrella fund raising organization for the arts was brought to Newton by Lisle Baker, who grew up in Kentucky where a Fund for the Arts had been established. Now a resident of Newton, Baker presented the idea to the mayor, who urged him speak about it to the Newton arts community.

As a result, FAN has served "a real need," says Simon, especially since "we're all struggling for the same funds from the same foundations and corporations.

"A lot of energies are taken up through fund raising, so FAN allowed directors to feel more free to concentrate on programming. The idea was to take some of the pressure, if not all of it, off our backs."

FAN raises $40,000 of the Arts Center's $200,000 budget, says Simon, which, in essence, "makes up our deficit."

Another fund-raising group for the arts in Newton is the Arts Lottery, which this year brought in $20,000 for local art organizations, according to Plaut.

Boston area resident Jacquelyn O'Reilly, whose daughter was with the Boston Ballet, started the Arts Lottery four years ago by selling tickets for $5 each. Because this technique didn't work, she pressed to have the lottery incorporated in the state megabucks organization. Now $3 million in megabucks money a year is given to arts lottery councils in Massachusetts communities. Newton received the $20,000 based on proposals submitted by its council.

Still, many FAN affiliates are supported through a variety of sources. For example, the Newton Symphony Orchestra is also funded through a combination of grants, including those from the Massachusetts Council of the Arts and Humanities, Harvard Music Associates and the Polaroid Foundation.

The All Newton Music School, which has remained autonomous from FAN, gets its funding through a numerous sources, including course fees. And as a result, the school offers Newton residents 35 free faculty concerts a year, 32 chamber groups, four orchestras, an opera workshop, a large Suzuki program, which now boasts upwards of 150 students, plus ballet and creative movement courses, musical lectures, luncheons, and outreach programs.

Combining all these various art programs together adds up to one thing — the number of programs available for both attendance and participation in Newton is larger than ever and growing.

"In the past, Newton was just a bedroom community," says Plaut. "Boston was always the cultural center. Now, people here can not only attend plays and concerts, they can participate in them."

"I think a lot of it is economic," says Paulette Bowes, associate director of the All Newton Music School. "People used to be much more open about going downtown, paying a lot of money. Now there's a lot more pride in the community — a resurgence in dedication to the town. I grew up in Newton and I wouldn't have anything to do with the All Newton Music School. I took my lessons from the Conservatory."

For further information on any of the above programs call 332-9110 for FAN affiliated organizations or the All Newton Music School number, 527-4553.

Kirk scheduled to talk on Dem party's future

NEWTON — The Newton Democratic City Committee is proudly hosting a reception-homecoming for Newton's own Paul Kirk, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, on Thursday, Oct. 3, from 5:30 p.m.-8 p.m. at the home of Beverly and Bill Carmen, 10 Dartmouth St., West Newton. This will provide an exciting opportunity for people to meet and hear Kirk speak on the future of the Democratic party.

Paul Kirk

Paul Kirk, 46, married, a graduate of St. Sebastian High School, Harvard College, and Harvard Law School, is coming back to his political roots. In the early 60's he was a member of the Newton Ward Two Democratic Committee, and continues to have local roots with two sisters in the area: Josephine Clearly of Auburndale and Kathleen Kirk of Watertown. Moving onto the national political scene, he was a member of the Robert F. Kennedy campaign staff and served as Senator Edward Kennedy's campaign manager in the abortive presidential campaign of 1980. This year he became Chairman of the National Democratic Committee. This reception provides a golden opportunity for Democrats to meet Paul Kirk first hand.

This sun space combines greenhouse engineering principles and the charm and drama of curving arches.

Sun spaces capture sun's energy

By Monica Perez
Copley News Service

The sun. Vital to all life on Earth. So much a part of our lives we take it for granted. Yet for the savvy home owner, the sun is a significant asset. Solar energy keeps a house warm and light and can contribute to decor. And you don't have to give up a non-solar home to tap into benefits, said Lee Stanley, a solar energy expert.

"Just adding windows to the south wall of your home can begin to bring you into the solar age," he said.

"You can also consider installing solar collectors on your roof or walls for water and home heating. And the particularly ambitious, technologically inclined might want to investigate photovoltaic cells — which convert sunlight to electricity — or wind generators."

Still another option is a sun space add-on room that collects and distributes solar energy for home heating while providing expanded living space and room for indoor plant cultivation.

A sun space attaches directly to a home on its own foundation. To capture the sun's heat and light, a sun space faces no more than 30 degrees off true south to the southeast or southwest.

The outside wall of the home becomes the back wall of the new room. An existing door can provide access or a window can be expanded into a door. Front glass slants to let in solar energy during short winter days. A roof overhang or external sunshades block out sun rays during hot summer months. Roof and wall insulation seal captured winter heat and block out outside summer warmth.

"Some people call them sun garden rooms," Stanley said. "Others call them Florida rooms — unless they live in California. Urban Americans call them solariums.

"Older folks might describe the solar add-ons as an update of Grandma's old sun porch."

Modern sun spaces evolved out of the old greenhouse — dedicated 20 years ago to plants. In the early 1970s, as energy conservation became important, people looked to greenhouses to help solarize their homes. Word got around — greenhouses were remarkably efficient in capturing solar heat. Soon people started using those add-on solar rooms as living spaces.

Although still quite functional for raising plants and solarizing a conventional home, today's sun space also complements the decor of the home it's attached to. Some feature dramatic redwood arches. Gone is the all-glass look of the old greenhouse.

Stanley's company — Solar Additions Inc. of Cambridge, N.Y. — produces customized preassembled and do-it-yourself sun spaces. To date, American home owners have added more than 100,000 sun spaces to their homes.

So popular have they become that Solar Additions' American Sun division launched a special kind of solar housing designed around sun space concepts. "It's the added room that heats the house," Stanley said. "From the sun space, a variable-speed fan controlled by thermostat can spread warm air throughout your home."

Americans desire style

By Dana Walker
United Press International

Americans, purveyors to the world of the bean bag chair, the lava lamp and Naugahyde, have finally acquired good taste.

But the new American home furnishings consumer — new because of what is believed to be the biggest revolution in home decorating since the Art Deco period — has had a little help from some friends: the designers.

Some, like Ralph Lauren, Calvin Klein, Bill Blass, Laura Ashley, Christian Dior, Perry Ellis, come from the world of high fashion and are relative newcomers to home furnishings. Others, most notably American Michael Graves and Italian Ettore Sottsass, have expanded their architectural roots.

Still others, such as American Frank Lloyd Wright, Swede E. Gunnar Asplund, Charles Rennie Mackintosh of Scotland and Le Corbusier of France, are no longer even alive, but are still having a great influence on this new American refinement.

The graduation to good taste, the experts say, has resulted from increasing exposure to Europe and is reflected in a rebirth of the European way of decorating and furnishing the home — with style, and most important, quality.

"Obviously communications and the growth of all of this has made this a much smaller world," said Geri Crossland, interior design consultant at Bloomingdale's in the Virginia suburbs of Washington, D.C.

"People want the quality and are finally appreciating the quality, be it a linen sheet or a well-designed piece of pottery done just for the beauty of the piece."

Christian Laine of the Chicago Merchandise Mart, which has the largest trade volume in furniture in the world, said Americans finally have "the opportunity to have prestigious name furniture to build an environment" in their homes.

"It's really a phenomenon of the '80s. In Europe it's always been that way."

Americans are now considering how long the furniture will last and who the designer is. "And it's not in a snob way either. It's in a more aware way," he said.

"I think the fashion industry led the way; the whole phenomenon of the '70s when a designer suit or a designer dress sort of filtered into designer furniture."

One of the most important contributions, Laine said, has been made by Graves, whom he credited with setting the color palette of the 1980s — pastels — and replacing the American minimalism of the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s with classicism.

"I don't think there's been quite the type of excitement in interiors happening since the Art Deco period" of the 1920s and 1930s, he said.

"Before, history was dead. Today, modernism is dead," Laine said.

Jana Charters, sales representative for Atelier International Ltd. in The Design Center, a Washington, D.C., wholesale furniture mart, agreed.

An example, Charters said, are the early 1900s-era Asplund, Mackintosh and LeCorbusier design furniture sold by her company to the designers' original specifications, including a dining chair Asplund designed in the 1930s as a commercial cafeteria chair in Sweden. It now retails for $710 — for one.

Most of the fashion designers have concentrated on linens, towels, wall coverings and upholstery fabrics to create a mood in the home, though Lauren has recently branched out into rattan furniture.

Adding a designer touch to the home usually means adding to the cost, but Crossland and Charters agreed the quality is worth the expense.

"There's a quality difference in the designer lines," Crossland said.

"The mentality in Europe is you buy furniture pieces once," Charters said. "The dollars over a lifetime are actually less."

And who is buying designer furnishings?

"I think it's a customer who has always been there," Crossland said. "But it's a more aware customer."

Bloomingdale's plans to cash in on the booming designer furnishings movement this fall with a promotion of the Italian Memphis movement.

These artisans from around the world have taken up the cause of design for design's sake, with no thought to cost, production or sales.

The idea, of course, has produced a line of design products — everything from calendars to teapots — that cost a lot and are selling big.

Pitfalls await real estate investors

By Gail Collins
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK — Magazines that specialize in investment advice seem to be crammed with pictures of novice investors who made a fortune buying houses, renting them out, and then selling a few years later for a big profit.

But real estate writer Carolyn Janik says the economy has turned against such investments.

"Leveraging was the key," she said. "It worked fine when houses were going up 10-15-20 percent a year and interest rates were low."

But in most parts of the country now, Janik said, investors "who don't understand the dynamics of low-inflation housing" are getting trapped by a negative leverage, where interest rates are higher than the appreciation of the house.

The average single family house in the United States has been rising in value by only a little more than 5 percent a year, she said. "If you put $10,000 down, and pay 13 percent interest, even with a tax benefit there's a question of whether you can really make money."

Janik is co-author of "All America's Real Estate Book," a new Viking publication that provides more than 800 pages worth of tips on buying, selling, renting and investing in real estate.

Her warnings about the dangers of investing in an uncertain market are not restricted to single-family homes. Among her other caveats:

—"Most people think the way to get involved in real estate is to buy a small apartment building. Statistically, a lot fail. They don't have skilled apartment management, don't understand screening tenants. Rent control can be an absolute downer."

—"Raw land is a bad investment. There's no depreciation, no tax breaks at all. No income at all, but you must pay local taxes. It's hard to get a mortgage on raw land, although you often can get one from the seller. It's hard to sell raw land."

—"Vaction homes are in turmoil. The rumor has it that's going to be the first place Congress will cut as an interest deduction."

—"The government is coming down really hard on tax shelter syndicates and right now they're coming under close scrutiny. Unless you're very familiar with the syndicate, avoid them until things settle down."

All is not lost, however. Rental properties, if well-managed, are in general a good investment, Janik said. "Most of the country is hurting for rental housing — there's so little of it being built."

Janik's favorite investment is the owner-occupied multi-family home.

"I don't want to have a mammogram – they might find something."
Ignoring breast cancer doesn't make it go away.
Finding it in the early stages does.
The earlier a problem is discovered, the greater the chances for successful treatment. If it's detected in time, breast cancer is curable.
No examination can find the disease as early as mammography – a safe, simple test that takes about fifteen minutes. If you're over thirty-five or if there's been a history of breast cancer in your family, call to make an appointment or ask your doctor to arrange for you to have a mammogram at Precheck.
In most cases a mammogram finds only healthy tissue. That can save you worry. But if it does find "something," that can save your life.

Old-time art group begins new season

NEWTON — The Newton Art Association again brings a season of programs to the community, with its first meeting on Oct. 3.

The group came into being in 1949 when James King Bonnar organized a group of artists. By 1964, the artists became incorporated as a non-profit organization. Two years ago, NAA became one of the four charter members of the Fund for the Arts in Newton.

During these past years, many in the community have enjoyed the opportunity to attend regular meetings which provide a wide range of programs including demonstrations in all media by New England artists.

These meetings also provide a forum for critiques and the exchange of ideas and lectures. Meetings are held from October through May on the first and third Thursdays of the month at 7:30 p.m. at the Workshop, 72 Columbus St., Newton Highlands.

Clement Micarelli will demonstrate his portraiture in oils at the first meeting on Oct. 3. New members are always welcome. For more information, call 332-5459 or 964-0149.

Nantucket basket class to begin September 30

NEWTON — Arts in the Parks offers the opportunity to learn the craft of the Nantucket Lightship Basket fashioned in the same manner as their 19th century counterparts in a five-week course beginning Sept. 30, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., at the Burr Park Fieldhouse in Newton Corner.

Taught by Martha Lawrence who since childhood has summered in Nantucket, the distinctive Nantucket Lightship Basket course recreates a craft which evolved in the mid-19th century from wooden splint baskets made by Algonquin Indians. As Nantucketers adapted the Indian baskets to their needs, they introduced hardwood bottoms for durability and utilized wooden splints with rattan arriving in abundance from the Pacific aboard Nantucket whaling vessels.

Between 1856 and 1905 Nantucketers manned the "South Shoal Lightship," which marked treacherous shoals 24 miles off Nantucket. To fill the long month of their hazardous duty, the men constructed extraordinarily graceful, closely-woven baskets and inadvertently contributed the name that identifies the sturdy baskets to this day.

Registration is $35 for Newton residents, and $30 for senior citizens. Non-Newton residents add $5 to these fees. To register, call Arts in the Parks at 552-7130.

The material fee is $30, payable with registration. To register by mail, send a check payable to Arts in the Parks to Newton Parks and Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Newton, 02166. Class size is limited.

Gale Fuller

Local mezzo-soprano to perform in Festival

Gale Fuller, of Newton, will sing in the Stephen Foster, Gershwin and Operetta composers concert sponsored by the Boston Academy of Music through its Summer Festival series. The concert will be held at the First and Second Church in Boston, on Friday, Sept. 27, and Saturday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p.m.

Fuller, a mezzo-soprano, has sung with many Boston-area organizations including the Boston Lyric Opera and the Boston Concert Opera. A native of Chicago, Ill., Fuller has a bachelor's degree from Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore and holds an M.M. from the New England Conservatory. Most recently she sang the role of Urban in Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots" with the American Opera Theatre, and Adalgisa in "Norma" in Hartford, Conn.

Along with an active performance schedule, Fuller teaches voice at Brandeis University and conducts private lessons in her Newton home.

Resident to direct trumpet ensemble

NEWTON — Berklee College of Music faculty member Ken Cervenka, noted trumpeter, composer, arranger, and resident of Newton, will direct his masterful ensemble in "Trumpet Madness," an exciting concert of original and contemporary jazz, at 8:15 p.m. on Oct. 7 in the Berklee Performance Center.

An honors graduate of Berklee, where he majored in Jazz Composition and Arranging, Cervenka has performed at premier musical showcases throughout the United States, with such luminaries as James Williams, Jaki Byard and the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, and enjoys a reputation as one of Boston's most in-demand studio musicians.

In his upcoming concert, Cervenka will lead his dynamic ensemble, comprised of the finest Berklee faculty instrumentalists, in a spirited and diverse program featuring works by such artists as Lee Morgan and Wayne Shorter, as well as compositions written and arranged by Cervenka expressly for the occasion.

Cervenka is Instructor of Theory and Ensemble Performance at Berklee.

Cultural arts program listings now available

NEWTON — Arts in the Parks' fall brochure listing adult crafts courses, children's enrichment programs, children's theatre performances, special events including folk concerts by leading performers, Friday afternoon at Boston Symphony and much more, is now available from the Newton Parks and Recreation Department.

Arts in the Parks is the year-round cultural arts program of the Newton Parks and Recreation Department, beginning its 11th year of programming for people of all ages. An award-winning program, Arts in the Parks, gathers the best quality children's ensembles.

A highlight of the fall season will be "A Children's Concert for the Whole Family" featuring Canada's leading children's entertainers Sharon, Lois and Bram, appearing for the first time in New England. Returning this year will be the ever popular Rosen/Shontz for children and Bill Staines.

For a free copy of the Arts in the Parks brochure, send a self-addressed envelope with a 44-cent stamp to Arts in the Parks, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, MA. 02166. Call 552-7120 for more information.

Quilt took off for outer space

NEWTON — Susan Turback, patchwork quilting instructor for the Arts in the Parks program of the Newton Parks and Recreation Department, has the distinction of being the first quiltmaker, anywhere, to have her work taken into space. In July, her silk applique quilt went on the Challenger Space Shuttle mission.

Exhibiting your quilt in outer space does take some connections. In addition to her Arts in the Parks teaching, Sue works in the same department at M.I.T. from which astronaut Tony England graduated. As he prepared for his trip, Astronaut England looked to take an object with him that would symbolize M.I.T.'s Earth, Atmospheric, and Planetary Science Department and the Earth Research Laboratory.

Sue's quilt combined the logos of the Department and the Lab, using all silk fabrics which fulfilled the requirement of reducing flammable materials aboard. The quilt eventually will be returned to M.I.T. where it will be placed on permanent display.

Class of 1960 reunion set for October 12

NEWTON — The Newton High School Class of 1960 is holding its 25th reunion on Saturday, Oct. 12 at the Marriott Hotel in Newton.

For more information call 552-7530 days, 969-0241 evenings and weekends.

Captured by contras: Pair to recount ordeal in Nicaragua

Shirley Cocker and Peter Pierce

Shirley Cocker and Peter Pierce will give accounts of their recent capture by Nicaraguan contras on Sunday, Oct. 6, at the First Unitarian Society, 1326 Washington St., West Newton. They will speak at the 10:30 a.m. lay-led worship service and again at noon. There will be an opportunity to meet the speakers personally at a social hour at 11:30 a.m. There will be ample time for audience questions at the noon program.

Cocker and Pierce, both teachers at Manchester Elementary School in Manchester, Vt., were among 29 Witness for Peace delegates taken at gunpoint on the San Juan River. Also taken captive were 15 journalists and nine Nicaraguans on board the Peace Flotilla which was traveling on the river dividing Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

T.V.'s impact on children conference set

NEWTON — Benjamin M. Spock and Newtonville resident Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television (ACT), will share the podium at a conference on television and children Oct. 3 at the Yale University School of Medicine.

The medicine school's Office of Continuing Medical Education is sponsoring the day-long conference to inform pediatricians, nurses, parents, teachers, mental health professionals and public policymakers about television's good and bad influences on children and adolescents.

A five member task force on children and television that the American Academy of Pediatrics established in 1983 also will comment on the progress made in improving program quality and working with networks to change children's television.

Spock, a nationally-known pediatrician, political activist and author of Baby & Child Care, will give the keynote address at 9:30 a.m. in the medical school's Mary S. Harkness Auditorium, where all of the sessions will meet. He will talk about raising children in the television era.

At 11 a.m., Charren will discuss children's advertising, and at 1:30 p.m. she will offer some advice about what pediatricians should do about television.

Conference participants will hear television's viewpoint at 2:45 p.m. when ABC Producer Daniel Wilson presents "TV at its Best: The Late Great Me." George Gerbner, Ph.D., professor and dean of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications, will end the conference by discussing "Growing Up with Television."

To attend the conference, contact the office of continuing education, Sterling Hall of Medicine, 333 Cedar St., or call 203-785-4578. Registration is $45.

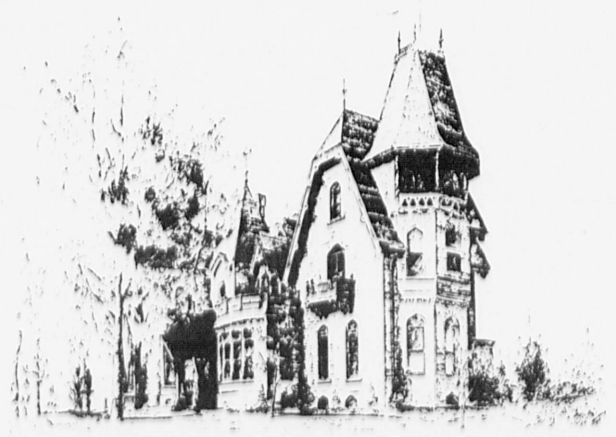

Symphony tickets available

NEWTON — For an afternoon at the Boston Symphony Hall, Arts in the Parks, Newton Parks and Recreation Department has arranged to secure tickets and provide round-trip transportation for the concert on Friday, Oct. 18, featuring Seiji Ozawa, conductor, and violinist Viktoria Mullova playing the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto. Prokofiev's excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" are also on the program.

Tickets are $18 for middle orchestra, first balcony or second balcony, and $13.50 for rear orchestra or second balcony. Transportation is $4.

Bus or van, depending on the size of the group, leaves from the Albemarle Fieldhouse at 1 p.m. and returns no later than 5 p.m.

For reservations, send a check payable to Arts in the Parks, to Newton Parks and Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale, MA 02166. If more innormation is nneded, call Arts in the Parks at 552-7120.

Annual Newton Hisorical Society House Tour will be held from 1 to 4:30 p.m. Two condominiums in "The Castle" are among the homes to be opened to the public. Admission is $5 for members and $7 for nonmembers. For further information, call the Jackson Homestead at 552-7238.

Mrs. Hoover was born in Boston, attended Girls High School and later made her home in Auburndale. She had worked as a ward secretary in the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, a position she held for 18 years.

She was also a member of St. Bernard's Sodalilty and the R.S.V.P. of West Newton, and she was active with many senior citizen's activities.

She was predeceased by her husband, Henry M. Hoover. She leaves a daughter, Rosemary Machunski of Auburndale and four sons, Alfred S. of Everett; Henry M. Jr. of Waltham; Robert L. Hoover of Auburndale and James I. Hoover of Waltham.

She was also predeceased by two daughters, Mary Kathryn Kumm and Therese Gardiner.

She also leaves 18 grandchildren and 13 great grandchildren.

Services were held in St. Bernard's Church and were followed by graveside services at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Arrangements by Lyons and Hayes of West Newton.

Joe Champagne, 96
Entertainer, ballroom dance teacher

BROOKLINE — A funeral service was held this morning in the Levine Chapel, Brookline, for Joe Champagne, 96, of Tiverton, R. I., formerly of Chestnut Hill.

For more than 60 years, Mr. Champagne and his wife, the former Libby Krensky, were dance partners, entertainers and instructors, who held classes in the ballroom of Boston's Old Copley Plaza Hotel.

A resident of Tiverton, R. I., he had formerly lived in Chestnut Hill and in St. Petersburg, Fla. He was a graduate of Boston Latin School and of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

As an MIT student, Mr. Champagne had clerked summers at a Nantasket Beach hotel and when the management found he could dance, he was offered a room where he could teach dancing to hotel guests.

In the 1920s, '30s and '40s, he ran cotillion dance classes and, together with his wife, whom he married in 1924, they taught and entertained worldwide until he was 80.

For years the Champagnes were featured in the nightclubs of transatlantic liners. They were on the stage of the SS Normandie in October, 1932, when it was on its maiden voyage to New York and also entertained during the voyages of the Italian liners Rex and Andrea Doria.

From the late 1940s until the 1960s, the Champagnes taught ballroom dance to officers and their wives at the Naval War College at Newport, R. I.

Also a pianist and singer, Mr. Champagne helped form and appeared with the Billy Lozee-Champagne Orchestra of the 1930s.

Besides his wife, Mr. Champagne leaves his son, Richard, of Newton; his daughter, Dorothea C. Cadiff of Boston; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Angelo N. Leporini, 95
Newton landscaper for 60 years

NEWTON — Angelo N. Leporini, 95, died Monday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a brief illness.

He was a Newton resident for more than 70 years and was a self-employed landscape gardener for more than 60 years around Newton.

He was the husband of the late Francesca (Sidoti) Leporini and is survived by two sons, William and Frank Leporini of Newton Centre and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held on Thursday at 8:15 a.m. at the Andrew J. Magni Funeral Home, 365 Watertown St., Newton, followed by a Funeral Mass in the Sacred Heart Church, Newton Centre, at 9 a.m.

Interment will be private.

Louis Z. Motyka, 65
World War II veteran

WEST NEWTON — Louis Z. Motyka, 65, died suddenly Friday at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Boston, he has been a West Newton resident for more than 25 years.

He was a retired machinist and had served as a corporal with the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II at which time he was wounded.

He was a member of the disabled American Veterans. He was a former member of the Waltham lodge of Moose for many years.

He is survived by his wife, Barbara (Myshrall) Motyka; a daughter, Katherine Delaney of Waltham; three sons, Stephen of West Newton; Kenneth R. of Sarasota, Fla., and Paul S. of Waltham.

In addition, he leaves five grandchildren.

His funeral was held Tuesday from the Brasco and Son Memorial, 773 Moody St., Waltham, with a Mass of Christian Burial at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton.

Interment followed at St. Mary's Cemetery in Needham.

Phoebe (DeSimone) Rubin

AUBURNDALE — A funeral mass was celebrated last week in St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, for Phoebe (DeSimone) Rubin, 88, of Auburndale.

Born in Boston, she had lived in Auburndale for the past five years.

She leaves her son, Edmund Grasso of Lexington; her daughter, Marilyn Kolkenbeck of Auburndale; her sister, Eleanor C. DiSimone of Lexington; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Arrangements were by Lyons & Hayes Funeral Home, West Newton.

Raymond W. Stanley, 91

YORK HARBOR, Maine — Memorial services have been scheduled for Raymond W. Stanley, 91, a former vice president and advertising director of the First National Bank of Boston, who died Sunday after a brief illness.

Born in Newton, he was the son of the Stanley Steamer inventor, Francis E. Stanley.

He was a graduate of Newton High School and Harvard University's Class of 1917 where he majored in design.

Mr. Stanley designed airplanes for the Air Force during World War I after transferring to the Air Force from the Army.

He was advertising manager for the Old Colony Trust Co. in Boston, which was later acquired by the First National Bank of Boston, from the 1920s to his retirement at age 65. He was vice president and director of advertising for the bank when he retired.

A founder and member of the Lunch Club of New York, he was also a member of The Country Club, the Boston Aethenaeum, the Antique Automobile Assn., the Genealogical Society of Boston and the Audubon Society.

He is survived by a son, Francis E. of Santa Fe, N.M.; a daughter, Joan Cigliano of York; seven grandchildren; two great grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Florence Louise Clifton, born in Newton

MILLIS — A funeral service was held Thursday night at the Church of Christ in Millis at 7:30 p.m., for Florence Louise (Grethe) Clifton. Burial was in Freeport, Maine.

Until her retirement in 1979, Mrs. Clifton worked for the Town of Dedham Welfare Department.

Born in Newton, she was a graduate of Newton High School, attended the University of Maine and graduated from the University of Georgia with a BA degree. She continued her studies at Harvard working on her master's degree. She was a member of the Millis Golden Lions Club and the Norwood Stroke Club.

She was the mother of Charlotte A. Kayajanian of Franklin and Rochelle R. Auletta of Singapore.

Arrangements by the Roberts-Mitchell Funeral Service in Millis.

Joseph C. DeWolfe, born in Newton

DERRY, N.H. — A funeral was held Sunday morning for Joseph Clarence DeWolfe, 75, who died Friday at his home here after a brief illness.

Born in Newton, he has been a resident of Derry for the past 10 years and prior to that had been a West Newton resident for many years. Mr. DeWolfe had been employed for more than 25 years as a truck driver for the Ideal Concrete Block Co., Waltham.

He was a World War II, U.S. Army veteran.

He was husband of the late Lena (McCallum) DeWolfe. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Janice Peterson of San Fernando Valley, Calif.; three sisters, Mrs. Lily Clark of Michigan; Mrs. Bertha Mullen of West Newton; Mrs. Elta LeBlanc of Waltham; two brothers, Raymond and Clifford, both of Derry.

In addition, he leaves four grandchildren and one great grandchild. His funeral was held from the Brasco and Son Memorial in Waltham with a Mass of Christian Burial at St. Charles Church.

Interment followed at Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Leo Pollack, sister of Chestnut Hill

CANTON — A funeral service was held Thursday in the Schlossberg, Goldman, Solomon Chapel, Canton, for Leo Pollack, 62, of Stoughton.

Locally he is survived by a sister, Beatrice Rudnick of Chestnut Hill. He also is survived by his wife, Diana (Goodman); two daughters, Susan Pollack of Virginia, Joanne Pollack of Oregon; two other sisters, Miriam Krimms of New York, Ruth Arnstein of Florida. He was the brother of the late Daniel Pollack.

Born in Boston, he was a shoe salesman.

Lazzaro 'brought life'

By John Moroney
Staff Writer

WALTHAM — An elderly woman stepped from behind her pew, stopping a visitor who was leaving Our Lady Comforter of the Afflicted last Friday.

"Excuse me," she said, clutching a pair of black rosary beads. "Who was the Memorial Mass for?"

The Mass, the visitor explained, was for John C. Lazzaro who died on Sept. 14 when his car was rear-ended by a taxi and exploded into flames at a toll booth on Interstate 95 in Stratford, Conn. A 28-year-old Newton man, formerly of Stamford, Conn., Lazzaro worked as a software development engineer for Hewlett Packard in Waltham and Andover. Prior to joining Hewlett Packard, he worked as a chemical engineer for the Fairfax Hospital Association.

"What a shame," the woman said, falling back into her seat. "What a shame."

The Mass was conceived and attended by about 80 Hewlett Packard employees because "Jack had touched so many lives."

"You are here because you loved and respected him," Rev. Leonard Burke, pastor of the Trapelo Road church, said. "What higher praise can a man receive."

Burke told Jack's colleagues and about 20 parishioners — who were filtering in for the start of the next daily Mass — that the Newton resident had graduated magna cum laude with a biomedical degree from Boston Unversity.

"(Magna cum laude) means you didn't just pass, but that you passed with high honors," Rev. Burke said. "He achieved that honor not only in his academic life but his personal and professional life as well."

Besides his bachelor's degree, Jack earned a master's degree from BU with a thesis that his professor said was "good enough to be submitted as a doctorate," Rev. Burke said. "He was a student who loved to learn and do." Part of his master's degree included teaching undergraduate students about electronic circuits.

Working in the research development lab at both the Waltham and Andover divisions, Jack "brought life to every group he joined," Rev. Burke said. He even dared to joke with the boss.

"We tell ourselves the divine production line must have broken down," the pastor continued. "Why didn't the Lord produce more Jack Lazzaros?"

At one point during his 10-minute homily, Rev. Burke spoke of a priest who — like Jack — was 28 years old, personable and talented when he discovered he was suffering from a fatal disease. "I went to see him in the hospital," the Rev, Burke said. "He told me, 'It's not the quantity of life it's the quality.' He had the peace of mind for knowing and accepting the facts."

When Mass was over, the visitor, noticed a group of about 30 standing in front of the church immersed in the stifling September air, trying to find the peace of mind to accept the fact that Jack would no longer be there when they needed him.

Police, court briefs

Switch blade leads to arrest, charge

NEWTON — Vasska Fondren, of Boston, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment yesterday in Newton District Court on a charge of carrying a dangerous weapon, a switch blade. He was arrested by Newton Police Officer Nils Anderson shortly after midnight Sunday after he allegedly brandished the weapon at the Store 24 on Watertown Street.

Anderson reponded to a report of a fight at the store. Upon arrival, several persons told him Fondren had threatended another person with the switch blade. Anderson searched Fondren, found the weapon and placed him under arrest. A trial was scheduled for Oct. 7.

On probation for carrying dagger, drugs

NEWTON — John M. Kinch, 21, of Newton Highlands, admitted sufficient facts to warrant a guilty finding last week in Newton District Court on charges of carrying a dangerous weapon, a dagger, and possession of marijuana. He was placed on probation for a year and ordered to contribute 100 hours of community service.

Woman sought in theft of groceries

NEWTONVILLE — The manager of the Purity Supreme supermarket on Washington Street reported to police a woman walked out of the store without paying for a bag of groceries. According to police, a store employee followed her out of the store and observed her putting the groceries in the trunk of a car. When the employee confronted her, she denied taking the groceries and drove off.

Crystal, silver stolen from apartment

CHESTNUT HILL — A resident of a Hammond Pond Parkway apartment complex reported the theft of some valuable crystal and silver tableware kept in a basement storage room last week. Taken were 24 champagne and water goblets worth $500, two silver trays worth $1,500 and a silver tree platter worth $100.

Cadillac damaged by would-be thief

Chevy vandalized on Westgate Road

NEWTON CENTRE — A 1981 Chevrolet Monte Carlo parked on Westgate Road sustained damage to the steering column after someone tried to pop the ignition and steal the car, said police. The car's owner, a Hyde Park resident, told police the crime must have occurred between 12:30 a.m. and 8:30 a.m. last Wednesday.

Rock thrown at school bus window

NEWTON — A rock was thrown through the window of a school bus traveling on Jackson Road last week. None of the 15 elementary school children on the bus were hurt. A group of young boys was seen in the area when the crime occurred, said police.

Eight bicycles stolen Friday from store

NEWTON CENTRE — Eight bicycles worth approximately $2,700 were reported stolen from International Bicycle West Friday morning. The owner of the store told police a large rock was thrown through the front door window of the business in order to gain entrance. The bikes taken were a Jetter MT, blue Shogun Special 51, blue Lotou Exelle, black Shogun 300, Shogun Easy Street, Specialized Expedition, blue Fuji Club and a Fuji Delray.

Golf clubs reported stolen at Brae Burn

NEWTON — A golf bag and clubs worth $1,300 were stolen from a Hingham man Friday after he left them leaning against his car while he went back into the Brae Burn Country Club to get his car keys, according to police. The theft occurred around 6 p.m.

New Judge Bohn

By David Weber
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The top figures in the state's legal system, including Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti, appeared in City Hall yesterday afternoon to witness the swearing in of Newton District Court's newest judge, Robert Bohn.

Speaker after speaker praised the governor for his choice of Bohn for the job.

Bohn, a 45-year-old Newton resident, will be coming over to the court from the Middlesex County District Attorney's office, where he was chief of the Public Protection Bureau.

His former boss, District Attorney Scott Harshbarger, called the district courts "the most important level of the court system in the commonwealth... It is where the vast majority of people see justice done or not done."

Bohn is replacing Judge Paul Chernoff, who moved over to the Superior Court about six months ago after sitting in Newton for about eight years. Prior to that, the seat was held by Judge Franklin Flaschner, who was chief justice of the district courts in the commonwealth.

Bellotti told the packed aldermanic chamber that Dukakis' appointments to the district courts "have always been flawless, and this is one of the best." He called the job of district court judge "one of the most important jobs in the world."

Bohn worked under Bellotti in the attorney general's office in the government and civil rights bureaus.

Just prior to swearing him in, Dukakis said, "Bob Bohn is not only a very good lawyer. Bob Bohn cares a lot about people and justice."

After the oath was administered to him by Dukakis, Bohn said he believed being district court judge was a sensitive job because "what is generally treated in the judicial system as a legal matter is often a social matter." He praised the system as being efficient, citing a recently released report from Harshbarger's office that said 95 percent of the criminal matters in Middlesex County were settled in district court.

Bohn's father, Robert Bohn, came from Clinton, Iowa, to watch the ceremony, and the new judge's brother and family were there from Atlanta, Ga. Bohn's two children, Tim, a freshman at Amherst College, and Catherine, a sophomore at Buckingham Browne & Nichols were also present, along with friends and many of the persons who work in the district court system in Newton and Waltham.

A reception with a string quartet and hors d'oeuvres was held in the War Memorial afterward.

Insurance a buffer against estate tax

MONEY TALK$

Neville Frankel is Vice President of Financial Planning Associates Inc., a Boston and New York affiliate of Confidential Planning Network, an international network of more than 120 financial planning firms. Direct questions to Frankel, care of this publication.

Dear Mr. Frankel:

Along with a recent promotion, my husband received additional life insurance as an employee benefit.

Recently, we had our wills redrawn. The attorney suggested that my husband now has more insurance than necessary, and that we should think about surrendering one of the whole life policies he has. But he also says that our estate has increased in size, and that we should consider buying an insurance policy on my life. I have never worked outside our home, and cannot understand what purpose a policy on my life would serve. Can you explain his logic and tell us what to do?

D.B., Watertown

Dear D.B.:

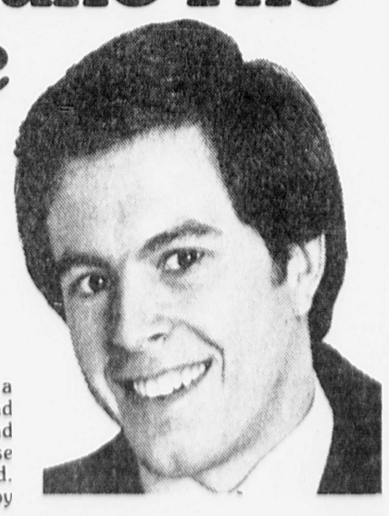

First, the issue of your husband's life insurance. If the invested proceeds of his policies would generate income far in excess of your living expenses, and if the annual premiums seem excessive, he may indeed have more than an optimum amount of insurance. Depending upon the contract, however, his policies may at this point be a good investment.

There are other factors that play a part in this equation, too. What other sources of income would you have in case of his death? How close to being paid up are the whole life policies? And if your husband were to leave his current employer and lose his group insurance, would he still have sufficient coverage? These are some of the factors that should be considered before your husband surrenders any policies.

Now, regarding your own life insurance. The reference to the value of your estate suggests to my lawyer that insurance on your life might be intended to pay any estate tax liability. Your estate plan is probably structured so that if your husband predeceases you, his estate will pass to you, and because of the unlimited marital deduction, will incur no tax. However, on your death there will be a tax on the value of your estate in escess of $400,000 (in 1986 the amount rises to $500,000, and in 1987 and beyond to $600,000). Perhaps the cheapest way to cope with large estate tax bills is to pay them with the proceeds of a life insurance policy. This is probably what your attorney was thinking about.

Here's an idea which may be appliciable in your case. Some life insurance policies carry what is known as a "transfer of insured" option. Such an option might allow your husband to transfer an invididual policy to you, rather than having him surrender one policy and you buying another. If it is available to you, it might be worth thinking about. It may provide a way of insuring your life at considerably lower cost.
